HOW KLAN DRAGON FLEW TO POWER IN INDIANA UPON GOLD-TIPPED WINGS

Court Asher, Faithful Retainer, Laughs at Memory of Followers Kneeling Before D. C. Stephenson.

GOVERNOR DELAYS INQUIRY INTO GRAFT

Keeps Editors From Getting Stephenson Before Inquisitors to Prove or Disprove Accusations.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 9.—ain dragons may be more danger- than healthy ones, and this stly fact is coming with terrific rce just now to the knowledge of publican politicians in Indiana.

D. C. Stephenson, former "grand agon" of the Ku Klux Klan in is State is serving a life sentence the State prison for the murder Miss Madge Oberholtzer, who ok poison after she had been ab- cted and criminally assaulted. ually, a man serving a life term the penitentiary is a fairly safe ne. But there was never anything afe about Stephenson.

Gov. Edward Jackson was easi- convinced that departed dragons tain their venom, apparently, for sooner had a committee of cru- ding Republican editors an- nced that Stephenson had of- red to produce proofs of shock- g corruption in the State gov- nment and the Republican or- ization, than the Governor mped the lid on the prison, and s continued to sit on it with all frenzy and determination which be put into the mere act of sit- g.

The ensuing efforts of the edit- , aided by six State Senators, to access to Stephenson, or to have produced before an impartial isitory body, where his charges ld either be proved or discredit- , has prompted one of the most arkable State scandals of re- t times.

A bizarre figure was this pudgy e man, Stephenson. How he nted and strutted and soared in s brief but fabulous days of his ry, when he had an airplane th gold tipped wings, a yacht ich millionaires would have ized and men whispered to each er: "The old man certainly rries this state in his vest cket." He was the "grand agon" then, with commissions m initiation fees totaling more n $1,500,000 and men of pres- cooled their heels in the ante- m of his spacious offices.

CARDINALS EVEN UP SERIES BY BEATING YANKEES, 10-2

Forecast for Today

Miller Huggins—"I'll pitch Waite Hoyt in the final game of the series. Hoyt won his last game, and though he was hit fairly hard at times, he is the type of pitcher who goes better the second time he faces a club."

Rogers Hornsby—"We will have Haines to face them and if Big Jess is half as good as he was when he gave them a good trouncing in that St. Louis game, the boys at home can start shouting."

John J. McGraw—"It is possible that Huggins will start Hoyt and have Pennock ready or may turn them around the other way. Pennock is said to need a lot of rest, but in a case like this I imagine that he is eager to get in there. A pitching artist like Pennock will always give a good account of himself."

Grover Alexander — "We're hitting now and are going into the final battle with a pitcher who shut out the American League champions in the third game of the series."

Babe Ruth—"The Yankees play their best ball in the pinches. They are strongest when there's something at stake. Watch us go out and win."

J. Roy Stockton, staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch—"Pennock will be used only as a last resort. He needs rest to be at the peak of his power, and he pitched 10 innings on Thursday. But if the Cardinals start to warm the fences, Pennock may be in there."

MORE THAN 200 WIRES OF JOY FOR CARDINALS

Mayor Miller in Telegram to Hornsby Expressed Confidence in Team.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals received more than 200 telegrams from St. Louis fans after today's game, congratulating him and his team on their victory today. It was almost certain that the total number of such messages would be close to 300, as the telegrams were still pouring in at a late hour.

Among them was a wire from Mayor Miller of St. Louis, congratulating the Cardinals and expressing confidence that they would win the championship tomorrow.

Another, from William T. Findly, general secretary of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, was as follows: "Delighted with your splendid victory, which indicates that you will be triumphant in the world series."

Alexander Holds New Yorkers While His Teammates Pound Shawkey, Shocker and Thomas.

HORNSBY DIRECTS LAST-STAND FIGHT

Red Birds Respond With 13 Hits—3 Runs in First Inning—Today's Game Decides Championship.

By J. ROY STOCKTON
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Grover Cleveland Alexander's great right arm and a devastating Cardinal attack that knocked Bob Shawkey out of the box and battered Urban Shocker evened the world series at the Yankee stadium here this afternoon. The official attendance figure was 48,615, the smallest crowd of the three that have witnessed the series games here; the receipts were $169,392, of which $143,983 goes to the clubs and $25,408 to the commissioner.

Rogers Hornsby and his men shot 13 base hits to various sections of the stadium, 13 ringing safeties, including singles, doubles, a triple and home run, and when the firing had ceased the Cardinals were victorious, 10 to 2, and that 10 to 5 defeat suffered at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis had been avenged.

There was no stopping the Cardinals this afternoon. They knew that they were fighting with their backs to the wall.

Hornsby Rallies His Men.

If Hornsby were a Tunney, a man of letters, he might have told them the story of Cyrano de Bergerac, he of the great nose, who found the greater glory the greater were the odds. But Hornsby merely called the boys together and in a few sentences, not highly polished but very expressive, told them they would have to go out there on the field and knock the tar, the stuffing and also the whey out of any pitcher that Miller Huggins sent to the slab.

"If we don't do it today there ain't no more series," said Hornsby, "and there's gotta be some more series. We gotta win today and we gotta win tomorrow. Go out there and fight your heads off and don't concede a thing. Knock the ball down the pitcher's throat. Knock the ball out of the lot, and if a fly ball or a grounder comes your way go and get it."

Holm Leads Off With Single.

The Cardinals responded nobly. Wattie Holm, a substitute, rushed to the battle front at the last moment because Taylor Douthit's arm, injured in the St. Louis collision with Hafey, was too sore to risk sending him back to center field, went up to the plate in the first inning fired with the thought that here was his opportunity. There might be no more and he had to deliver.

Holm did deliver. He fought up there at the plate with Bob Shawkey—a first-year man against a crafty veteran, a man who could look back at three and two-thirds innings of relief pitching without a Cardinal reaching base. But the rookie substitute was greater than the veteran in this fight. Holm shot a single to right and an attack that produced enough runs to beat the Yankees was under way.

Bottomley Scores Southworth.

Southworth forced Holm at second, but Hornsby walked and Bottomley crashed a double down the left field line, scoring Southworth and sending Hornsby to third.

If a substitute could sock a single against Shawkey, so could he, was Lester Bell's attitude as he went to the plate, and he, too, delivered. It was a ringing single to left field that sent Bottomley and Hornsby over the plate.

There were three runs, one more than the Yankees could score in nine innings of the great Alexander. Huggins had said that the Yankees would beat Alexander sure the next time, but Huggins was merely whistling past a graveyard.

Alexander was as much a master of the Yankees today as he was last Sunday when he held them to four hits and ended the game by retiring 21 batters in succession without a Yankee reaching base.

Great Support for Alexander.

Alexander did not have to pitch as hard as in that Sunday game. In that contest the Cardinals did not give such great support with their bats, but this afternoon they battered and pounded Shawkey, and then they slammed and lambasted Shocker, and when Myles Thomas, a recruit, went to the hill they added their tenth run off his delivery.

One of the Yankee runs was produced in the fourth inning

FLEET INSURANCE DENIED FOR PRIVATE AUTOMOBILES

Supt. Hyde Orders Fire Companies to Discontinue Discriminatory Practice.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFERSON CITY, Oct. 9.—State Insurance Superintendent Ben C. Hyde today issued an order prohibiting the inclusion of private passenger automobiles in fleet insurance policies, written by fire insurance companies on fleets of automobiles or trucks operated by transportation or commercial companies. The order, effective at once, follows a recent hearing here on alleged discrimination in rates on fleets and rates on single passenger cars.

He declared it was the custom of some insurance companies, in writing fleet policies, to extend this coverage to private automobiles owned by company officers and employes, at lower rates than they would have to pay otherwise. He declared this was in effect an illegal rebate.

The order affects only fire insurance on automobiles, as the State Insurance Department has no control over theft insurance rates.

MUSSOLINI TAKES ABSOLUTE CONTROL OF GOVERNMENT

Fascist Council Abolishes All Elections in Italy, Centering Every Function of State in Premier.

HE PLEDGES HIS LOYALTY TO KING

Assumes Personal Command of Militia—Demonstrations by His 20,000,000 Followers Arranged.

By Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

ROME, Oct. 9.—The election system, after having been virtually abolished throughgout Italy, now has been abolished within the Fascist party as the result of an all-night session of the Fascist Grand Council. Premier Mussolini is henceforth supreme in his own party. All appointments depend from him and all responsibility pyramid up to him through innumerable state organs, of which he is the ultimate head—trade unions, professional associations, virtually all economic enterprises, the army and the party.

In addition to his offices as Minister of War and Marine, Mussolini today became generalissimo of the national Fascist militia which receives orders from him personally as leader of the party, not as Minister of Armed Forces. Thus every function of state now is concentrated in Mussolini's hands.

By a stroke of his pen Mussolini can do everything which elsewhere must be done by preliminary discussion, conferences, elections and party caucuses.

Pledge of Loyalty to King.

Mussolini in assuming command of the Fascist militia, addressed this message to King Victor Emanuel, assuring him of his personal devotion and that of the army:

"Assuming today the active command of the national militia, my devoted and obedient thoughts address themselves to your majesty, the supreme chief of all the armed forces of the nation. The Black Shirts of all Italy, encased as in iron in their 150 legions, renew their oath of service, and I beg leave to extend to your majesty my own and their respectful homage."

The Premier also addressed the following order of the day to the Fascist militia:

"Officers, Black Shirts: I assume today the direct command of the militia. You undoubtedly understand the purport of this action. The password is as follows: 'Obey with absolute fidelity. Be ready always and everywhere for the defense of the regime which today is the mother country.' Farewell, Prince Gonzaga, intrepid commander, who leaves you. Raise your banners and muskets with the cry of our invincible Fascismo. Viva Fiscismo.'"

Celebrations to Weld the Party.

The Grand Council has prepared elaborate plans to make Oct. 28, the anniversary of the mach on Rome, an imposing spectacle of the strength of Fascism and a tribute to the leadership of Premier Mussolini. The day has been declared a national holiday and all the military and civil forces of Fascismo will be mobilized. These will include thirteen Fascist unions, numbering 20,000,000 citizens. All the forces of Central Italy will meet in Rome, where they will be reviewed by the Premier, who will deliver a speech from the Coliseum. An altar also will be dedicated at the capital to Fascisti who have fallen in struggles against "subversive elements."

There will be imposing manifestations also in each of the chief provinces, from which messages will be sent to Premier Mussolini.

Equally imposing demonstrations will take place Oct. 31 at Bologna, where all Fascist legions of the region will meet to be reviewed by the Premier. Squads of cyclists, carrying messages of devotion to Mussolini, will come from Piedmont, Lombardy and Venice.

154 MEN KILLED BY EXPLOSION

DUNDEE, Natal, South Africa, Oct. 9.—An explosion, thought to have been due to a short circuit, occurred last night in shaft No. 2 of the Durban Navigation Collier at Dannhauser, entombing four Europeans and 150 natives.

The flames, which followed the explosion, were visible for miles and the rescue work was greatly impeded by gas fumes. The men had to wear gas helmets and after all-night efforts only 11 bodies had been brought out—all of them natives. There is small hope of recovering the bodies of the remainder of the entombed men.

HALL-MILLS CASE PROSECUTOR RAIDS HOME OF ACCUSED

Two Fish Knives, Razor and Small Saw Seized by State Agents at Residence of Henry Stevens.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Lavallette (N. J.) home of Henry Stevens, one of four persons under indictment for the murder, at New Brunswick, N. J., four years ago of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and his choir leader, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, was raided for evidence today by Assistant Attorney-General Simpson and his investigators, the New York Herold Tribune will say tomorrow.

According to the story, Simpson declined to explain his purpose, but announced he had seized two fish scaling knives found on the premises. Mrs. Stevens and her sister, Miss H. P. Griffin, were not at home when the raiders arrived, but they appeared before Simpson and his men finished their search.

Mrs. Stevens said that besides the two knives, an old razor and a small saw were missing.

Simpson obtained a search warrant from a Justice of the Peace of Ocean County before entering the Stevens home.

Henry Stevens is a brother of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of the slain rector, and of the eccentric Willie Stevens, all accused of the murders and held for trial at Sommerville, N. J. Henry de la Brugere Carpender, their cousin, is accused with them.

STATES ASKED TO SUPERVISE ROADSIDE BOARDING HOUSES

American Automobile Association Urges Action on Complaints of Touring Motorists.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Complaints by tourists about the food and accommodations given by farmers and boarding houses along the highways have caused the American Automobile Association to call on state health authorities throughout the country to extend supervision to such places in the interests of public safety.

"Ninety nine times out of a hundred," says the association, "the tourist who enters such places has no knowledge whatever of who is running the place, what previous sickness the place may have harbored, or whether he can depend on getting pure food and untainted water."

CONGRESS TO BE URGED TO SEEK HAGUE CONFERENCE

House and Senate Resolutions Will Propose Session to Codify World Law.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—An effort will be made at the coming session of Congress to pass a resolution requesting President Coolidge to propose on behalf of the United States the calling of a third Hague conference for the codification of international law.

Chairman Porter, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said today that as soon as Congress convenes he would move to take up the Tinkham resolution which embodies such a proposal. A similar step will be made in the Senate by Chairman Borah, of the Foreign Relations Committee, who also favors the conference.

GALE LASHES FRENCH COAST

Vessel With South African Notables Aboard Grounds at Bologne.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—With a gale lashing the French Atlantic seaboard, shipping took refuge in the Gironde River today.

The channel steamer, Biarritz, carrying 500 South African visitors on their way to Delville Wood, on the Somme battlefield, grounded at the entrance to the port of Bologne. The passengers were taken off safely. They are to witness the dedication tomorrow by Marshal Joffre of a war shaft in memory of the South African soldiers who fell in action on the Somme. Aboard the ship were the Duke of Connaught, Field Marshal Earl Haig, Gen. Hertzog, the South African premier; and Gens. Byron, Botha and MacKenzie, also of South Africa; Sir William Hoy, director general of the South African railways, and A. W. Smith, high commissioner for the South African Union.

TWO BRITISH LINERS COLLIDE IN GALE NEAR GLASGOW

Both Ships, One With 500 Passengers, Damaged Above Water Line, but Not Detained.

By the Associated Press.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Oct. 9.—Swept by a 70-mile gale and angry seas, the British steamer Aurania today was in collision with the outward bound Caledonia, at Greenock. Both liners were damaged above the water line, but were able to proceed.

The Aurania was calling at Greenock for Scottish passengers bound for Canada when the collision occurred. The 500 passengers on the Caledonia were bidding fair-well to their friends on the pier at the time. The Caledonia took an alarming list, but there was no panic and the vessels separated.

A rapid examination showed that both ships were not damaged below the water line. The Aurania's port bow was dented and 40 feet of the upper deck of the Caledonia was ripped away. The damage, however, was not judged serious enough to detain the liners.

PARIS AMERICAN LEGION POST ASSAILS REPORT OF ANIMOSITY

Informs Headquarters in U. S. That Minor Cases Are Exaggerated to Make Propaganda.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—The Paris Post of the American Legion has adopted a resolution denouncing attempts to depict the French people as anti-American. The resolution has been forwarded to American Legion headquarters on the eve of the Philadelphia convention, where plans for holding the 1927 convention in Paris will come under discussion.

The resolution criticises "propaganda which, by taking advantage of and exaggerating a few sporadic actions of irresponsible persons against foreigners in general and not against Americans in particular, is seeking to create an impression in the United States that there is a feeling of animosity against Americans."

The resolution, however, does not recommend that the plans to hold the 1927 convention of the Legion in Paris be carried out or postponed. It merely concludes: "No propaganda * * * shall ever succeed in severing or straining the strong cordialities that bind

"SIAMESE TWINS" DIE

Two Girls, 4 Months Old, Succumb After One Gets Pneumonia.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 9.—Lucy and Bessie Medich, four-months-old "Siamese twins," died tonight at a hospital, where they had been undergoing treatment, when Lucy contracted bronchial pneumonia. Lucy failed to survive the attack and Bessie died a few minutes later.

The twins, born to Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Medich at South Bend, Ind., May 22, were brought to Minneapolis several weeks ago when the parents moved here. Physicians of the Hennepin County Medical Society, who examined the children, stated that there was no other case on record of twins joined in such a manner. They were joined at the hips so that the body of one was a prolongation of the body of the other.

OUT 25 HOURS, COURT INSTRUCTS IT TO CONTINUE DELIBERATIONS

Jurors Retire for Night After Receiving Decision of Judge Mack, Whom They Summoned at 10:40 P. M.,

HAD TWICE ASKED FOR INFORMATION

Presented Questions as to Bank Records Daugherty Burned and Called for Certain Exhibits.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The jury in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy case at 10:40 o'clock tonight reported its inability to agree, but was ordered to return to the jury room for further deliberation. At the time of its report, the case had been in its hands for 25 hours.

In telling the jurors he could not accept their disagreement as final, Judge Mack said they might retire for the night as soon as they liked. He said he would be at their disposal to hear a verdict at any time after 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Judge, counsel and defendants then returned to the homes and hotels from which they were called when the jury gave up hope of coming to any agreement.

A few minutes after they had returned to the jury room the jurors were marched to a bus and driven to their hotel.

When it was suggested that the jury return a verdict Sunday, if it succeeded in arriving at one, the question of its legality was raised.

Judge Mack said that he was not positive but that he assumed it would be legal. Federal Attorney Emery R. Buckner, who prosecuted the case, likewise said he did not know, but his opinion was that a Sunday verdict would be regular in the eyes of the law.

Definition of a Conspiracy.

Judge Mack, in response to a request by one of the jurors, explained the meaning of the word "conspiracy," as applied legally.

"If two men," said Judge Mack, "have an understanding with each other as to what to do or not to do, that is the essence of conspiracy—nothing more or less than an agreement or understanding. It need not be in writing nor in words, but it must be an understanding."

Asked by a juror if a conspiracy must relate to specific acts or only a "general understanding," Judge Mack said that a general understanding as to illegal acts might constitute a conspiracy.

On the request of another juror, the court ordered read the testimony relating to the late Jesse Smith's alleged close association with Daugherty. The government contends that Smith was an influence in obtaining release of the $7,000,000 for which the late John T. King, once a power in republican politics, was paid $441,000. The government alleges that Daugherty and Miller shared in this fund.

At 10:10 p. m. the jury asked that the Clerk of the Court telephone a question to the Judge at his home, and the answer carried back to the jury room. The nature of the question was not revealed.

Shortly afterward a call was sent for the Judge, counsel, defendants and court stenographers to go to the courtroom at once.

Twice the jury had requested exhibits and a more complete interpretation by the bench of knotty problems.

The jury announced at 6:30 that there was no immediate prospect of a verdict and went to a leisurely dinner, returning at 8 p. m.

The jury received the case at 9:42 o'clock last night.

Query As to Burned Papers.

After seven hours in actual deliberation, the jurors shortly before 4 o'clock this afternoon asked for information on certain points, among which were: "What records did Harry Daugherty burn?" "What records are missing?" and "What records of Harry Daugh-

ST. LOUIS RENEWS CELEBRATION OVER ITS THIRD TRIUMPH

Again Paper Snow Flutters From Office Windows, Fans Yell After Victory for Cardinals.

BETTORS WHO LOST HAUL 2 TOY CARTS

Radio Carries Good News to Anxious Crowds Through Hundreds of Loud Speakers.

The Cardinals, in beating the Yankees in New York yesterday, not only evened up the world series and made a seventh game necessary to decide the championship, but they caused a renewal, in St. Louis, although in a lesser degree, of that mad enthusiasm which began when the Cardinals won the National League pennant and reached its peak when the Cardinals came home last Monday to battle with Babe Ruth and the other American League champions at Sportsman's Park.

When the last Yankee player was put out in the ninth inning, and the news of the Cardinal victory was announced by Graham McNamee through KSD, the Post-Dispatch radio station, a great hurrah went up. The more jubilant tossed hats into the air, others made themselves hoarse yelling.

Paper Snows From Windows.

From office windows snowed paper. Throughout the afternoon as the Cardinals' advantage over the Yankees grew bigger and bigger, strips of paper had fluttered from office windows, but the paper "storm" was reserved until victory was certain. Much good white paper had been torn into confetti for the occasion. The smaller pieces came to rest eventually in gutters, but the streamers graced the trolley wires.

Someone set fire to paper in a gutter at Eighth and Olive streets but the blaze was extinguished before it had spread far.

Hardware stores did good business. Cardinal buttons, canes, pennants and emblems sold like hotcakes. Noisemakers were in demand. A practical youth bought two light fryin pans and banged one against the other.

An automobile owner, of course, has no need for frying pans and there was no lack of horn-blowing and back-firing.

Freak Bets Paid Off.

A few freak bets were paid off. It appeared there were at least two men in St. Louis who expected the Yankees to win. They were good sports nevertheless and after the game they pulled two roller wagons through downtown streets. The two men who had picked the Cardinals to win rode in the wagons. One carried a red umbrella.

Later in the evening Grand and Olive competed with downtown in the production of noise and general allround hilarity.

During yesterday's game, throngs gathered in Olive, Locust, Pine, Market, Washington and in the side streets to hear the scores by radio. Several thousand adults and juveniles, the largest crowd of all, jammed Olive street between Eighth and Ninth, and overflowed into the Federal Building. The reports here came by radio and were relayed through a megaphone by a self-styled "bull-voiced announcer."

Radio Sets in Offices.

In many offices and factories the employes had radio sets operating, and did not have to leave the buildings to find out what was going on at the Yankee Stadium in New York. In the retail sections farther west, north and south, loudspeakers were speaking to proprietors, customers and passersby. And in thousands of homes Thevenow singled, Southworth doubled and Bell homered all afternoon.

McNamee, the Cardinals and Yankees will be on the air again over KSD today.

SCHOOLEY'S BOND IN HOLDUP CASE, $25,000

Attorney of St. Louis County Bound Over for Festus, Mo., Bank Robbery.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HILLSBORO, Mo., Oct. 9.—Trial of Roy Schooley, St. Louis County Attorney and politician, and three others, charged with the $26,525 robbery of the Citizens' Bank of Festus, Mo., probably will be held here in January. After the preliminary hearing yesterday, Schooley and his frequent companion, Francis M. Ball, were bound over to the Circuit Court and were returned to jail, unable to furnish bonds of $25,000 and $15,000, respectively.

It was expected that St. Louis County bondsmen with sufficient qualifications will be lined up this evening so that Schooley can be released late tonight or tomorrow. Ball expects that well-to-do relatives at Jonesburg, Mo., will come to his rescue by Tuesday morning.

At the hearing, held before Justice of the Peace Phil Reilly, Schooley, Ball and Fred Weingartner of St. Louis were held on charges of first-degree robbery. Weingartner's bond, however, was set at only $3000, which he furnished. It is expected the charge against him will be reduced to one of being an accessory before the fact.

Smith Waives Hearing.

The fourth man, Frank R. Smith, an ex-convict, waived preliminary hearing when arraigned last Monday. Authorities say he has confessed and promise to turn State's evidence. Three other men, said to have been named by Smith, are being sought. Charges of robbery against the wives of Ball and Weingartner, who are sisters, were dropped yesterday by Porsecuting Attorney Berkley.

There were seven witnesses on the stand today, none of whom could identify any of the prisoners, although Schooley was identified by two witnesses yesterday as one of the robbers. Ball was not identified as a robber, but was pointed out as a man who made inquiries at the bank the day before it was robbed. Weingartner is not supposed to have taken an active part in the robbery.

Sheriff Ray Williams of Jefferson County and City Detective Robert J. Bourland of St. Louis were examined today, mainly on circumstances surrounding the arrests. Charles E. Porter, cashier of the bank, was recalled, to testify that $3608 of the $8350 cash stolen had been recovered, and that all of the bonds, $18,175 worth, were now in the bank's possession.

Miss Viola Roth, a bank bookkeeper, was called, but could not identify anyone and was followed by Christ Miller, a farmer of House Springs, whose machine was crowded from the road during a running pistol battle during the flight of the robbers. The crowded courtroom burst into laughter when he

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT SUED BY EX-HUSBAND OF DANCER

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—A suit against Frank Lloyd Wright, architect, charging him with alienating the affections of his daughter and of Olga Milanoff, Montenegrin dancer, was filed today here by Waldemar Hinzenberg, former husband of Mlle. Milanoff. He asks $250,000 damages. The daughter mentioned in the petition is Svetlana, 9-year-old child of Hinzenburg and Mlle. Milanoff.

Wright is supposed to have gone to Mexico after he and Mlle. Milanoff fled from his Spring Green, Wis., estate when warrants and summons in the legal action by Mrs. Miriam Noel Wright were issued against them.

Mrs. Wright has a $100,000 suit pending against Olga, there also are warrants making a criminal charge against Wright and the dancer.

How Klan 'Dragon' Rose to Power in Indiana

$10. Sign on the dotted line, and become a knight errant, charged with glamorous missions in defense of chivalry and nordic civilization."

From Terre Haute to Lake Michigan they signed up the plowhands, the village store clerks, the garage mechanics, and the petty merchants. They signed up, and out of each $10, the grandiose little man in the mahogany suite in the Kresge building got $4.

Soon legends began to circulate about him. The wondering, popeyed yokels in the backwater towns who had paid their fees and bought their regalia, began to hear of one who was called "The old man." Vast and terrible powers were attributed to him. Then he began to appear at their konklaves — a short, sturdy figure in a gown of blazing yellow, on which was embroidered the sombre design of the black dragon.

He inflamed them with a torrent of words. Not always were the words coherent, but they were loud and passionate and left the impression that an awful peril was advancing upon their backwoods Protestant homes. This peril was the Pope. From the little thick man in the yellow robe they heard vague but dire hints of great monasteries rising on the heights about Washington, of stone basilicas upon which cannon could be instantly mounted so as to command the Capitol, the White House and the War and Navy Buildings. To the thousands who had never been further than Kokomo or Evansville these pictures were full of a dreadful reality.

Stephenson's Share $1,600,000

Laugh if you like, but by the last of 1923 more than 400,000 persons living in the State of Indiana had taken the oath, and "the Old Man" had received approximately $1,600,000 in commissions. That was nothing to laugh about, although some of those who called him "the Old Man" might have smiled at themselves had they known he was then 32 years old.

He bought a yacht, and kept it on Lake Michigan. He bought a fine airplane, painted the wings with gilt, and had one of his trusted kleagles learn to operate it. This kleagle was Court Asher, a dour, silent, black-browed individual who had been convicted of bootlegging on numerous occasions, but who was fearless and shrewd, and could use an automatic. Kleagle, pilot, bodyguard, chauffeur and man Friday, was this Asher. His master threw good things his way, and the many to whom "The Old Man" threw fruity crumbs, Asher has remained most faithful.

"Sure he made me a 'kleagle,'" he said to the writer yesterday. "I guess you don't understand the klan. The 'grand dragon' is like the Governor, the 'cyclops' is like the Mayor, only he has the whole county instead of just one town, and the 'klaliffs' come in somewhere between them. I never could quite figure where them 'klaliffs' stood. A 'kleagle' was a free lance. He was the guy that spread the bunk and collected the jack. That's what I was."

"A Message From the Klouds."

Asher described with grim humor the spectacular descent which he and Stephenson made upon the great konklave held at Kokomo in 1923. It is estimated that 100,000 klansmen and klanswomen had gathered for this solemn event. From Evansville, Asher and Stephenson had flown in the gold-winged plane to a konklave in St. Louis County, Missouri. He thought it was near Kinloch Park, but wasn't sure. He remembered it wasn't much of a konklave.

Meantime the word had been circulated at Kokomo that the konklave there would receive "a message from the klouds." Cryptic banners announcing a great event were flung to the air. "The old man is coming," was the whisper.

At the appointed hour, the gilt-tipped plane came roaring down out of the Southern skies, and the vast field of hooded figures were silent, until they saw the blazoned "K. K. K." on the underside of the fuselage. A terrific yell rent the air. Lower circled the plane and landed. From the observer's seat leaped a short, stout figure in brilliant yellow silk, and a hand was flung upward in a dynamic gesture of greeting.

Followers on Their Knees.

"Well," said Asher, "you would have thought it was the second coming of Christ. I never seen anything like it. As far as you could see, them klansmen was standing like they was paralyzed. Then they began hollering, 'The Old Man, it's the Old Man.' Lots of them fell on their knees right there on the field. Some of them stretched out their arms to him like they was praying. It was the damnedest thing I ever saw.

"But do you think it feazed that guy? Not a minute. You'd have thought he was the Holy Ghost himself, the way he stalked up on that platform, and held out his arms over that gang.

"Then he began to talk. Didn't you ever hear him? God, he was a whirlwind. I used to steal some of his stuff to use on prospects I was lining up. As well I knew his bunk, I couldn't help believing it myself sometimes, the guy was that eloquent. You would think the Pope was likely to sneak in through the window some night and murder your whole family, to hear Stove tell it. And how them hicks did eat it up. If he had told them to sprout wings and fly, half of them would have tried it."

But while the pudgy little man was thus occasionally playing yellow knight in his personally constructed wonderland, he was spending most of his time in his mahogany suite, capitalizing on his magical ways. Under the yellow robe beat the heat of a business man. As the story now goes, and is generally accepted, Stephenson arose to political power by parallel ladders, both planted on the klan; one of them was his influence with the vast army of klan voters, the other his contributions to the campaign funds of various candidates. He was able to make these contributions because of all those $4 commissions he had collected. In brief, he controlled a lot of votes, and he had a lot of money. That's all it takes to make a boss.

Originaly, in Evansville, Stephenson had been a Democrat. But he was salesman enough to realize that Democracy was not a good line just then, in a territory that was saturated with Coolidge "Caution and Prosperity." So he became a Republican, and the klan became almost indistinguishable from the Republican organization.

That he was then the most formidable political boss in the State is now undisputed.

Putting Through His Slate.

He backed Ed Jackson for the Republican nomination for Governor, and Jackson was nominated and elected. He hand-picked a slate for the Legislature, and of the 100 Representatives and 50 Senators who were elected, 67 Representatives and 19 Senators carried his indorsement. He bought a great house on University avenue, and it was sometimes called "The Third House of the Indiana General Assembly."

Reports of graft during the session of the Legislature which opened in January, 1925, were numerous, and Stephenson's name was often connected with them. After a disagreement with "Imperial Wizard" Hiram Evans, he had been formally ousted from his post as "grand dragon." But so firmly was Stephenson entrenched in the loyalties of klansmen, and so influential and wealthy had he become, that in fact, if not in name, he continued to be the head of the klan in Indiana.

Various bills were introduced in the Legislature, some for no apparent reason except to annoy large corporations. After a while they would be killed, and the wiseacres would whisper.

Stephenson resurrected the ancient law authorizing the existence of anti-horse-thief detectives, and under it organized a veritable klan army of "horse-thief detectives," all with the power to carry weapons and make arrests. Two of the busiest activities of the detectives consisted in making liquor raids, and in surprising the occupants of automobiles that were parked on country roads. The klan had indorsed many judges and justices of the peace in their campaigns and had no difficulty in getting search warrants.

A sane and dispassionate gaze at that period of Indiana history leaves the distinct impression that constitutional government in the State was practically superseded by an invisible government.

When United States Senator Ralston died, Gov. Jackson had to appoint a successor. He appointed Arthur Robinson, an Indianapolis lawyer, who had been Stephenson's counsel in civil actions. Stephenson let it be known also that he would support the other Republican Senator, the veteran James E. Watson, for renomination and reelection. The man who had formally succeeded Stephenson as "grand dragon" came out against Watson and "Wizard" Evans at once deposed him and appointed a Watson klansman to the post.

Stephenson's name became a legend of power, and—to the minority who were wretched over this condition—a symbol of graft.

The Oberholtzer Murder.

But the little man could not restrain himself.

There was a pretty, dark-eyed girl named Madge Oberholtzer, to whom, it is said, Stephenson had been introduced at the Governor's inaugural ball. Certainly both were there as invited guests. One night in 1925 he summoned her to his home on a plea of urgency, drugged her, placed her in a Pullman drawing room for Hammond, and unloosed the bestiality that lay beneath his sunny smile and persuasive patter.

From a hotel in Hammond she staggered to a drug store, obtained and swallowed 28 poison tablets. The disclosure sobered Stephenson. Accompanied by his two bodyguards, he took the girl back to Indianapolis, allowed her to lie in his garage half the night, and as morning arrived, thrust her, reeling and dying, through the door of her parents' home.

For once he had overplayed his hand. Indiana, apathetic to the downfall of constitutional government, responded now to the spectacle of a sadistic and fatal assault upon a woman. Madge's dying statements were taken, and Stephenson was indicted, on the testimony of a physician that the savage atrocities inflicted upon her might have caused her death regardless of poison. But even then there were plenty to forecast that Stephenson could not be convicted.

To the sobbing threats of Madge Oberholtzer, smothered and weeping under a Pullman pillow, he had snarled:

"I am the law in Indiana."

The little man was shrewd; he had well appraised the weakness of officials, but now he had made a mistake. At least, he had failed to distinguish between the law of the State and the conscience of the people. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. He did not go without a fight. Of wires pulled, of collections taken up among public officials whom Stephenson had "made," of conspiracies to corrupt courts and defeat justice, one still hears plenty. But Stephenson had encountered that all-too-rare obstacle—a fearless and incorruptible Judge, Will H. Parks.

The Fox Turns Wolf.

Thus a year ago he went to the gloomy prison at Michigan City and began making chairs. He who had sat in the seats of the might, began making chairs for farmhouse kitchens. But the cunning brain still functioned. The fox became a wolf. There were underworld characters who remained more faithful than the powerful and respectable persons who had been eager for "the old man's" smile.

In the days of his greatness one of the bills introduced in the Legislature was aimed at the abolition of the existing highway commission, with which Gov. Jackson had quarreled because it would not discharge its executive director, John G. Williams, and the appointment of one that would be more amenable to the Governor's wishes.

The highway commission governed the expenditure of $15,000,000 a year. The bill was lost through the opposition of anti-klan members of the State Senate. But soon Williams and a Democratic member of the commission were indicted, on the curious charge that they had sold some envils and hammers to a junk dealer. These cases have never been called to trial.

Indiana has a Republican Editorial Association, composed of the editors of 19 Republican newspapers, all outside Indianapolis. A committee of the Association, while examining transportation routes, made an inquiry into the Williams indictment. The head of this committee was Thomas Adams, owner and editor of the Vincennes Commercial, the oldest newspaper in the State. Adams is in his sixties, but he is a great, shaggy monument of a man, full of vigor and combativeness. He announced that he believed Williams had been "framed."

History of the Inquiry.

That was the beginning of an investigation by the committee headed by Adams, which resulted several months ago in an invitation extended by the association to Gov Jackson, to hear what had been discovered. He was told that evidence of corruption in the State Government had been found, and was asked to make on investigation. The Governor listened, and said he was certain no investigation was necessary.

Adams then began to investigate in deadly earnest. Sept. 28 he made announcement that he had collected wholesale evidence of graft in the State Government and in the Republican organization generally. From Gov. Jackson and Senators Watson and Robinson, came only silence.

Eight days ago Adams and his committee invited six members of the State Senate, three Republicans and three Democrats, to meet with them and hear this evidence. The Senators complied, and emerged with the statement that there was urgent need of an investigation. From the Governor and the Senators, heads of the party under fire, came more silence.

Early this week the shaggy old editor exploded a bomb. He made public a letter from Stephenson, smuggled from the prison through Asher. In it the writer declared that he had been a party to an incredible volume of corruption, and that he was ready to produce from its hiding place a mass of documentary evidence in the form of contracts, memoranda and canceled checks which would support his statements.

He said he had put up money for campaign funds, under the agreement to lose it if the candidate won. He said he had advanced $275,000 for one candidate. He said he had copies of contracts which he had signed with various officials, pledging them to repay him in money and favors for his support. He said he had many canceled checks. It was a staggering list that he recited.

Duvall Sues for $1,000,000.

Adams produced what appeared to be a photostat copy of two documents signed with the name of J. C. Duvall, Republican klan Mayor of Indianapolis. One, which was incriminating on its face, was pronounced a forgery by Duvall. The other, which showed an intimate acquaintance between Duvall and Stephenson, he admitted to be authentic. Yesterday he filed suit for $1,000,000 against Adams and newspapers which published facsimiles of the first document.

Day after day the Editor's Committee and the six Senators hammered at Gov. Jackson to admit them to Stephenson, or to allow him to appear before an impartial inquisitory body. Day after day Warden Daly, the Governor's appointee, has barred the doors. Public clamor reached a deafening stage. Finally, Thursday night, the Governor and Senators Watson and Robinson announced that they favored a "full and frank" investigation. But none of them said how, or when, or by whom, and the lid on Stephenson has remained tight.

Warden Defies Court Order.

A ruse was conceived. Stephenson was the defendant in a receivership suit, and a judgment had been rendered against him. An order was obtained from Judge Miller of Superior Court, to have him produced in the court. While a deputy was on his way to the prison to serve it, Attorney-General Gilliom, a member of the Jackson administration, and a candidate for re-election, informed Daly by long distance telephone that he was not legally compelled to honor the order. Daly accordingly defied it. What the Judge who issued it will do may be known tomorrow.

Adams will keep up his fight. There are rumors that Jackson will appoint a committee, which action Adams says would be tantamount to the Governor's investigating himself. Adams and his committee would be satisfied with any one of the following dispositions:

An investigation by the United States Senate Committee, of which Senator James A. Reed is chairman, which uncovered rottenness in the Illinois and Pennsylvania primaries.

An investigation by a select committee of the Indiana Senate, to be called into special session by the Governor for that purpose.

A grand jury investigation directed by special prosecutors to be chosen by the editors.

A thorough and public interview of Stephenson by the Editors' Committee and the six State Senators, with newspaper reporters and a stenographer present.

The ghosts of slain dragons are sometimes reported to return to plague those who have abandoned them in their hours of need. In the case of particularly clever drangons, such as "The Old Man" was, the amount of pain and terror which the ghosts can impart is said to be almost incredible. And so it is in Indiana, in the weird day, of the woeful week, of et cetera.

Gov. Jackson Promises to Choose Inquisitors Monday.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 9.—Warden Walter H. Daly today at the State Prison refused to honor a court order to take Stephenson to Indianapolis to testify in a receivership suit involving a tailoring company in which he was financially interested. It was alleged he had failed to satisfy a judgment rendered against him. It was considered a possibility that if he were taken into court for questioning as to his ability to pay the judgment, he migh produce the promissory notes from high public officials which he is alleged to hold.

Gov. Jackson, before leaving for Madison, Ind., where he was to make an address, said upon his return Monday he would select a committee to inquire into Adams' charges.

John L. Duvall, Mayor of Indianapolis, today began suit for $1,000,000 damages against seven newspapers and several individuals charging that he had been damaged by publication of a photostatic copy of a letter which purported to be a communication from Duvall to Stephenson promising to submit certain appointments to the ex-klan leader for approval in return for Stephenson's political support. The signature on the letter is a forgery, Duvall asserts.

The newspapers named are the Chicago Tribune and the following Indiana papers: Indianapolis Times, Rushville Republican, Huntington Herald, Richmond Palladium, Vincennes Commercial and Anderson Herald. Individuals sued are Thomas H. Adams and Chester Adams, publishers of the Vincennes Commercial; William O. Feudner, publisher of the Rushville paper; Walter Ball, Huntington editor; D. C. Stephenson and Court Asher. Asher is an associate of Stephenson and has been assisting in the Adams investigation.

Federal Inquiry Not Directed Against Ku Klux Klan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Department of Justice officials tonight denied that John Moroney, agent of its Bureau of Investigation, had been ordered from Washington to interview D. C. Stephenson, and declared if any such order had been given, it was issued by J. E. Bayliss, the department's agent in charge of the Indianapolis office.

(Moroney interviewed Stephenson at the Michigan City, Ind., prison today but said he learned nothing from him not already published.)

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, declared that if Moroney or any other department agent were active in the Indiana investigation, it was purely to protect the interests of the Federal Government and had no direct bearing on Ku Klux Klan activities. He said he had not ordered his operatives to take a hand in the investigation demanded by Thomas H. Adams of Vincennes, but indicated he approved such action if Federal property were involved.

Within the last two months, the department has investigated th tivities of the Indiana State way Commission regarding the and disposal of war supplie though several State indict were returned against some m bers of the commission, no F charges were preferred. LIVELY CAMPAIGN FOR THE MERGER IN FINAL TWO WEEKS

Chamber of Commerce Committee Will Answer Arguments and Present Views in Favor.

VOTERS TO PASS ON QUESTION OCT. 26

City Voters Expected to Approve Merger and Fight Will Be in County, Where Meetings Are Planned.

Two weeks from Tuesday, on Oct. 26, the voters of St. Louis and St. Louis County will determine whether the two territories shall be merged as one municipality under the city's charter for the present welfare and future development of the community, or whether the proposition up for approval shall be rejected as unsuitable for the unquestioned needs of the metropolitan district.

It is an ambitious scheme, but one which proponents hold to be fully justified by modern conditions and ample in its provisions to meet the numerous and varied problems involved. For the county, it would wipe out the antiquated form of county government, thickly settled unincorporated areas, the unco-ordinated suburbs and school districts and put the dwindling farm section under municipal control.

For the city it would eliminate the hampering political boundary, which expansion of the residential and industrial districts has ignored, and extend the limits to the extreme natural geographical line, and it would permit harmonious planning of the community's physical growth, improve health protection and allow of expansion of the social services of the modern municipality.

No Opposition in City.

There are objections to the proposition to be voted on, which was prepared by the city members of the Board of Freeholders and signed by them and one county member. Scarcely any objections have been voiced in the city, where there is no organized opposition to the merger.

The organized opposition lies in the County, but by no means all of the county voters are "antis." While opponents there are claiming victory, proponents expect to carry the county by probably a small majority, especially since the campaign in support of the consolidation has been given leadership by the creation Friday of the new Greater St. Louis Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Several months ago the County Committee Opposed to Annexation was organized and started an active campaign. B. F. Bush, former president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, whose home is in the city but who has a farm near Creve Coeur Lake, is its chairman. A member of the Webster Groves School Board heads its campaign committee. Some of the county freeholders, who oppose this merger scheme, have been co-operating with it. Many meetings have been held under its auspices and it has distributed many pamphlets. Many men holding salaried and non-salaried public offices in the county have espoused the committee's cause.

Proponents Started Late.

The proponents did not get a centralized organization going in the early stages. The Greater St. Louis Conference, where the present proposal owes its origin, due to the interest of Chairman Hugh Wagner, has been the source of some support. The County Annexation League, with Joseph shaw as president, has been carrying on a steady drive in the suburbs, as has the Greater St. Louis Club for County Women under the direction of Mrs. T. Walter dy and Miss Adela J. Niesen. Recently the City-County Consolidation Committee has been active, largely through the press.

Finally the Chamber of Commerce, which had supported the constitutional amendment enabling appointment of the Board of Freeholders, was spurred to action and now its Greater St. Louis Committee, with former Circuit Judge Samuel Rosenfeld as chairman, is preparing an intensive campaign, devoting particular attention to the county, to answer the arguments of opponents and present those in favor of merger.

Election Board's Assurance.

Proponents are disregarding the [illegible] of possible disfranchisement of county voters in the November election, regarding this as propaganda emanating from the "antis." They have obtained the assurance of the City Election Board, which would be in charge throughout the territory if the merger is approved, that county voters would be allowed to cast ballots as city voters.

A series of meetings throughout the county is planned by the Greater St. Louis Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, in co-operation with the other organizations on its side. Among citizens who have signified their intention to serve as speakers are Mayor Miller, former Mayor Kiel, Henry S. field, Dwight D. Currie, Hugh Wagner, Peter Barrett, Thomas nnon, Joseph Forshaw, J. F. eller and Walter Hays.

EXPERIENCE OF PHILADELPHIA UPSETS ARGUMENTS AGAINST MERGER OF CITY AND COUNTY

City, Suburban and Farm Property Each in Different Class for Taxation — Farmer Chief Beneficiary by Consolidation.

THE following article describes the experience of Philadelphia, which annexed a large area, including farm lands, and where taxation has been worked out equitably among three classes of property—city, suburban and farm lands.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—Echoes of the arguments between the proponents and opponents of the contemplated merger of St. Louis and St. Louis County might well be said to have reverberated at a recent hearing in the Montgomery County Court House at Norristown, Pa. The case at issue was whether the Borough of Rockledge, Montgomery County, should be permitted to demit and become affiliated with the City of Philadelphia, which it immediately adjoins.

The arguments for and against the annexation hinged on the question of taxes. Sentiment played no part in it. The 300-odd property owners of Rockledge were anxious to pay the higher taxes assessed in Philadelphia so as to escape from the shadow of a bonded indebtedness of several hundred thousand dollars about to be forced on them by the State government. They had been ordered to provide for the children of the borough standard school facilities and faced an almost impossible problem in financing.

Court Considers Question.

Against the proposed annexation or affiliation the officials of Montgomery County argued that the county treasury would be deprived of the taxes paid by the borough of Rockledge. That was its principal plaint, but it also entered as a sidelight that approval of the Rockledge - Philadelphia annexation proposal would mean that taxpayers of other boroughs adjoining Philadelphia could simply sign an agreement to divorce themselves from Montgomery and enter the Philadelphia family. The court is still studying the case.

Aside from satisfying the ambitions of citizens who wish to keep Philadelphia the third city in size in the United States there is little to be gained from the annexation of small boroughs, according to tax officials. The benefit is altogether with the absorbed communities which enjoy better streets, lighting, and many services provided on a limited scale in the boroughs.

Fear of High Taxes Dispelled.

The arguments of the St. Louis County anti-merger group as understood here have all been disproved in Philadelphia. Their fear of higher taxes on farm lands are knocked into a cocked hat by the fact that within the boundaries of the city of Philadelphia there are thousands of acres of land which are worked profitably by farmers who operate dairies and intensive gardening as well as raise ordinary hay, grain and corn crops. They are able to do this because of the comparatively low taxes assesssed against their property.

For example, a city residence assessed at $10,000 calls for a total annual tax payment of $270, and a suburban residence of the same valuation $211.40, while a farm of $10,000 assessment is taxed at the vastly lower figure of $182.50.

The difference in taxes is worked out by variable tax rates per $100 valuation. For example, the city rate is $1.75, the suburban rate $1.16½ and the farm rate 87½ cents. The school tax is added to these figures. It is constant for all classes at 95 cents.

Farmers Reap Benefit.

When farms are cut up into developments for home building and sewers are built, gas mains extended, the city rate is assessed. The farmers are richly rewarded for waiting until the city builds out to them.

The St. Louis countians should be thankful they are not living in Pennsylvania, where the city politicians in three months can maneuver more magic legisation at the State capital than a thousand lawyers can interpret in many years. Instead, they are dealing with Missourians, well known for their square shooting. Were they in Pennsylvania they would wake up some fine morning and find that they had been legislated into the city of St. Louis by a deftly turned phrase in an amendment to the bill appropriating State funds for the principal highway through the county.

It has been the history of large cities that the agricultural communities in the radius immediately adjacent waxed rich and populous. It is the trend of the times. The word "city" has a magic effect upon the urban dweller. He will build a home amongst the tall trees on the furthest outlying avenue so long as he is comforted by the knowledge that he can walk down Main street and feel that the town is partly his by right of nativity.

The farmer is the first to benefit by the increased populations of large centers. With the boulevards which follow the laying out of developments come the thousands of suburbanites in their automobiles for all and more than the agriculturist can produce and he gets top prices. So much for the economic factor in the situation.

Politicians No Menace.

So far as politics is concerned, the farmer who is up to date has nothing to worry about regarding the city politician. In fact, the politician has a wholesome respect for the man who is on his own land, such as the farmer.

The American Society of Civil Engineers, at its convention in this city, has discussed seriously the city planning of the future. The consensus of opinion, according to the addresses of leaders, indicates a definite trend toward expansion in building instead of concentration. The engineers are a unit in demanding that more light and air shall be considered in all plans, whether for factory, office or dwelling structure. The high building also came in for a share of condemnation. This may be taken as a forecast of the laying out of cities on the Los Angeles plan by the square mile, over hills and mountains as well as lowlands.

The pressure of population in the large cities is rapidly approaching the safety point. There must be relief. That can come only through expansion, and intelligent planning can be accomplished only through co-ordinated effort. This means that the city of 1946 will have 40-mile boulevards, beautifully landscaped, homes instead of gas-filled canyons between brick and cement piles used as apartments, where the sound of children's voices are weak and sad.

The city planners of the future must be men with vision. These men must have room; they must have co-operation; effort must be co-ordinated. They will build cities such as the world has never seen. Of these who have been the stumbling blocks in the path of civilization history records little, but the men who have done the big things in a spirit of helpfulness are revered.

New York's Experience.

The City of New York has developed by leaps and bounds since the boundaries were extended to include Brooklyn, Staten Island and other outlying sections. The result has been greater comfort in many things, but more especially in street railway transportation. Thirty years ago it was necessary to take a car on the New York side and ride across the Brooklyn Bridge. On the Brooklyn end one had to change to an elevated line and to reach Coney Island another change had to be made at Long Island City. Today the subways will take one from anywhere in Manhattan to nearly all parts of Brooklyn. All this has come about only through a consolidated government. Many other benefits may be cited to show the advantages of such expansion not only to the individual but to business as well. A subway is under construction from Staten Island to Brooklyn which will permit many thousands of people to live in the open spaces and ride through the length of Manhattan without change.

CARDINALS EVEN UP SERIES WITH 10-TO-2 VICTORY

when Meusel led off with a smash down the third base line. The ball caromed off the wall of the field boxes and evaded Hafey and was good for a triple.

Meusel scored on an infield out, but that was all, for the Cardinals quickly restored their lead to three runs by counting their fourth tally in the fifth on Thevenow's single, Alexander's sacrifice and Holm's single—another pinch hit by the substitute who had been rushed into the battle at the last moment.

Shawkey Knocked Off Hill.

Shawkey was knocked from the hill in the seventh inning. Thevenow started this rally with a single to left and Alexander was safe on his intended sacrifice when Lazzeri muffed Severeid's throw to first.

Holm bunted and forced Thevenow at third, but Southworth lined a double over Meusel's head, Meusel losing the ball in the glaring sun, and Alexander scored and Holm reached third. Hornsby punched a single over second, out of reach of the indrawn infield and Holm and Southworth scored.

Southworth's double had sent Shawkey to the showers. Hornsby's hit was made off Shocker, the smiling thrower of curves moistened with saliva. Bottomley forced Hornsby at second, but just as Shocker was beginning to think that he had the rally checked Bell hit the ball so hard it fell in the faraway left field seats and Bottomley trotted over the plate ahead of Bell.

Bell Drives in Four Runs.

This hit gave Bell the honor of tying the world series record for driving in runs—four in one game—and it also caused the park announcer to grab his megaphone and proclaim that tickets for tomorrow's game would be put on sale immediately after the game today.

Previously, for some quaint reason, the park authorities thought that the Yankees had a chance to catch these smashing, pounding Cardinals, but now all doubt of the outcome was removed and the money changers prepared to sell the pasteboards for a seventh game.

Southworth's triple in the ninth inning and Hornsby's infield out produced the Cardinals' tenth run. The Yankees had counted their second in the seventh on Dugan's single, Bell's wild throw on Severeid's grounder, and Combs' one-bagger to center.

The fourth and the seventh were the only innings in which the Yankees made more than one hit and they got two in each of those frames. The other four hits off Alexander were doled out one at a time.

Haines to Pitch Last Game.

Jess Haines will carry the hopes of the Cardinals in the seventh and final game of the series tomorrow afternoon.

Huggins probably will use Hoyt, though he also has Ruether. Then, too, there are reports that Herb Pennock, the big horseshoe man from Pennsylvania, wants to try his luck again. Pennock, however, will be used only as a last resort. He needs rest to be at the peak of his power and he pitched 10 innings on Thursday and normally would not be ready to work again until Tuesday. But if the Cardinals start to warm the fences, Pennock may be in there.

Pennock is a Quaker, one of the few Quakers in baseball. The Cardinals believe that if he tries to pitch again they will put the quake in Quaker.

FLOOD MENACES AREA BELOW PEORIA, ILL.; HUNDREDS FLEE

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, ILL., Oct. 9.—Dozens of families in the Spring Lake levee district below here moved to the hills this afternoon and tonight when patrols warned that the levee would probably go out soon, as the Illinois River swept past record flood stages. The district is the largest protected by levees near here and one of the most productive. There are more than 5,000 acres of corn lands in the district.

NO WINE, ONLY TEA AND LIME JUICE FOR QUEEN MARIE

She Sails for America Tuesday on Leviathan and Won't Violate Dry Law.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Queen Marie of Rumania, who will sail Tuesday for the United States aboard the Leviathan, a dry ship, has no intention of violating the prohibition law during her voyage.

Discreet inquiry today as to what she would like in the way of beverages on the voyage, drew the following reply:

"I don't care for wine myself. Neither Princess Ilena nor Prince Nicholas drink it. If you provide us with plenty of tea and lime juice, we will be well satisfied."

TO CONFER ON REPARATIONS

Europeans Will Negotiate for Sale of German Bonds in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Negotiations between the European nations of the allies and the Washington Government, concerning the recently proposed sale of German railroad industrial reparations bonds, will begin next week, according to information here.

The French and Belgian embassies have received instructions to take up the matter with the American State Department. They will ask the United States Government, as one of the beneficiaries of reparations to the amount due for the expenses of the army of occupation, to consent to the sale of the bonds. The American Government also will be asked to permit American banks to undertake to place the bonds on the American market.

declared that he threw himself face down in his machine as soon as shots began to fly over his head.

Unable to Identify Anyone.

Clarence L. Adams of Herculaneum, who insisted to the Post-Dispatch correspondent last week that Schooley was the man who carried the money sack from the bank, failed to identify anyone when called to the stand.

Again today, there was considerable debate before authorities would produce Smith in the courtroom when witnesses were called on to identify defendants. At the close of the hearing, Verne R. C. Lacy, counsel for Schooley, and Emil P. Rosenberger, counsel for Ball, protested vigorously against the size of the bonds, declaring that "excessive bail was no bail at all." Lacy declared Schooley was not only a client but a friend he esteemed highly.

The witnesses who identified Schooley yesterday were Deputy Sheriff Edward Staat of Antonia, who chased the robbers' car for several miles over a winding trail, and Roger Elliott, 21 years old, of Festus, who was in the bank. In spite of severe cross-examination, Staat maintained that Schooley was the man who left the robbers' machine at one point near House Springs and fired with two revolvers at his pursuers. Elliott said Schooley pointed a revolver at him in the bank, grasped his arm and made him lie down.

Other Witnesses Tell Details.

Other witnesses told details of the robbery, the flight in a stolen automobile, the chase in which more than 100 shots were fired, and the arrest of the four men and two women in a cottage on Big River, 20 miles from Festus, where the machine, stolen in St. Louis, and the loot, except for the missing $4742, were found.

Every available bit of standing room in the courthouse auditorium was taken up, hundreds of residents from various parts of Jefferson County having come to Hillsboro for the trial. A large number were women and children.

Early in the trial Justice Reilly lighted a cigar and his action was taken as a signal for other smokers to do likewise. Schooley frequently conferred with his counsel and took notes on a pad in the manner of an attorney. Mrs. Schooley and five of her six children were among the spectators, as were Smith's wife and 10-year-old daughter, and the wives of Ball and Weingartner.

St. Louisans' Hearts Beat With Slaps of Cardinals' Bats, Heard Over Radio

Yankees' Relief Pitcher Proves Great Relief to Taut Nerves of Baseball Fans Here — Hopes Revived.

BOB SHAWKEY was a great relief pitcher yesterday afternoon. Oh, what a relief.

Thousands of St. Louis radio fans whose hands shook with ague as they tuned in on KSD, were put at ease in the first inning, and one long, quivering sigh swept up Olive street. The Cards got to Shawkey right away and so good was the reception from Yankee Stadium that St. Louis heard their bats pounding the ball. Each blow upon the ball, that rang so sharply and yet so sweetly through the terrestral ether, was like a comforting pat on the city's taut, raw nerves.

"There, there," the Cardinals' bats seemed to be saying, "there, there, little worried burg, it's not so bad after all."

Of course, Alexander the Great sounded fine. But not quite so fine as in the first game he pitched at New York in the world series. Then the loud speakers barked 10 times, "He struck him out!" Yesterday these glad tidings came only six times. The Yanks also got the ball out of the infield oftener and there were a few disconcerting doubles. The radio crowds were nervous about Old Alex. Once upon a time a pitcher went to the well too often.

No, the sounds from the Yankee Stadium which enabled St. Louis fans to keep breathing were the hit-slaps, the cheers of a New York crowd rooting for the Cardinals and Graham McNamee's voice saying "and another runner scored."

"Pl-a-a-p" Meant a Hit.

In the staccato, dramatic language of the radid there were three chief sounds yesterday: "Pl-a-a-p," a hit; "blap," a home run, and "aw-aw-arrh," an error. Each one of these sounds was accompanied by loud yelling by the New York crowd, no matter which team was at bat. The radio fans lisened for one of these three signals. If they did not come, there was no need to be excited—a foul, a ball, a strike had happened. The fans who knew the game, carried the diamond in their heads as a blindfolded chess player does the board. They were able to feel each situation. Always there was the suspense of waiting for a sound across the miles—facts out of funnels—with the Yankee Stadium pushed close.

The first balm to thousands of anxious Cardinal sufferers came in the first inning:

"Mr. Roscoe Holm is at bat. One ball on Mr. Holm. A little high," said McNamee, "Here comes th second one—strike! . one and one now, . . . a ba-aall—too close—the crowd is not capacity here today . . . there—PLA-A-AP—a nice clean single out to right field. Holm gets the first hit of the game . . . Southworth is up...foul — one strike—here it is . . . and a ba-aall . . .and a ball . . here it comes...foul ball..looks like the hit and run was signalled, but he fouled it...here it is!..he hits to second, second throws to short at second forcing Holm..Southworth on first...Hornsby up..too close.. one ball..there you are..foul ball ..a ball..and a strike..two and two..wide..a ball...and a ba-aa-ll ...he walks!

"Bottomley is up...foul on the first ball...and a ball...one and one now....another foul .... two strikes..Bottomley is a great one to hit fouls, the other day he...A HIT...A CLEAN HIT FOR A DOUBLE...one run in..a fine two base hit...Hornsby is now on third, Bottomley is on second..one down...and one run for the Cards in the first inning of this sixth world series game...One strike on Lester Bell....and a ball....one and one...."

Right here the circuit cut out for perhaps four minuates.

What had happened?

"....O'Farrell is now up... (Bell had singled scoring Hornsby and Bottomley. Hafey had struck out in the meantime)—Here it is..one ball...ball is fouled.... and a strike...and a little close, for two and two—and he struck him out! Three hits that inning for the Cardinals...three runs..."

"YAYY-Y-YAH."

The radio fans needed no sight of players on the far-off diamond. They needed only to hear words:

"Combs is up for the Yankees ..one strike! a knee high curve that broke over nicely...Old Man Alexander is pitching 'em today.. the next is driven to short for a putout...Koenig up. One STRIKE! Old Alex has a WORLD of SPEED today. He's burning them over. Oh, how he's burning them...Ha! STRUCK HIM OUT! Babe Ruth is at the plate..two gone and Ruth batting...and the old Chicago castoff, sold down river for the waiver price is throwing them... three ba-alls, low and outside... and a strike...over the middle of the pan....and another strike.. here's the next one—a drive to first and he's OUT!"

HA! said St. Louis. Ha! said Little Rock, Tulsa, Fort Worth and New Orleans. Ha! said the crowds in the towns and one the prairies.

The Cards were hitting and old Alex was right.

And in the fifth inning:

"Thevenow is up....Strike one, curve, swings over—here it comes ..a ball....One ba-all....A HIT.. a nice drive through the infield for a single....Alexander is up. The crowd gives him a hand....He bunts the first one for a nice sacrifice. Thevenow is on second.... One down....Holm is up....One ball,, too close and high.... (PLA-A-AP!) A hit over second! Bringing in a run. The score is now 4 to 1 in favor of the Cardinals....A pretty single..."

Then came the Cardinal seventh.

"Do you want a cup of coffee, Mac? Here it is....Fine! They've just given me a cup of coffe.... No sugar in it....Well, we get enough sugar, you know....Let's see....Thevenow is up....One ball ....He gets a nice single toward Meusel....Alexander up....One strike....A little low, ball....One and one....A bunt dribbles in front of the plate (AWR-AWRHH-RRR), both men safe....Catcher threw to Lazzeri on second and he dropped it....Holm dribbled one. What's that....(Silence)....Thevenow safe at third!....No, he's called him out....Severeid threw on a delayed steal and caught Thevenow....Southworth up.... One down....A strike!....A fly to left....No, Bob misjudged it....A two-base hit....Yes, Southworth gets a two-base hit....Alexander comes in with another run.... Holm on third....Southworth on second....One down and Hornsby up....Yankee infield is walking around....They are waiting for another pitcher....I think it will be Shocker....Wait till I find out.... Yep....Shocker goes in....

Hundreds of dizzy, perspiring fans turned away from the loud speakers in St. Louis and surrounding territory. It had been an awful strain until Bob Shawkey, the famous relief pitcher, gave St. Louis fandom relief in the first inning.

"One strike! . . . the score is now 5 to 1 in favor of the St. Louis team. . . . (PLAPP) A hit! . . . a safe hit through the infield brings in two runs . . . it grounded over the pitcher's box. . . . The score is 1 to 1 . . . Hornsby is on first and Bottomley is up . . .one strike . . . a drive to short . . . forces Hornsby at second . . . Lester Bell is batting . . . there it is . . . hit, no a foul . . . missed by inches . . . and two balls . . . two and one, now . . . and a strike . . . two and two . . . he hi—(BLAP!) he hit a terrific drive for a home run into the left field stands . . . oh, what a sock . . . that makes the score 9 to 1 in favor of the Cards . . . we're going to have a ball game here tomorrow unless the Yanks get busy pretty soon. . . ."

But the Yanks didn't get busy,

WILLIAMS RAKES HAWES' RECORD ON POLICE BOARD

Senator Accepts Challenge to Do His Own Fighting and Goes Back to 1902 for Ammunition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Oct. 9. — United States Senator George H. Williams, speaking here tonight, responded to the challenge of his Democratic opponent, Harry B. Hawes, to "do his own fighting." He attacked Hawes on his record as head of the St. Louis Police Board 24 years ago, asserting that "a man's record is part of him," and that "there is no statute of limitations on the public acts of a public official."

Former Gov. Hyde, speaking for Williams in Jefferson City Sept. 15, attacked Hawes, and Hawes came back with the challenge to Williams to "do his own fighting" and declared that if Williams desired a campaign of personalities, he was ready for it.

Williams began his speech here by a declaration for honest elections, and said these were needed as much in Missouri as in Pennsylvania or Illinois.

Links Hawes With Corruption.

"In Pennsylvania and Illinois," he said, "they debauched the primary election. In Missouri it was different. The history of fraud and corruption in St. Louis elections is a matter of general and widespread notoriety. That history was made when Hawes was a member or president of the St. Louis police board. Fraudulent and padded registrations, impersonation of voters, stuffing of ballot boxes, the co-operation of police and election officials with thugs and ruffians—all this is part of our history in St. Louis.

"Hawes in his St. Joseph speech refers with levity and in a spirit of ridicule to an experience I had when I was a candidate for the nomination for State Senator in 1902. Hawes' connection with that experience of mine was very definite and vital, and he has not forgotten it.

"Whether a candidate or not, a man's character as a public officer, as shown by his public acts and by the results of his administration of a public office, becomes a matter of vital importance when that man offers himself for further public position.

Must Stand on Record.

"Hawes has a public record. He himself says he reviews it with 'some amusement and some sorrow,' but that it consists of old stories that are barred by the statute of limitations. There is no statute of limitations on the public acts of a public official. It is public property, and is for the use and information of the public. I repeat that a man's character is part of him and of his candidacy. His record is put in issue when he announced his candidacy. I shall discuss it. I expect my friends to discuss it.

"If Hawes has any information which he thinks the people of the State ought to know about my work in the constitutional convention, or my activity in St. Louis politics or elsewhere, he should forthwith impart it. As for me, I shall not be affected by his insinuations or implied threats.

Assaulted at the Polls.

"The facts which Hawes so lightly refers to are that I was assaulted by election thugs at the polls in a Republican primary on Sept. 16, 1902. These election thugs came from the Delmar race tracks. They did not live in our ward (the Twenty-eighth). They were supporting an employe of the race track who was running for the nomination for State Senator in a Republican primary. The Democrats had held their convention and had nominated a race track employe as their candidate for State Senator in the same senatorial district. I was opposing the race track candidate, and was at the polls to protect the ballot box from fraud.

"The Chief of Police, a sergeant of police and police officers were present. The crooks were well known to police as being non-residents of the Twenty-eighth Ward, but they were not molested in their operations.

"Hawes was president of the Police Board. He was the head of the Police Department of the City of St. Louis. Rolla Wells (then Mayor) was not a candidate for office.

"The sergeant of police was required by his chief to make a false report of what occurred at the polling place that day.

"Nothing was done about it until Joe Folk was elected Governor in 1904. He appointed a new Police Board. Andrew C. Maroney became a member of that board and preferred charges against the Chief of Police for compelling Sergeant Dorsey to make that false report. At the trial of the Chief of Police I was called and testified as a witness of what took place. The Chief of Police (the late Mathew Kiely) was found guilty and was dismissed from the force.

Alleged "Reign of Terror."

"The incident which I have referred to is only one of many acts of violence perpetrated upon the honest voters of St. Louis during that reign of terror. It was just previous to that occurrence that Jim Butler was elected Congressman in the Twelfth Congressional District in St. Louis by a majority of more than 3500. He was elected as a Democrat in a Republican district. His election was contested by Horton, the Republican candidate. The election was thrown out in Congress because of the frauds perpetrated and the report of the Committee on Elections in the national House of Representatives is one of the most startling indictments ever prepared against such conditions in a free country. In the trial of that case, Hawes testified that every member of the St. Louis police force was a member of the Jefferson Club."

Charles M. Hay to Address Club

Charles M. Hay, attorney and advocate of prohibition, will address a public meeting at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, Oak Hill and Connecticut streets. He will speak on proposition No. 4. The meeting is being held under auspices of the Men's Club of the church.

HAWES CARRIES FIGHT TO G. O. P. AT STATE CAPITAL

Democrat Ridicules "Gov. Baker's Senator" and Fires Broadsides Into State Administration.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 9.—Harry B. Hawes, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, tonight invaded the stronghold of Republican State jobholders who support of his opponent, Senator George H. Williams, and turned from national issues long enough to fire broadsides at the Baker administration, penitentiary management and Republican "lyre players."

The lyre, Hawes said, had been adopted by the Republicans as their musical instrument for the campaign, with former Gov. A. M. Hyde and Oliver T. Remmers, chairman of the Republican City Committee of St. Louis, as performers, in an effort to "create discords in Democratic harmony."

G. O. P. Rarely in Harmony.

Referring to Republic efforts to revive the Reed and anti-Reed fight among the Democrats, Hawes remarked, "They must have some very serious reason inasmuch as it is one of the first times the Republican party entered a campaign in full harmony."

"Every time Hyde hears the word harmony he drops a tear," Hawes continued. "Every time Baker hears it he begins studying a new piece of poetry for the next campaign. If the Democrats accomplish nothing else, they will get a new brand of poetry after this campaign."

"Mayor Miller of St. Louis some time ago said that Gov. Baker's Senator (Williams) was a piccolo player," Hawes said, "but that instrument has been abandoned. Hyde was selected as the chief bugler, but he, too, has changed his instrument and now he plays the lyre. They have even taught a man like Remmers to strike a chord or two.

G. O. P. Music Obscures Issues.

"On this new instrument," Hawes continued, "there will be a grand chorus played for Williams by all the postmasters of Missouri and by all the appointees of the Governor.

"Why are we to have music of this kind in the campaign? Because it is diverting. It takes attention away from the issues. There will be an evasion of discussion of the tariff, of farm relief, of bureaucracy, of the Hamiltonian theory of centralization, of the scandals of the State administration and the scandals of the national administration."

Hawes spoke in the courtroom of the Cole County Courthouse before an audience of about 350, it being his first speech here during the campaign. Rain fell during the afternoon and evening, which prevented an open-air meeting. Williams opened his State campaign here three weeks ago before an audience on the steps of the Capitol that numbered about 500.

Jobholders Are for Williams.

Jefferson City used to be the place where the State's business was done, but now is the place where business of the Republican organization is transacted, Hawes said.

"When the political button is pushed, an appointee of the Governor comes to attention and shouts for Wililams," Hawes continued. "Press another button and a Republican postmaster salutes the Governor's appointee."

"In this city the general staff of the Republican party meets," he said. "It summons from official duty and sends into the political field an army now on the State payroll, and the army obeys. They all obeyed but one."

"Charley Becker, Secretary of State, with whom I served in the Missouri Legislature, had the temerity to disobey the orders of the general staff," Hawes said, "and he supported Proctor in the recent Republican primary. Immediately all the machinery of the Governor's office, which he could control, was put in motion to destroy Becker and his friends, and bring them into subjection by application of the political lash."

Audit of Becker's Funds.

Hawes was alluding to a recent order by Gov. Baker for an audit of the manner in which State automobile license fees collected by Becker's department are handled.

This order followed failure of the Citizens' Security Bank of Englewood, selected by Becker as one of the depositories for automobile license funds, and which did some of the financing of a political newspaper until recently published by Becker and his associates at Excelsior Springs.

"Other institutions and other heads of departments might do as they pleased," Hawes asserted, "provided they supported the governor's appointee, but it was treason for any Republican officeholder in Missouri to refuse to support the Governor's senator. So an example had to be made of the Republican Secretary of State who had refused to obey the orders of the general staff."

Williams' Plan for Women.

Referring to Williams' record as a delegate to the constitutional convention, Hawes said he first attracted wide attention in a speech favoring military service for women.

"He was "hell-bent on putting the League of Women Voters into the trenches, making letter carriers out of the W. C. T. U., and cooking crews of the Daughters of the American Revolution," Hawes declared. "This was the only, the greatest, forensic effort of the Governor's senator.

"The high lights of Gov. Baker's administration are the appointment of the senator, and the creation of the office of inspector of beauty parlors."

Hawes referred to the State penitentiary as an institution which afforded more competition of convict labor with free labor and industrial capital than any other institution of its kind.

"Recently there marched from its walls a squad of convicts to take the place of free miners," Hawes said, "and as they passed out they saw upon the gate a poster calling for election of the Governor's Senator."

The convicts who marched out, as Hawes said, to operate a coal mine at Lexington, Mo., soon were marched back, as a storm of protests from labor organizations and others caused the Governor and the State Penal Board to abandon the contract.

Encouragement for Hawes.

Hawes spent the afternoon here and received encouraging reports on progress in organization work in Cole and adjacent counties. Cole County is close, under normal conditions. There is lack of interest in the campaign both among Republicans and Democrats, but organized efforts are being made to overcome this. Radical drys among the Democrats largely are sticking to Hawes' candidacy because of his definite stand on all issues, and few defecations are expected.

Mrs. Hawes spent a busy day and met many Democratic women workers at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. Jack Hobbs, an afternoon reception at the home of former Supreme Judge and Mrs. J. T. Blair, and an informal reception this evening at the hotel.

Film—Enemy of Teeth

To which modern dental science attributes many serious tooth and gum disorders—To attain clear white teeth and firm, healthy gums, many authorities are advising this way to combat the dangerous film that forms on teeth

IN a film that forms on teeth, science has discovered what is believed to be a chief enemy both of sound teeth and of healthy gums — a viscous, stubborn film that ordinary brushing has failed to effectively combat.

Thus thousands who have taken greatest precautions, even from childhood, with their teeth, still are largely subject to tooth and gum disorders.

Many of the common tooth and gum troubles, including pyorrhea, are largely charged to this film. To combat it, a new dental care is now being widely advised as embodied in the special film-removing dentifrice called Pepsodent.

Now an effective film combatant

For years dental science sought ways to fight film. Clear teeth and healthy gums come only when film is constantly combated—removed every day from the teeth.

Film was found to cling to teeth; to get into crevices and stay; to hold in contact with teeth food substances which fermented and fostered the acids of decay. Film was found to be the basis of tartar. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea and most gum disorders.

Thus there was a universal call for an effective film removing method. Ordinary brushing was found ineffective. Now two effective combatants have been found, approved by nigh dental authority and embodied in a tooth paste called Pepsodent.

Curdles and removes film
Firms the Gums

Pepsodent acts nrst to curdle the film. Then it thoroughly removes the film in gentle safety to enamel.

At the same time, it acts to firm the gums—Pepsodent provides, for this purpose, the most recent dental findings in gum protection science knows today. Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. And thus aids in neutralizing mouth acids as they form.

It multiplies the starch digestant of the saliva. Thus combats starch deposits which might otherwise ferment and form acids.

No other method known to present-day science embodies protective agents like those in Pepsodent.

Please accept Pepsodent test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage the gums with Pepsodent, using your finger tips; the gums then should start to firm and harden.

At the end of that time, we believe you will agree, that next to regular dental care, Pepsodent, the quality dentifrice, provides the utmost science has discovered for better tooth and gum protection.

SAYS EVANGELIST HIRED LAWYER TO DEFEND ORMISTON

District Attorney Declares That Mrs. Sielaff Will Swear to This at McPherson Hearing.

WITNESS ASSERTS SHE HEARD MESSAGE

Guard Around Courtroom to Be Doubled After Judge Receives Many Threatening Letters.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 9.—District Attorney Keyes said today that he would offer conclusive evidence that Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson made arrangements to retain H. S. Martin, Chicago attorney, to act for Kenneth G. Ormiston, her fugitive codefendant and former radio operator at Angelus Temple. Keyes said this testimony would be given by Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sielaff, who has confessed that she plotted with the evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, to manufacture evidence bolstering Mrs. McPherson's story of having been kidnaped last May.

The evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Sielaff and others are charged with criminal conspiracy. Their hearing on this charge will be resumed in Municipal Court tomorrow.

Mrs. Sielaff, Keyes said, would swear that Mrs. McPherson placed a long-distance call to Chicago, in which she talked with Martin and made the arrangements for him to act as Ormiston's attorney.

Mrs. McPherson disappeared here last May 18, reappearing five weeks later at Douglas, Ariz., saying she had been kidnaped. The State contends that during part of the time, at least, she was with Ormiston in a cottage at Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Following receipt today by Judge Samuel R. Blake, who is holding the McPherson hearing, of about a score of intimidating and threatening letters, Keyes said that extra precautions would be taken for Judge Blake's safety. Additional guards will be placed about the Hall of Justice, and the courtroom, when the hearing is resumed.

EMPLOYE BURNED TO DEATH IN FIRE AT POWDER PLANT

Blaze Destroys Frame Dry House of the Equitable Company at East Alton.

A fire in a smokeless powder "dry house" of the Equitable Powder Co. of East Alton Friday resulted in the death of an employe, Clarence Summers, 31 years old, of East Brown street, Alton.

Summers, an operator in charge of powder drying apparatus, was the only employe in the frame building. He was badly burned about the face and body as he ran out. About 1200 pounds of smokeless powder were consumed, but there was no explosion, according to an official statement by the company, which explained this type of powder does not explode unless confined. The fire began at 3:30 p. m. Summers died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Alton, at 10:45 p. m.

Damage to the building and equipment was about $1000. The company announced cause of the fire had not been determined.

ASKS THAT UNIVERSITY CITY RAISE JUDGMENT BY TAXATION

Cleaver Pyle Holder of $7500 Claim, Seeks Writ of Mandamus.

Because University City has failed to pay a damage judgment of $7500, the holder of the judgment, Cleaver Pyle, yesterday applied to Circuit Judge McElhinney for a writ of mandamus to compel University City offiicals to levy a special tax to raise the amount. Pyle's counsel suggested that the taxpayers of University City be assessed an additional 50 cents on each $100 valuation until the judgment is paid. The law does not permit him to attach any of the municipal buildings or equipment.

The judgment was based on the death of Pyle's son, Frank Pyle, a service car driver, killed four and one-half years ago when his automobile crashed through a guard rail on Ahearn avenue, near Olive Street road, over River des Peres. It was alleged in the suit that the guard rail was unpainted, and that the place was unlighted at night, when the accident occurred.

Cameramen deserted the studio and turned their cameras on the fire scene while firemen subdued the flames. The firse was confined to the storage building and a quantity of scenery was destroyed.

YOUNG PAIR BACK HOME AFTER DISAPPEARANCE

Families Silent—G. E. Coudy, Father of Boy, to Issue Statement Today.

George W. Coudy, 17 years old, and Miss Lela May Stubbs, 18 years old, returned to their homes in Granite City at 8:30 o'clock last night, exactly two weeks from the time they left together in the boy's automobile to drop out of sight until Thursday, when they appealed for help at Viroqua, Wis., some 500 miles from home.

The two high school seniors arrived home in an automobile with their fathers, George E. Coudy, wealthy lumber dealer, and Warren Stubbs, brick contractor, who, with Mrs. Stubbs, had driven to Viroqua Thursday night.

At the Coudy home last night, a sister of Mrs. Coudy announced that a public statement would be issued by the boy's father today. Asked if the children were married, she replied that they were too young to marry and refused to discuss the case further. At the Stubbs home, Miss Florence Stubbs said her parents were away and that her sister had retired.

According to Viroqua authorities, Coudy and Miss Stubbs told a fanciful tale of having been kidnaped near their home, and finally thrown into a road near Viroqua by their abductors. When confronted by their fathers, who had been summoned by telegrams, it is said they admitted the story was untrue.

Their disappearance aroused much interest in the Tri-Cities. More than 150 volunteers searched for clews and rewards aggregating $12,000 for the capture of slayers or abductors were offered and withdrawn.

After several days, the parents learned that the pair had been seen in Chatham and Springfield, Ill., and have since been reticent about the case.

Man Freed From Jail on Writ.

Henry Warttig, of 4128 Concordia street, was released from the St. Claire County jail yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus after he had been held there since Tuesday on a charge of manslaughter, following the death, Oct. 2, of Mrs. Mary Higgins, of Murphysboro, Ill., who was injured when an automobile in which she was riding and Warttig's car collided at New Memphis, Ill. Mrs. Higgins died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Belleville, and the manslaughter verdict was returned after a coroner's inquest.

WHERE MUSIC IS SWEETEST

"MUSIC IN THE HOME PUTS SUNSHINE IN THE HEART"

A fine Piano at Kieselhorst's outclasses its price

The Kimball Grand

Of world-wide reputation, Kimball, now in the 69th year, is offered in a Grand at a price midway between that of the Mason & Hamlin, the most costly Piano, and that of a good popular priced Grand, such as the Hinze.

If for any reason you do not wish to invest more than a thousand dollars in a Piano, the Kimball Small Grand, owing to the economies in quantity-quality output is far better value than any other make.

The Kimball Small Grand for apartments, bungalows, small homes and studios, is built on the new Kimball scale, with low, even tension. It has the desired, rich resonant tone formerly produced only in larger Grand Pianos.

Kimball Small Grand $1025
4 ft. 10¼ in. long; 4 ft. 7 in. wide

Musical Culture in St. Louis Expands

In his musical studies John A. Kieselhorst had given particular attention to the flute, so much so that he became a flutist of renown, a virtuoso, whose numbers were an event in the concerts at which he appeared.

In 1871 Mr. Kieselhorst was elected president of the Haydn Orchestra, of which he had been one of the organizers.

This famous old orchestra, S. R. Sauter, conductor, was the predecessor of our present St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Rudolph Ganz, conductor. The Haydn Orchestra accomplished tremendously for music in St. Louis. Enthusiasm for its concerts spread. The program below of a concert given in Alton is instanced as typical of the high quality of the work in which Mr. Kieselhorst was engaged.

NO DOUBLE SCHOOL TAX UNDER MERGER COMMITTEE HOLDS

City Would Assume All Debts and County Would Be Gainer, as It Owes More Than City.

NO "CONFISCATION" IS EVEN POSSIBLE

Consolidation Body Challenges Anti-Union Propaganda as "Insidiously Misleading."

A statement has been issued by the City-County Consolidation Committee to refute an assertion in a pamphlet of the County Committee Opposed to Annexation that the city-county merger to be voted Oct. 26 would "confiscate" the county's schools and cause the closing of some high schools there.

Calling this idea a "fair sample of most of the insidiously misleading statements and insinuations in the leaflet," the statement of the merger proponents quotes the following paragraph of the pamphlet:

"Some authorities hold that the constitutional amendment on the merger did not provide for the assuming by the city of the bonded indebtedness of the county school districts. If such is the case, despite the assurance of city freeholders, county residents would be forced to pay a double school tax. They would first pay the amount assessed for general school purposes in the city and, second, would have to pay interest on the old school debt and the principal."

City Would Assume County Debt.

The Consolidation Committee's statement points out that section 16 of the merger scheme explicitly provides that the city Board of Education, under its present State Charter, shall take title to all county school property and be liable for all county school debts and obligations and take over the administration of schools in the merged territory.

"The Committee Opposed to Annexation," says the statement, "makes the charge that the city School Board would confiscate public school property in the county, then goes on to say that the board would repudiate the debt on this property. Is this an honest argument? What is the security for debts on public school property? It is the ground and buildings owned by the school districts and the wealth and responsibility of the taxpayers of the school districts. If the Committee Opposed to Annexation questions this assertion, it is referred to any textbook on bonds and mortgages in Washington or St. Louis University, or to the bankers connected with that committee.

No Double School Tax.

"Citizens of the county are absolutely sure, under the specific terms of the merger plan, that the St. Louis Board of Education will assume all debts, both funded and current, of all public school districts in St. Louis County. They are absolutely sure that they will not have to pay a double school tax. The only tax which they will have to pay will be the regular school tax.

"In public schools of the county the enrollment of pupils totals 24,302, and the total bonded debt is $3,559,561. The debt of the county public schools is twice as large as that of the St. Louis public schools, which is only $1,745,880, with an enrollment of 112,185. The St. Louis School Board will, as the merger plan provides, assume this whole debt of $3,559,561, and, in addition, all current financial obligations.

"By transferring this debt of $3,559,661 to the St. Louis public school system, with a debt of only $1,745,880, the financial advantage would be entirely with the taxpayers of the county school districts, and, therefore, also with the directors of the county school districts. This is so obvious a conclusion that we are willing to submit it to the bankers connected with the Committee Opposed to Annexation for confirmation.

Better Schools Under Merger.

"Embracing all school districts in the county, the children of all sections would unquestionably benefit by absorption of the county public schools and debts by the St. Louis School Board. The St. Louis public school system is well organized, and has ample means to provide facilities. Children of all districts in the county, especially those districts which are naturally weak in organization and means, including those in farm districts, would receive more and better facilities of education and comfort. Distribution of responsibility among 1,000,000 people enables distribution of advantages to better result for children and parents.

"County schools which need better facilities and accommodations would get them through the merger, and the standard schools of the county would be at least as good as they are at present. The merger would be beneficial to all schools in the county. Union would be better for all, and better for each."

A. F. OF L. VOTES TO SEEK SHORTER WORKING WEEK

Proposal for National Campaign Favored by Council Adopted by Convention at Detroit.

HOPES TO UNIONIZE AUTO INDUSTRY

Crafts Unions Involved Expected to Launch Two-Year Drive—Federation Finances to Be Increased.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 9.—The American Federation of Labor cleared its convention docket today of three important questions of policy.

It unanimously voted to launch a national campaign for the "progressive shortening of the hours of labor and the days per week"; approved two constitutional amendments intended to augment the financial resources of the federation, and enunciated with renewed emphasis its policy of seeking wage advances with every increase in per capita production resultant of advances in the mechanical arts.

After the session had adjourned until Monday, James O'Connell, president of the Metal Trades department, outlined a tentative program suggested to the executive council for the conduct of the campaign to unionize the automobile industry. The organization drive was approved by the convention Thursday.

Two-Year Campaign Forecast.

A meeting of the principal craft unions involved will be held under the direction of the Executive Council in Washington immediately after the November elections and it is thought the purpose of sponsors of the movement is to inaugurate the organization activities soon after the first of the year. An intensive national campaign, which probably will extend over a period of two years, is forecast, O'Connell said.

"Our plans in this undertaking," O'Connell said, "should be more fruitful from the outset than any similar campaign in the past for the reason that we now have, for the first time in the history of the federation, a unified control of the campaign. The work will be free of the usual handicaps and obstructions generally involved in the business of organizing an industry through the individual efforts of a dozen or more distinct craft international unions.

To Join Efforts and Resources.

Wasted effort will be eliminated, resources combined and purpose directed through the special campaign committee working under the direct supervision of the Executive Council.

"The intricate questions of jurisdiction have been a troublesome problem in previous undertakings of this nature. Here we shall be free of that."

The resolution favoring the shorter week directed the executive council to inaugurate a campaign of education and organization in furtherance of the program. A specific declaration in favor of a five-day week was modified by the report of the committee on shorter work day to recommend the program in the more general terms of "a progressive shortening of the hours of labor and the days per week." There was little debate on that section of the committee's report.

The constitutional amendments increased the monthly per capita tax of members affiliated through local unions from 25 to 35 cents and the federation's minimum share of local initiation fees from 75 cents to $1. The combined increases are expected to add approximately $150,000 annually to the national organization's income.

Protracted debate on wages ended with the adoption of the committee report, which recommended the policy outlined in the Executive Council's report last Monday.

NEW TERMINAL LOCOMOTIVE TO BE EXHIBITED TOMORROW

Larger Than Present Type and Designed to Handle Heavy Interchange Traffic.

An improved locomotive, one of a number being built in the Terminal Railroad Association shops, and of a larger type than any now in use in Terminal service here, will be exhibited to the public at Union Station tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

The locomotive is designed to handle heavy interchange traffic through this gateway and includes several new features to increase efficiency and economy of operation and maintenance. The frame, including the deck, cross bracing, cylinders, saddle, steam chests and bumper beam, is of cast steel in one piece, the largest single casting ever made for a locomotive, and replaces 30 parts in the ordinary frame.

The tender and its frame are also cast in one piece, and a new type of grate is used that will permit continuous service without the usual frequent stops to clean fire.

SECOND REGISTRATION FOR ILLINOIS VOTERS TUESDAY

Booths will be open again Tuesday in Illinois, for the second day of general registration, from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m., it was announced at the Board of Election Commissianers in East St. Louis yesterday. All registrations prior to the present ones are void, and failure to register will mean loss of vote in the November elections.

Registration in East St. Louis the first day, Oct. 2, was light. Less than 10,000 voters registered. At the time of the last election, 25,000 persons were qualified. It is estimated by Election Commissioners that 30,000 should be able to qualify.

AMERICAN VIEW WINS IN ARMS DISCUSSION

French Defeated in Proposal as to Limiting Naval Armament.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Oct. 9.—A lively debate arose in the session of the naval subcommission of the preparatory disarmament conference tonight when the French delegation tried to have excluded a proposal limiting naval armaments by categories of ships which was submitted by the American, Argentine, Chilean, British and Japanese delegations. The French took the ground that it really provided three methods, instead of one, and that the proposal should not be considered until the signatories were in complete agreement.

Hugh Gibson, American Minister to Switzerland, in a blunt speech, declared the signatories of the proposal merely wanted it to go before the full preparatory disarmament commission on its merits. He criticised the French attitude as likely to block the early convening of the proposed international disarmament conference. He said the big naval Powers virtually were agreed concerning the best methods of reducing navies.

The French apparently resented Gibson's presence in the committee of experts, but the American viewpoint was upheld.

The French and Italians object to limitation by categories of ships, insisting that tonnage should be the sole method.

Tex Rickard to Wed Soon.

By the Associated Press.

LEWISBURG, W. Va., Oct. 9.—George L. (Tex) Rickard denied this afternoon that he was married here Thursday. Reports that the New York fight promoter had married Miss Maxine Hodges of New York brought the statement from Rickard that while he might have made arrangements to be married within a month, the ceremony had not yet been performed.

The New Britannica in the NEW FORM at a Saving of 40%

FOR the first time in the Britannica's history, a New Edition has been brought out in a popular-priced form, simultaneously with the more expensively bound Cambridge Issue.

Because the Britannica is primarily an educational institution, and because of its vital importance to all, it was determined before publication of the new 13th Edition, that the matter of price should deter no one from taking immediate advantage of its timely and practical usefulness.

Through certain definite economies in production, the publishers are enabled to offer you this complete new 13th Edition, in the popular NEW FORM binding, at a saving of 40%—or a trifle more than HALF THE PRICE of the famous Cambridge Issue. A price that can never be lower than it is today!

This amazingly low price is made possible because:
(1) The 32 volumes are bound as 16 (two vols. in 1 cover.)
(2) The special opacity paper is made to order in immense quantities at a substantial saving in cost.
(3) Printing from the original plates used for the Cambridge Issue makes it unnecessary to reset 33,000 pages of type. This one item alone results in a saving of thousands of dollars.

The number of sets available in the NEW FORM is necessarily limited. Prompt inquiry is, therefore, advised. Send coupon for FREE Booklet describing both issues.

Small Payment—Easy Terms

MEMORIAL TABLET FOR 89TH DIVISION MEN IS DEDICATED

Impressive Ceremonies in Jefferson Memorial Before Assembled Comrades and Relatives.

EX-GOV. GARDNER DELIVERS ADDRESS

Massive Stone Records of Men Who Fell in World War Occupies Place in Rotunda.

A tablet bearing the names of 114 St. Louis and St. Louis County members of the Eighty-Ninth Division, who lost their lives in the World War, was dedicated at Jefferson Memorial, in Forest Park, at noon yesterday as the closing exercise of the fourth reunion of veterans of the division.

The tablet, the gift of the women's auxiliaries of the division, was put in place four years ago on the west wall of the Memorial Building rotunda opposite a similar tablet of Thirty-Fifth Division dead, but was not formally dedicated until yesterday. It is of stone about 12 feet high, the names of the dead being carved in three vertical rows under their various divisional organizations.

The dedication opened with music by the Sixth Infantry band from Jefferson Barracks, followed by a prayer by the Rev. Father Thomas M. Knapp, dean of the College of Arts and Science of St. Louis University. Frederick D. Gardner, war-time Governor of Missouri, then delivered the dedicatory address before several hundred Eighty-Ninth veterans and members of the auxiliaries.

"Immortalized Comrades."

"We, their countrymen and countrywomen, owe an incalculable debt to our immortalized comrades of the glorious Eighty-Ninth," former Governor Gardner said. "We owe it to them not merely to keep alive the memory of their lofty ideals, their fearless heroism, their generous sacrifice, but to see to it that no blot shall ever mar the shining record which they have written into the history of the worlw of nations.

"This is a debt which we can never fully repay, but we can at least devote to it the years of our lives and the loyalty of our hearts. One of the sweetest of American singers has written:

'All common good has common price,
Exceeding good, exceeding;
Christ gained the keys of Paradise
By cruel bleeding.'

"Their blood was shed through ten thousand cruel wounds upon a hundred battle fields that the world might know peace. World peace was bought with that supreme libation. They gave their all for their mighty ideal and we, the citizens of their glorious country, can do no less than to strive in whatever sphere we move to make it forever impossible that their mighty cause shall perish, for only in its failure can death ever so much as touch the hem of their garments—our immortal heroes of the deathless Eighty-ninth."

Oldest Gold Star Mother.

At the close of former Gov. Gardner's address the tablet, which had been covered by a large American flag, was unveiled while the band played the National Anthem. Included in the group at the ceremony were Mrs. Josephine Gregory and Mrs. Conrad Meyer, "Gold Star" mothers of the Eighty-ninth. Mrs. Gregory, who is 79 years old, is said to be the oldest "Gold Star" mother in this vicinity. Her son, Lloyd B. Gregory, was killed in action with the 354th Infantry. Mrs. Meyer's son, Edward H. Alewell, was killed on Armistice day.

The reunion opened Friday at the Coliseum with an address by Mayor Miller. Official business included the sending of a telegram of good will to Grover Cleveland Alexander, who yesterday annexed his second world series victory over the New York Yankees. Alexander served overseas with the Eighty-ninth and pitched the division's baseball team to a championship. The Eighty-ninth was trained at Camp Funston under Major-General Wood, and went overseas in June, 1918, under Major-General F. L. Wright. In three major offenses the division suffered 7002 casualties and took 5006 prisoners.

AUTO DRIVER EXONERATED

Verdict of Accident in Case of Negro Boy.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of Moses Atchison, 7 years old, a Negro of 1407 Blair avenue, who died at the People's Hospital Thursday of injuries suffered Aug. 10 when struck by an automobile driven by Dr. John S. Young of 517 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis.

Testimony was that the boy darted from behind a truck in front of 1626 Lucas avenue, giving the driver of the machine no time to swerve from his course.

BE TRUE!

Lieing is a despicable trait; misrepresentation is its blood-brother.

Either will prove ruinous to its users.

Sincerity is one of mankind's most admirable traits and is a positive essential to permanently successful accomplishments.

Whether in business, civic or social affairs, the person who practices sincerity is generally respected, admired, extolled and sought for counsel by his fellowmen and his community.

Nothing is more comforting to a person than a CLEAR CONSCIENCE.

That's the reward of sincerity!

MRS. NELLIE B. MEAGHER AND FAMILY. (c)

To my friends and relatives, to the pallbearers and for the many beautiful floral offerings, for the kindness and sympathy shown me on the death of my dear wife, Margaret, I desire to express my heartfelt thanks. CHARLES SATCHWELL.

POST-DISPATCH Lost Ad restore some valued keepsake that you "never expected to see again?" It is being done every day. Call MAin 1111.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

K. S. D.—We do not understand just what you mean by miniature medals. Civilians do not usually wear medals unless they are recipients of special honors or decorations from persons having the power to grant them. Describe the kind of medals you are interested in wearing if you wish further advice.

THANKS. — White lace may be dyed ecru color by dipping it into alternate effusions of strong tea and strong coffee until the desired shade is obtained. Use both tea and coffee, not just one or the other. You may also dye the lace with one of the simple tinting powders or soaps sold for the purpose.

T. N. C.—Write to the County Clerk of the county in which you were born if your birthplace was not a large city that keeps individual records. Write to the Vital Statistics Bureau of the city in which you were born if you know the name of your birthplace. If you have a family doctor in your old home city, he may be able to supply the information you require.

INQUISITIVE P.-D. READER.—The personnel of the Post-Dispatch is approximately 800 persons in all departments. The letters P., D. and C. on the Billion-area advertisements are used to indicate population, dollars and newspaper circulation. Contributors to the Just a Minute column are not paid. Consult Ayers Newspaper Directory at the Public Library for the names of journalism trade papers. Newspaper editorials are written by editorial writers for large papers and by the editor for small papers. Consult biographies of Joseph Pulitzer at the Public Library for the story of the founding of the Post-Dispatch.

PAULINE.—The color of the bridesmaid's dress depends on the type of costume worn by the bride. If the bride is in white then the bridesmaid may wear any of the light colors or shades of pink, lavender, blue, yellow or any of these tints, with silver or combined together. Inquire of a florist about flowers now in season. Roses to match the dress may be carried or asters in delicate lavender and pink shades may be used. You may wear a large black or matching velvet hat. If the bride is married in a dark dress or suit the bridesmaid may wear any becoming dress of similar or contrasting color with a hat to match.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

J. D. DUMBELL.—A will written with an indelible pencil is good if it is properly signed and witnessed.

GRATEFULLY. — You may resume the use of your own right name whenever you care to do so without getting into any trouble.

A. L.—Write to a lawyer in the Illinois county in which the property is situated and ask him to find out whether your mother has any claim to the property now.

MAY. — You cannot compel the furniture company to refund your deposit on the furniture you refused to buy after making the first down payment.

PUZZLED.—The lessee could be held liable for the apartment rent under the lease after vacating the apartment. Each person who signed as lessee could be held liable for the whole rent.

TWENTY-YEAR SUB.—You can ask the furniture company to take the furniture back but you cannot compel them to do so. If they refuse and sue you for the balance of the payments they can have your wages garnished 10 per cent.

N. G.—The widow cannot dispose of property in which her husband merely granted her life interest by will to whomsoever she might want to leave it. The estate goes to other heirs named by the husband in his will.

MRS. B. A. H. — If you really want the right to protect the child you have reared you should adopt her or be appointed her guardian by the Probate Court. Then the grandmother would have no legal right to interfere. Consult a lawyer.

READER.—You cannot compel the property owner to build a fence. However, you can build a fence on your own property if you desire to separate the two lots. Fences belong to the person on whose land they are located, so the grocery store fence is not the property of the man who lives next door.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

E. L. C. — Inquire at the St. Louis Medical Society, Vandeventer and Lindell avenues, for a list of homeopathic physicians.

J. P.—Most of the larger hospitals have free clinics that will provide treatment for your case. You doubtless refer to the Skin and Cancer Hospital located at Washington and Theresa avenues.

MARY.—You read the thermometer correctly. When the thermometer reads 98.6 that is the normal temperature for an adult. The normal for children and infants is a trifle higher.

READER. — We are unable to comprehend just what you mean in your letter about nervous tendencies with voices in the body. Write again and explain your trouble in detail and we will try to suggest relief.

READER OF POST. — Liquid vaseline is not good for oily hair. Try the following preparation: Mix 2 ounces witch hazel, 2 ounces alcohol, 1 ounce distilled water and 40 grains of resorcin. Rub the tonic into the scalp thoroughly every night.

SUFFERING. — You may add a few drops of essence of peppermint to the dose of dry magnesia you have been taking. You would get better results if you would take tablespoon doses of milk of magnesia and omit the peppermint.

TWENTY-EIGHT. — We cannot comment on the merits of certain physicians. There is no fixed time limit for cure of the disease you mention. If you have lost confidence in the ability of the physician handling your case you are at liberty to consult another physician at any time.

WORRIED B. — St. Ann's Asylum, Page and Union avenues, or the Bethesda Home, Grand and Vista avenues, will take care of the baby. Apply to the Bureau of Municipal Nurses in the Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets, if a private home is desired.

Indications Are That Several Hundred Students Will Enroll For the Work.

Classes in the new Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce and Finance will open for regular work this week on the third floor of the new Y. M. C. A. building, Sixteenth and Locust streets.

The first sessions of the school during the past week were well attended and indications are that the enrollment of the school will be several hundred this year, according to W. J. See, the Y. M. C. A. Educational Director. The capacity of the school, which is 2000 students, will be reached within two or three years, when the new building is in full operation and the school becomes better known, See believes.

Practical business and professional courses are offered. It is the purpose of the school to supply thorough, practical training at a minimum cost as one of the services of the Y. M. C. A. to young business and professional men.

OPEN VERDICT IN DEATHS OF 2 KILLED BY DRIVER WHO FLED

Belief Expressed Person Who Found Purse of One Victim Might Give Clew to Motorist.

An open verdict was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the deaths of Mrs. Mary Kraessig, 65 years old, a widow, 110 North Fifth street, East St. Louis, and John Schmidt, 61, of 652 North Sixty-second street, East St. Louis, who died from injuries received Sept. 26, when struck by an automobile, the driver of which fled from the scene.

Deputy Sheriff Arthur Kraessig said yesterday that a purse containing a small amount of money, which his mother was carrying at the time she was struck, has not been found. He believes that the person who found it may be able to give some clew to the identity of the motorist who fled.

Floyd Bell, 565 North Twenty-second street, motorman, testified that a large closed car bearing a yellow license plate with black numbers, going 40 miles an hour, knocked both victims into the path of the street car as he slowed down for their signal to stop at Sixty-second and State streets. His statement was corroborated, but no witness has been able to furnish authorities with an adequate description of the automobile because of poor visibility.

CALLS LAUGHTER 'HEROISM'S BROTH

Dr. John L. Elliott Addre Ethical Society at Anniver sary Celebration.

Laughter is "the little brot heroism," Dr. John L. Elliot rector of the Hudson Guild of York, remarked in an address a luncheon of the American cal Union, which will close its vention at Sheldon Memorial night with an informal supp celebration of the fortieth anni sary of the St. Louis Ethical ciety.

It was a laughable dilemma encountered in finding a way deal with "The Function of Laug ter in Social Work," as he scribed it, and the address punctuated with laughter.

"I accepted largely because the luncheon," he confessed, veying the harried viands. late President Emeritus Harvard, a most admirable man (no relation of mine), once an elderly pillar of the church what she had found the chief solation in this vale of tears replied, 'My victuals.'

"If there's any kind of people detest, it's the kind who sit around discussing their sense of humor So I won't do that but—and this a favorite diversion with social workers—I'll just talk about other people's deficiencies. I might make a serious dissertation on mirth and humor, but I won't. That would be too funny.

"Social workers are generally very heroic crew. They have face some of the most trying tions, and the most tragic, a man being can face. They are likely to fall into the frame of mind of the fellow who said, 'I'll bear it, but I'll be hanged if I grin.'

"Laughter will ease up what is one of the grimmest tragedies of modern existence—the drab routine of every day. 'Dullness has been made god.' Laughter is the little brother, of heroism, a sort of criticism when things are out of proportion.

"Whether the professional storyteller or the professional humorist is indispensable is doubtful, but everybody needs a little of it Broadway seems to me the dreariest place in America. So many people there are trying to be funny. It's their business to be funny.

"Of course, laughter may be a symptom of laziness. Many people would rather make a joke than work any time. I have asked a boy coming before me, 'You don't call that an excuse, do you?' and had him reply, 'No, but you wouldn't have me stand here and say nothing, would you?' Naturally I hadn't the face after that to give him what he needed.

"The social worker needs the humor to have the ridiculousness of the outcome of his work brought home to him. In an epidemic in New York wherein everyone had sent something to help along and somebody had sent a box of lemons a telephone operator took a call for help in my absence. One side of the card was filled with a prodigious list of calamities of illness and poverty that family. At the bottom 'over.' On the other side was note, 'I gave them six lemons.'

"Laughter is a native language of which we know virtually nothing. Whoever knows music knows not everything can be expressed words. We need music and and, I believe, laughter in the way is a native language of the It is part of the spiritual nature man. Take away his power laugh at a bad situation in of it, and what have you got le

CATTLE AND HOGS STEADY TO LOWER

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.	Last Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago.
Cattle and Calves	39,602	31,722	40,689
Hogs	62,090	61,081	70,828
Sheep	18,707	20,916	15,493
Horses and Mules	1,188	1,285	2,662
Totals	121,587	115,004	129,672

Steady to lower prices prevailed in cattle, hogs and horses and mules at the St. Louis National Stock Yards last week. Lambs were firm and sheep steady. Combined receipts were of fair volume at approximately 121,000 head. Trading in cattle was generally slow and lower prices was the rule in most departments. Arrivals were fair to moderate at close to 40,000 head, calves included. In steers the choice handy-weight kinds proved steady to strong, sales ranging upward to $12, $12.10 and $12.25 per cwt. All other killing grades, however, closed at a loss of 25c to 50c and stockers and feeders broke 25c. The bulk of all native steers suitable for beef purposes crossed the scales at $8 to $11. Approximately 100 cars of western grass consignments sold in a spread of $5.75 to $7.50. Stockers and feeders moved principally from $5.60 to $7.70. Light yearling steers and heifers were steady on the better end, top $11.60, although grassers declined 25c, spots 50c. All classes of cows broke 25c to 50c, mostly 50c, and bulls were likewise off 25c to 50c. The bulk of beef cows on the close cashed at $4.75 to $5.75, followed by cutters at $4 to $4.50 and canners at $3.35 to $3.75. Top bolognas late reached $5.75 and plainer kinds centered around $5 and $5.50, followed by canner and cutter grades in the $4 column. Choice veal calves during the week varied from $15.50 to $16.25, with the smaller figure the closing top. Heavy calves were unevenly lower at $6 to $8.50 late and Southern canner yearlings at $4.75 to $5.25 were steady to a shade easier.

Hog Prices Uneven.

Unevenness in prices and a demand of widely varying volume featured the hog trade at the local yards during the past week. Alternating declines and advances left the market very little changed from the previous week's close on all except light lights and pigs. Receipts were of moderate volume and generally good quality, although weight was lacking in most cases. Averages ran mostly from 220 pounds and down, with offerings of 230 pounds and better scarce. There was a brisk order buying demand in the first few sessions of the week, and advancing prices were the rule, with a top of $14.15 registered on choice butcher weight swine. With Eastern demand falling off later in the week, however, the big killers had things all their own way and prices progressed toward a lower basis, wiping out all early gains. As a result the closing top was $13.70, at which figure several of the best offerings in butcher averages cleared. A range of $13.50 to $14 covered most transactions of butcher hogs from 190 to 230 pounds for the entire six-day period, with lighter weights of 160 to 180 pounds at $13.25 to $13.85 mostly. The week's closing declines were more severe on light hogs and the spread in prices was wider than for the earlier part of the week. Pigs, too, were hit for sharp declines and prices on this class range weak to 25c lower than a week ago. Top kinds or weights from 130 to 150 pounds are bulking at $12.50 to $13, with lighter pigs at $12 to $12.50. Inferior grades range down to $11.50 and $11.75. The demand for stock pigs was broad last week, but buyers demanded strictly choice kinds and orders exceeded the supply of this class. Inferior grades, however, were slow movers. A price range of $13 to $14 covered most transactions. Packing sows, after enjoying popularity during the forepart of the week, encountered opposition later on and closed 25c to 50c lower than last week's finish or 50c to 75c under the present week's high time. Sales range $11.75 and down, heavy grades clearing at $10.50 to $10.75. Stags showed practically no change, majority of sales at $10 to $10.50 and $10.75, with heavies around $9 to $9.50.

Choice Lambs Stronger.

Despite unevenness throughout the week in lamb prices, the market closed at no radical change from the previous week's finish, with the exception of choice lambs, which were somewhat stronger. Closing top on lambs was $13.75 to packer buyers, paid for some choice Colorado lambs the first of this class to reach the local market the current season. With the exception of this outstanding sale, the big killers purchased their supplies at prices ranging from $12.75 on Southwest lambs. Quality as a whole graded medium to good. Butcher competition last week was keen, and an unusually large number of lambs were cleared through this outlet at prices ranging from $13.25 to $14, the latter price paid sparingly for a few odd head of strictly choice ewe and wether lambs. There was, if anything, a slight strengthening in cull prices, although no radical change was effected. A larger percentage of the run sold up to $9, but buyers still secured a fair number at $8.50, with skips selling at $7 and down, very few selling below $6. Limited supplies contributed to a slow market for mutton ewes, with prices remaining unchanged from day to day on this class. Buyers took best light fat grades of killing ewes around $5.50 to $6 largely, with heavy kinds ranging downward to $4. Choppers and canners cleared at $1 to $3, with bucks quotable at $2 to $4, according to flesh. Receipts for the week were of fair volume, although the bigger part of arrivals continued on through billing. A decrease was shown at 11 markets as compared with the previous week, but there was a substantial gain made over arrivals at the same number of points during the corresponding period a year ago. Quotations: Slaughter Stock—Good to choice lambs, $13 to $13.75; medium to good, $12 to $13; plain to medium, $10 to $12; cull and common, $8 to $9; skips, $5 to $7; good to choice mutton ewes, $5.50 to $6; medium to good, $4.50 to $5.50; plain to medium, $4 to $4.50; choppers and bucks, $2 to $4; canners, $1 to $2.50; fat goats, $2 to $3.25; thin to fair goats $1 to $2; fat kids, $5 to $6; thin to fair kids, $2 to $4.

Horses and Mules.

Receipts of horses and mules ran largely to the latter class. The combined run amounted to approximately 1188 head, a slight loss from the previous week. Trade was featured by a decline of $5 to $15 per head in all of the plainer grades of mules. This was attributed largely to the break in the cotton market. Top mules were little changed and the modest supply of horses here also averaged about steady.

Demand for horses included thick chunks and big work teams 1600 pounds and over. The Southern trade was not large.

Range horses and mules were beginning to arrive Saturday for next week's sale.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"Leading European exchanges were firm to strong all through the week. The feature was pronounced strength in Italy, resulting from buying understood to have been inspired by Government agents. Lire rose from 3.75 to 3.97, reaching within a few points of its high of the year. French exchange also showed pronounced strength, moving up from 2.80 to 2.88 for checks. This movement was a natural result of the comparative political tranquillity and had a direct connection with weakness in the former neutral exchanges. Dutch exchange was heavy all through the week, the strength due to purchases of that currency by France disappearing. There were many indications that those who had been buyers of guilders and sellers of francs had abruptly changed their position. Guilder checks were carried down to 39.98, a new low for the year, and comparing with a high of 40.24 made last April. Swiss also moved downward, but within a narrower range.

"Sterling held firm at around $4.85¼ for cables, the few cotton bills that came into the market being easily absorbed. There was apparently a movement in progress for the accumulation of exchange on London for some special object. Swedish exchange moved in line with Dutch and Swiss, making a new low for the year.

"Silver exchanges were unsettled by the continued decline in the metal. Hongkong and Shanghai both fell about a cent to new low levels for the year, and Peruvian, which has been declining steadily for several weeks, had a further loss of 10 points to below 3.70. Canadian exchange was under pressure all through the week and in yesterday's trading the premium entirely disappeared, sales being made at 100. The high of the year, 100.25, was made on April 16.

"South American exchanges were heavy, Brazilian falling a cent to 14. Japanese was fairly active, yen checks ranging from 48.56 to 48.37. Rumanian exchange showed further improvement, leu advancing from .52 to .54½. A special movement marked Spanish exchange, which was in supply all through the week, falling from 15.04 to 14.90."

"Trading in foreign exchanges Saturday was moderately active and fluctuations were again irregular. A burst of strength in lire, carrying cable rates back to the previous high level of the year, was one of the features. French exchange displayed a firmer tone. Sterling held steady, while the Canadian dollar recovered to parity after selling at a small discount yesterday. Silver rates were steadier, but the Peruvian pound continued to decline, losing 3 cents and establishing another new low record.

WHEAT PRICES LOWER IN TRADE FOR WEEK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Wheat was a shade firmer in today's market as a result of week-end short covering and also the desire to even up trade before Monday's Government crop report. Pressure to sell was not heavy, but there was enough wheat on sale on bulges to keep prices within a narrow range. At the close the market was ⅛c to ⅜c higher, and for the week 2⅝c to 2⅞c lower. December $1.37¼ to $1.37⅜. May $1.42¼ to $1.42⅜. The price trend was downward in wheat this week, largely because of the improved weather in the Canadian wheat belt and the shortage of ocean tonnage which has restricted export demand. Liverpool today was ⅝d to ¼d higher, the trade over there becoming alarmed over prolongation of the coal strike and the consequent high ocean freight rates. It looks as if the Southern hemisphere wheat growers will suffer if the British strike continues and the North American grower will benefit. Short hauls will be popular with vessel owners so long as the coal-carrying trade takes the bulk of the bottoms. Mills bought 12,000 bushels from local shippers and 40,000 bushels of No. 2 red sold in store at 3 cents under December. The Seaboard reported 300,000 to 400,000 bushels taken for export. Canadian farmers marketed 3,800,000 bushels yesterday.

Corn was weak early, May selling at a new low record for the crop. Commission houses were on the selling side, while on the dip local shorts took profits, causing some recovery in the later trade. The close was ¼c to ⅝c lower and for the week 3⅝c to 4⅛c lower. December 77½c to 77⅝c, May 85c to 85⅛c. Shipping sales were only 42,000 bushels. Country sold 100,000 bushels to arrive.

Oats were easier with corn. Trade was almost entirely local. Shipping sales totaled 24,000 bushels. The close was ⅛c lower. For the week 1c to 1⅛c lower; December 43¼c, May 47½c.

Provisions were lower early, on selling prompted by weakness in hogs and grain, but week-end short covering caused some recovery. At the close lard was 5c to 10c higher and bellies 10c lower.

Flour and Meal

Flour market was dull. Aside from the sales of 1000 barrels soft patent on private terms, no new business was reported. Mills quotations: Soft 95 per cent at $6.25 jute, and high patent at $8.70 in cotton. Kansas 95 per cent at $6.45 jute; spring patent at $7.30 jute.

St. Louis flour quotations nominally, new jute basis: soft winter patents at $7 to $7.50 and special high brands at $8.70 in cotton; 95 per cent at $6.10 to $6.25; straights at $5.85 to $6; extra fancy $5.50@5.65; clears at $5.00 to $5.25; low grades at $4.75 to $5; hard 95 per cent at $6.25 to $6.75; straights at $6.00 to $6.20; first clears at $5.35 to $5.60; low grades and second clears at $4.75 to $5; spring patent $7.30; No. 2 Semolina at 4½c, standard at 4¼c, No. 3 at 4⅛c per lb.

Corn meal is quoted by mills as follows: standard meal at $1.90, cream meal at [illegible] and corn flour at $2.10 per 100 lbs.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Cotton goods ruled quiet today, with an easy tendency. Yarns were slightly easier and unsettled. Raw silk was lower in Yokohama and slightly lower here. Good trading was reported. Wool goods markets continued active on spot goods. The carpet and rug auction was eminently successful, having made a record in the volume of goods sold and their values.

WHEAT IS IRREGULAR ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Oct. 9.—Wheat was irregular on the local market today. A lower start was followed by recovery and fractional net gain.

Wheat closed fractionally higher and corn fractionally lower.

In the local cash grain market Saturday demand was better and soft wheat steady. Offerings were of better quality. A couple of cars choice wheat were taken on outside orders with most of the No. 2s going to local industries. Mill buyers took the garlicky descriptions. There was a good clearance except for few cars low grades which dragged. Hard wheat ruled unchanged to 1c higher, with a good demand for No. 1 and No. 2 at 3c and 2c respectively, over the Chicago December price. Two cars No. 2 hard sold to go out at slightly better basis, and market closed strong. Protein wheats were offered to arrive at unchanged premiums, possibly ½c cheaper on the high tests. Corn was down ½c to 2c, with main sales 1c to 1½c lower. There was fair demand at the decline, industrial and scattered local and shipping demand absorbed the small offerings. There was a pretty good clearance of oats, demand being fair in aggregate, though not keen. No. 2 white were 1c lower and other grades ¼c to ½c off. Shippers, local trade and elevators bought.

There was evening up over week-end and for Government crop report Monday. Weather conditions generally were favorable in Canada. Farm deliveries are expected on liberal scale. A Chicago dispatch said: "Dearth of any big fresh export demand for North America wheat acted as an evident weight today. In this connection it was pointed out that Duluth stocks of all grain had reached a total of about 24,500,000 bushels and the accumulation promises to continue next week.

Wheat had a fractionally lower range after the opening and corn followed a similar course. Winnipeg wheat was ⅛c to ⅝c lower early. Liverpool closed ⅛d to ⅝d higher. The advance was credited to high ocean freight. This latter was viewed bearishly on this side. Improved weather was factor in corn market.

December wheat opened at $1.36⅝; May wheat $1.41⅝ and December corn 77⅛c to 77¼c.

The three northwestern markets combined had 1724 cars of wheat, compared with 4659 a week ago and 1878 last year, Minneapolis receiving 235 cars, Duluth 130 and Winnipeg 1359.

Local wheat receipts, which were 64,400 bushels, compared with 141,400 a week ago and 32,200 last year, included 39 cars local and seven through. Corn receipts, which were 29,400 bushels, compared with 26,600 a week ago and 21,000 last year, included 21 cars local. Oats receipts, which were 50,000 bushels, compared with 78,000 a week ago and 60,000 last year, included 22 cars local and three through. Hay receipts were 11 cars local and four through.

At around mid session wheat was unchanged to ⅛c lower and corn ⅛c lower.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Pending the report of the Government cotton estimate this week, the stock market moved indecisively and nervously, losing more than was gained, but, after another sinking spell Friday on publication of the figures, improvement set in and securities reached their best prices of the day. The report was more bearish than had been expected anywhere, but once the bad news was out, the destructive forces, as usual, found themselves robbed of their strongest weapon. It now appears that the 1926 cotton production will total 16,627,000 bales, which would be the biggest crop in history. The largest actual output was about 16,200,000 in 1914 and the next largest 16,125,000 bales last year.

Different Situation Last Year.

"The prospects for a bountiful cotton crop would not have brought apprehension except that in the circumstances everybody knew that an abnormal output this year would drive down the price of the commodity. On the announcement of the estimate new low levels since 1921 were reached. December futures selling down to 12.36c at one time. Sentiment last year did not become so depressed on the prospect for a sizeable picking since, with prices favorable to the grower, a large crop meant greater prosperity for the country. It so happened that the big 1925 crop followed several years of low production and the world was in better position to face a 16,000,000 yield than now.

Two Big Crops.

"For the largest crop in history to be superimposed on the largest in 12 years is a circumstance wholly unprecedented and it presents a real problem to the country. That the grower cannot cover all expenses and realize a return on his investment at current prices is the unfortunate fact in the situation. Nevertheless, the cloud that now hangs so heavily over the market may, when it lifts, bring clear weather again. Each new decline in the price of the raw material has accelerated the demand for cotton goods and for the first time in years the prospect that the industry may be raised from the doldrums is good.

Pig Iron Production Large.

"Pig iron production for September reached the best total for any September since 1918, a war year, and if Judge Gary's estimate proves to have been correct, the unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation, when published, will reveal another upturn in future business. Demands from the carriers for equipment and other materials have multiplied so that the Steel Corporation has been able to maintain its operations at 86 per cent of capacity. Building operations during September failed to move ahead either of August, 1926, or September a year ago, but they held surprisingly close to the previous high rates.

The Gold Problem.

"Of the influence that may affect the swings in business over a long period none is more deserving of study just now, perhaps, than the prospect for a diminution in the world's gold production in future years. If, as Joseph Kitchin reckons, the output of the Transvaal has reached its peak and no new mines have been discovered to offset losses from that field, it is possible that the producers eventually will not be able to supply new metal fast as the need for it grows. Of course, new fields may be discovered and new ways may be found by which to release a certain proportion of the gold now tied up in reserves, but as things stand it appears gold eventually may become more valuable in terms of commodities, which is to say that commodities may become less valuable in terms of gold."

Many Active Leaders Down.

"In spite of suggestions that the market gave signs of an oversold condition, operators for the rise were unable to arouse much enthusiasm among traders and many of the active leaders again settled back in moderately active trading on the stock market today. Several specialties were lifted to higher levels, giving the list the appearance of irregularity. Uneasiness over credit conditions and development in the cotton market appeared still to have an unsettling influence over the market, however.

No Concerted Buying.

"In the absence of concerted buying for the advance, which probably was curtailed by approach of the holiday Tuesday, leading favorites in the stock market showed a tendency to slide back. Moderate pressure was exerted against General Motors, U. S. Steel, Hudson Motors and some of the other favorites after a momentary show of strength at the start. Specialties were more irregular, some receiving support and others continuing to decline under pressure. Pathe dipped again, while Postum Cereal lost ground and Coca Cola declined, but Pullman was in brisk demand and Case Threshing continued its rally. Warner Pictures rallied after a setback, while Electric Refrigeration developed a steadier tone. Allied Chemical eased off slightly after an upturn. Indications that the market had been fairly well stabilized for the time being were seen in the comparatively small amount of liquidation brought out in the selling. In some quarters it was felt the decline had gone sufficiently far on the current movement and that rallies might be expected.

List Turns Dull.

"Attempts were made to divert buying to the railroad stocks, but after a feeble rally the list again turned dull. Pressure was not directed against this group, but on the other hand buying was half-hearted, and some of the shares of Southern carriers lost ground in response to the uneasiness over the cotton situation. A more cheerful view of the outlook for cotton developed, however, as a result of reports of heavy buying in Southern cotton markets on the break yesterday. As a result, prices of futures here rallied more than $1 a bale after some slight liquidation at the start. Fears of possible damage from cold weather and talk of withdrawing large quantities of cotton from the sagging market encouraged shorts to cover their commitments.

Lira Rate Higher.

"Trading in foreign exchanges was moderately active, and fluctuations were again irregular. A burst of strength in lira, carrying cable rates back to the previous high level of the year, was one of the features. French exchange displayed a firmer tone. Sterling held steady, while the Canadian dollar recovered to parity after selling at a small discount yesterday. Silver rates were steadier, but the Peruvian pound continued to decline, losing 3 cents and establishing another new low record.

Credit Situation Improves.

"An improvement in the credit situation was recorded this week, according to figures revealed by the actual statement of the Clearing House banks. This showed an excess reserve of $37,933,330 as a result of an increase in surplus of $61,364,050. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $82,890,000."

Outstanding foreign bonds were [illegible] higher. Chilean 8s moved up [illegible] and French, German and Belgian [illegible] tions were firm. Italian [illegible] made no response to the strength [illegible] country's exchange.

Activity in the bonds of the New [illegible] transit companies, most of which [illegible] their recent gains, was based on [illegible] newed agitation for a higher [illegible] general change in operating [illegible].

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—[illegible] the week in the investment [illegible] the renewed interest in [illegible] ernment bonds following the [illegible] sale on this side of the [illegible] with a coupon rate lower [illegible] man bond sold here since the war. Weekly Metal Review

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The demand [illegible] steel was slightly less active in [illegible] scriptions during the past week. [illegible] tion, however, was well maintained [illegible] producers were generally quite [illegible] of a continuation of good [illegible] throughout the winter. At the [illegible] time, the reaction in the stock market [illegible] and the big break in cotton were [illegible] ered possible adverse factors in the [illegible] nomic situation.

Pig iron was moderately active [illegible] prices were firmer.

The copper market has [illegible] Domestic consumption continues heavy [illegible] it is thought that deliveries during [illegible] past few months have probably [illegible] meltings, and that buyers are now [illegible] posed to draw upon their stocks [illegible] than place fresh orders on a [illegible] market, particularly in view of the [illegible] tinued poor foreign demand. There was not much change in [illegible] prices. A better consuming demand [illegible] reported for October and November [illegible] ment.

COTTON PRICES FALL $30 A BALE IN 30-DAY PERIOD

Record Production Forecast by Government Bureau Followed by Decline in Quotation to Below 13 Cents a Pound.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The cotton market has shown continued weakness, with prices making new low records for the season during the past week. After selling off to 12.97c for December contracts on Monday, the market rallied about ½c on covering in advance of yesterday's Government report, but met increased offerings and broke very severely yesterday under a renewal of heavy general selling, inspired by the increased figures.

December deliveries sold off to 12.36c under this pressure, making a decline of near 6 cents a pound as compared with the high price of last month before the break was checked by covering and trade buying. The latter caused moderate rallies, but bearish sentiment was still very much in evidence late in the week as it looked as if the fairly good weather reported in the South since the beginning of October was leading to a further increase in estimates of the yield.

Private crop reports published in advance of the official statement had pointed to an improvement in crop prospects during the second half of September, but had hardly prepared the market for the Government's indication of 16,627,000 bales. This was about 800,000 bales above the mid-September forecast and in view of recent good weather, was regarded by many of the local traders as pointing to a possible total yield of fully 17,000,000 bales.

The South was a very heavy seller here immediately following the publication of the figures which naturally raised a question as to the effectiveness of a holding movement while so much cotton remained to be marketed in the belt, but judging from much of the current comment, prices are now low enough to attract the attention of investors as well as a forward demand from the trade.

With any slackening of selling pressure from the South the demand based on belief that prices are below the average cost of production, would be expected to make itself felt. In the meantime, some progress has been reported in plans for financing the orderly marketing of the crop and while at the end of this week some traders were talking 10-cent cotton, others were looking for stabilizing influences, either through an early appearance of an increased trade and investment demand, or a tightening up of the spot situation.

Recovery in Week-End Trade

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Yesterday's severe decline in the cotton market was followed by rallies today. After selling up to 12.93c for December contracts, or about 27 points above yesterday's low level, the market, however, met increased Southern offerings in late trading, and December closed at 12.81c. The general market closed steady, at net advances of 12 to 16 points.

The opening was barely steady at unchanged prices to a decline of nine points on overnight selling orders from the South and further selling by local traders and commission houses on the increased estimate of the crop. Offerings were much lighter than yesterday, while Liverpool made a relatively steady showing. As soon as the early selling ran its course, prices turned upward on covering for over the week-end, together with a moderate trade and commission-house demand.

Some traders were inclined to regard the comparatively small selling by the South as an indication that the hedging and spot liquidation inspired by yesterday's report had about run its course. This together with reports of rains or storms in the Southwest and the prospect of further unsettled weather which might interfere with picking, or cause some damage to the crop, no doubt increased the inclination to take profits on recent short sales after a decline of nearly 6 cents a pound from the high levels of last month. January contracts sold up to 13.02c and March to 13.25c, the general market showing net advances of about 22 to 29 points during the forenoon. Demand then tapered off as if covering of short contracts had been pretty well supplied, and the market weakened in the late trading under a renewal of liquidation and Southern selling. The latter appeared to be more active in the last half hour than earlier in the day, and last prices showed reactions of 12 or 15 points from the best.

Trading in current October contracts in this market here ended at midday. Private cables attributed steadiness in Liverpool to trade calling, covering and buying for a reaction, but said the Manchester goods market was unsettled, with business in cloth and yarn restricted.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Stock prices plunged downward again today as bear traders launched another selling attack on the theory that demoralization of the cotton market would react unfavorably on the general business situation. Concentrating their fire first on the shares of Southern railroads and industrial companies, they eventually succeeded in depressing the prices of pivotal issues and turning the course of the entire market downward. Net losses in the active stocks ranged from 2 to 8½ points.

The cotton market, however was steadied after the violent declines which preceded and followed the Government's prediction of the largest crop on record. News that the President had appointed a special committee to aid this industry in the marketing of the crop was favorably received and prices closed 12 to 16 points higher in contrast to recent displays of weakness.

The severity of the selling movement, which quickly superseded initial attempts to bid up prices, carried U. S. Steel down 3⅝ points to 142⅞ in the face of official predictions that unfilled tonnage would show an increase for September. These were borne out by the figures made public after the close of the market, revealing a gain of 51,174 tons, the second recorded this year. At the day's low point of 152⅝, steel was more than 12 points under the high figure touched a week ago today. General Motors closed 3¼ points lower at 153½, compared with last Saturday's high of 173½ and Dupont declined 8½ points to 326.

Liquidation of Southern rail and industrial shares was attributed in some quarters to a desire of financial interests in that section to devote their resources, if needed, to the support of the cotton industry. Coca-Cola slumped more than 6 points and prominent rails, including Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, Southern Railway, Chesapeake & Ohio and Norfolk & Western, were down 1 to 3½ points. Selling of the rails, however, was not confined to the Southern carriers, New York Central, Atchison and Nickel Plate showing pronounced weakness.

Despite reports that railroads were on the verge of placing large orders for rolling stock to handle their increasing traffic, shares of the equipment companies also yielded to selling pressure. Baldwin, Pullman, Westinghouse Air Brake and General Railway Signal, after an early period of strength, closed 1 to 2½ points lower.

$7,100,000 Oil Deal.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 9.—A contract has been entered into between William M. Keck, president of the Superior Oil Co., and Henry Anchester, representing New York banking interests acting for S. C. Lewis and the Julian Petroleum Corporation, whereby the outstanding capital stock of the Superior is to be purchased for $7,100,000, Anchester announced here last night.

The property will be consolidated with the California Eastern Oil Co., recently formed through a merger of Julian Petroleum and Marine Corporation.

GAINS SHOWN IN THE SMALL CURB TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Relaxation of speculative operations tending to lower quotations produced a more confiding spirit in the trading on the Curb Exchange today. Business was in smaller volume and advances were recorded in most instances on few transactions.

Warner Bros. Pictures recovered about two points at the opening and Pittsburg Lake Erie improved 2½ points on the initial transaction. Glen Alden rose about a point, while Dupont, new stock, encountered selling pressure after an early advance and suffered a loss of two points from the previous closing. Warner Bros. Pictures later cancelled its advance. Among the higher-priced issues declines of 13 points were noted in Ford Motor of Canada and 18 points in Travelers' Insurance.

Public utility shares held steady, with price changes unimportant, which condition would also apply to the early dealings in petroleum securities. A sharp break in Borne Scrymser, an inactive issue in the oil group, which sold off 20 points, had an adverse effect on others, although no undue uneasiness was discernible.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, Oct. 9.—The price of wool in Boston, strengthening, still is below parity with values in foreign markets. For this reason there is keen interest here in Australian merinos, with trading restricted rather by lack of offerings than by lack of interest. Recent buying has depleted holdings of many brokers. A few small sales were reported today in 64s to 70s in the grease on a basis of $1.05 to $1.08 clean, while choice 64s brought $1 for wool in bond. Choice 64s to 70s have brought $1.07 at Sydney during the week.

MISSOURI TIGERS WIN FROM NEBRASKA, 14-7; CLARK IN THE LIMELIGHT

ashy Halfback Scores Two Touchdowns After His Fumble Gives Cornhuskers a Score—Tigers Hold on Six-Inch Line.

ecial to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 9.—Thrills piled up in such profusion as leave 20,000 spectators dazed as Gwynn Henry's University of ssouri football team passed its way to victory, 14 to 7, over the iversity of Nebraska Cornhuskers in the Nebraska Memorial Stam here this afternoon.

Last year Tigers trimmed the Huskers, 9 to 6, and by their vicry this year they have established a precedent, for it is the first e that Missouri elevens have been able to win two games from Nebraskans in succession.

From the kick-off until the field e fired the finish gun it was breath-taking affair. On the m of the kick-off Missouri penalized 15 yards and on the down Bert Clark, who afterds shone as a star in Missouri's nse, dropped the ball and Stens of Nebraska recovered on souri's 18-yard line. Then came rrific battering of the Missouri ense. Blue Howell, sensation-Husker sophomore, carried the for seven straight downs, and n he crossed the Missouri goal a touchdown the hole in the r line was so wide he was not n tackled. Brown added the ra point and Missouri was bed, 7 to 0, with the game bare-underway.

Long Pass Starts the Big Push.

A long list of punt exchanges lowed, with the Tigers graduall gaining the upper hand, until e in the period Stuber shot a 28-rd pass to Bacchus. It looked though Bacchus was gone for touchdown, but he was stopped the Nebraska 20-yard line by Brown, Husker safety man. t was the first Tiger threat. though it failed to materialit gave a hint of what was to low.

Missouri lost the ball at the start the second quarter when O'Sullan's portside pass to Stuber was mplete.

The Huskers, having taken the l on their own 20-yard line, e unable to gain, and, drawing 15-yard penalty, sent Brown k to punt. In a ticklish sensa he got away a nice 35-yard t, which Bert Clark, Missouri lfback, took and zigzagged ough most of the Nebraska yers and across the Husker l. It was a brilliant and ath-taking return, and a penalty uing to Nebraska on the try point tied the score at 7-all, pite the fact that Stuber's place k was blocked.

rk and Stuber Work Together.

The Huskers kicked off and ter an exchange of punts the ssourians again launched their rial attack, Stuber taking a pass m Clark for a 28-yard gain. o downs later Clark staged a ggling match with two Nebraska yers, snatched Stuber's apparly blocked pass on the five-yard and ran for a second touchn. This time Stuber's toe was e, and he added a point to bring Tiger total to 14.

Once more the Tigers threatened this period, and again it was result of pass juggling. Bron tossed for Nebraska, and Bac slapped the ball into Gann's ds, giving the visitors first n on the Husker 13-yard line. hen the Nebraska defense strengned, however, and time to play

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 9.—Notre Dame showed real power in downing the fighting Minnesota team, 20 to 7, before 47,000 spectators in the Memorial stadium here today.

Held to a 7 to 7 count in the first half, Notre Dame came back with a dash and display of strength in the last two periods that definitely marked their superiority over the Gophers.

It was a costly victory for Coach Rockne. Joe Bolano, his 220-pound tackle playing in his senior year, suffered a broken leg in the first few minutes of play and Fullback Cardinal Manager Says Batting Made It Easy for Alexander and That Team Now Fears No Pitcher.

By Rogers Hornsby,

As Told to a Representative of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Well, the series ought to be over now. We ought to be on our way home with four victories in six starts. We would have the world series won and the winners' share of the spoils if it hadn't been for those little pop flies that went astray in Thursday's game at St. Louis.

However, the misfortunes have given my team a chance to show their courage and the boys certainly came through in fine style this afternoon. Alexander didn't have to pitch as hard a game as in his first start against the Yankees. We had our batting eyes with us this afternoon and I guess there's no question now about our ability to meet these great sluggers in a fence-busting match and beat them.

Shawkey and Shocker are good pitchers. There's no use denying this, but when the Cardinals are hitting they don't care who's out there on the hill and if the boys can keep up their bombardment tomorrow, it won't make any difference whether it's Hoyt or Reuther or anybody else.

About Pitching to Ruth.

There was a lot of criticism for me when Ruth found the range against our pitchers in the game in St. Louis and knocked three of them over the fence. We all knew that Ruth was pitched to badly

Card Rooters Make Killing On "Hornsby"

THE name "Hornsby" carried fear to other places than the hearts of the Yankees, yesterday. It caused several local handbookmakers to swallow their Adam's apples early in the afternoon as the Cardinals were hammering the Yanks into submission.

"Hornsby" was entered in the first race at Fairmount and he won, paying $8.90 for each $2 investment. Reports at several handbooks developed the fact that sentimental fans had got down with the family jewels. As one bookie expressed it: "You'd have thought it was McChesney or Man O'War running, the way they bit at the Hornsby bait."

Hornsby had started once before, finishing second.

Jockey Draws Long Suspension For Foul Riding

Fairmount Stewards Rule R. Cheatham Off for Remainder of Meeting.

Jockey R. Cheatham, a redheaded lad who attained some distinction as a consistent winner last spring, was suspended for the balance of the meeting by the Fairmount Jockey Club stewards yesterday when he was found guilty of grabbing the saddle cloth of the filly Choice, in the third race. Cheatham was astride Fire Under and his rough riding resulted in much interference for Choice and possibly caused the filly to lose valuable ground. She finished fourth while Cheatham's mount was second, half a length behind Elias O, the winner.

This is the most drastic penalty assessed by the stewards since the revival of racing at the East Side track, a year ago.

Prickly Heat Wins Feature.

Under favorable weather conditions, a large crowd attended yesterday's program which was featured by the victory of Prickly Heat in the Dixie Land Handicap. The winner, owned by F. H. Smith, was an extreme outsider and paid his supporters at the rate of $35.10 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

Iron Mask, a frequent winner on Chicago tracks during the past summer and carrying the top impost in the race, went disappointingly and brought up in last place. Cudgeller displayed the most

TEAM MAKES 13 HITS, SIX FOR EXTRA BASES, AGAINST 3 PITCHERS

Alexander Baffles Yankees While Shawkey, Shocker and Thomas Are Pounded.

By Alan J. Gould,

Of the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Cardinals, fighting like falcons instead of Red Birds, clawed their way back into the thick of the world series battle this afternoon while their old pitching master, Grover Cleveland Alexander, subdued the Yankees for the second time.

Rallying behind the effective box work of their ancient right-hander, the National League champions crushed their rivals in the sixth game by a score of 10 to 2 with an attack of such savage fury that neither Bob Shawkey nor Urban Shocker, stars of the Yankee twirling troupe, could check it.

The victory put the Cardinals back on even terms with the Yankees, each with three games to their credit, and forced the baseball championship struggle to the limit of seven games for the third year in a row.

A Stirring Comeback.

It was a stirring comeback for the Cardinals, battling for the first time in the game's greatest classic, and on the strength of it they may have whatever odds prevail for the seventh and deciding game tomorrow at the Yankee Stadium. Not only have the sluggers of St. Louis reached the peak, after a relapse that threatened to put them out of the running on home grounds, but they are further fortified for the decisive test in pitching.

When Rogers Hornsby has big Jess Haines, hero of a shutout triumph over the Yankees, primed for tomorrow's big battle, Miller Huggins probably will call on Waite Hoyt to take the mound out of turn. Shocker was slated for the seventh game but he shared the bombardment with Shawkey today.

An official weather forecast of overcast skies was viewed as particularly favorable for Haines, a fast ball pitcher. The weather man predicted showers would hold off until Sunday night, and that the day would be warmer than today, when a chill October air held down the attendance.

A chill wind swept the Yankee Stadium today keeping the attendance down to 48,000, but it blew the Cardinals some good. With the grandstand cool enough to be festooned with icicles, the Cardinals festooned the surrounding stretches with base hits. They clinched the game in the first inning by smashing in three runs off Shawkey before the red-flanneled arm of the Yankee veteran had had time to settle down. Except for a few intervals thereafter, the Cardinal clouting kept up a steady bombardment, coming to a climax in the seventh when Shawkey was shelled from the hill and his successor, Shocker, likewise hammered as five runs clattered over the plate.

Cards 3 to 5 Favorites to Win Last Game

Following the victory of the Cardinals over the Yankees yesterday, tying the world series at 3 to 3, local bookmakers announced that the prices for the deciding game would be: Yankees even money, Cardinals 3 to 5. That is to say, Cardinal supporters must put up $5 to win $3.

The odds on the series, of course, were identical.

Alex Like Rock of Gibraltar When Yanks Get Men on Bases

Lester Bell, stalwart third baseman, was the big gun in the barrage laid down by the Cardinal attack. His single in the first inning sent over two runs, including what proved to be the winning tally, while in the seventh he walloped a terrific home run into the left field stand that scored Bottomley ahead of him.

Bell had one other hit, a single, in the ninth, but his two big blows were sufficient to enable him to tie the world's series record for driving in runs. By sending four across altogether, he equaled the single-game mark first set by Elmer Smith in 1920, when he hit a home run with the bases full against Brooklyn, and tied by Babe Ruth last Wednesday when the Yankee star hit out three homers, one of them with a mate on base.

All told, the Cardinals registered 13 safe blows, six of them for extra bases, off the combined deliveries of Shawkey, Shocker and young Myles Thomas, who twirled the last two innings. O'Farrell and Alexander, the Cardinal battery, alone failed to figure in the hit column, but their bats weren't needed as they formed a combination that effectually checked the attacking efforts of their opponents.

It was too one-sided a game to be thrilling and too chilly for much warmth of spirit on the part of the crowd that left big vacant stretches of seats in the stands for the first time in any game of the series so far.

Yet there was a dramatic touch to the Cardinal rally and the second victory of Alexander, rawboned, 39-year-old veteran, who has come back in the twilight of his career to turn in two of his greatest performances. Old Aleck stands tied with Herb Pennock, southpaw star of the Yankees, in winning two games, but to him goes the glory of twice having pulled the Cardinals back to even terms when their fortunes seemed at low ebb.

Just as he did in the second game, when he rallied the National League champions after a mediocre start, Alexander seemed to revitalize the Cardinals by his steadiness and confidence on the mound. He was hit a bit harder today than before, allowing eight hits where he permitted only four the first time, but he was the Rock of Gibraltar itself whenever the Yankees threatened.

The Old Master's Control So Good That in 104 Pitches He Misses the Plate Only 29 Times—"Old Soupbone" Fails to Weaken.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Only the statistics of the game bring out the real greatness of Grover Cleveland Alexander's world series pitching effort today, which sent the world series of 1926 to the seventh game. Always a master of control, Alex never exhibited it better than he did in gaining his second triumph of the series.

The figures on the game show that during the nine rounds, Alexander pitched but 104 times. That in itself is remarkable. It has been beaten, inasmuch as Herb Pennock used but 101 to win the opener of the series.

But the great Cardinal righthander established a new figure for the series in the matter of the fewest number of called balls in a world series game of 1926.

The figures on the nine innings show that Hank O'Day, veteran National League umpire, who worked behind the plate, was forced to call but 29 balls. That is an average of just a little more than three bad pitches during the entire contest, and it shows that old Pete was master of his control throughout.

He walked two batters, Ruth in the sixth and Meusel in the eighth. That's as wild as "Old Pete" ever gets. But to go further into Alexander's remarkable pitching in the sixth game: On only two other batters were there as many as three called balls.

One of these fortunate athletes was Babe Ruth in the first, before he grounded to Bottomley for an easy out. The other was Lou Gehrig in the fourth. However, as was the case on Ruth in the first, Alexander regained his control and retired the Yankee first-sacker on a roller to Hornsby.

In four of the nine innings, Alexander threw only one pitch wide of the plate. These were the second, third, seventh and ninth.

The largest number of wide pitches for the Cardinal ace came in the sixth, when eight of his efforts were wide of the plate. It was remarkable to watch the old master put the ball almost where he wanted to. It was the finest exhibition of control seen in many a day. The Yankees found early in the pastime that it did not do them any good to stand up there and wait out Alexander. Old Pete was just a bit too much for them when it came to control.

Alexander's remarkable game is more forcibly brought out when the following facts are taken into consideration:

In the first four innings, he pitched but 41 times, whereas Bob Shawkey in the first inning alone was forced to pitch 37 times, a difference of only four. But in the first inning, Shawkey threw 14 pitches wide of the plate, whereas Alexander in the first five innings hurled but 12 wide of the rubber.

Statistics on Alexander's game from start to finish read as follows:

First inning—Nine strikes, four balls.

Second—Four strikes, one ball.

Third—Eight strikes, one ball.

Fourth—Ten strikes, four balls.

Fifth—Six strikes, two balls.

Sixth—Eleven strikes, eight balls.

Seventh—Twelve strikes, one ball.

Eighth—Eight strikes, seven balls.

Ninth—Eight strikes, one ball.

Passes Three Men in Two Games.

Alexander in the 18 innings he now has pitched in the world series has walked but three batters and his six strikeouts today raised his total in the two games to 16, the best shown by any of the hurlers who have worked to date.

While Alexander needed but 104 pitches to subdue the enemy for the second time, the Yankees' pitchers were forced to throw 142 times in the nine rounds. Of this total 92 were over the plate while 50 were wide.

Bob Shawkey, while he was on the hill, threw 70 strikes and 37 balls. Urban Shocker, former Brownie in his two-thirds of an inning tossed 11 strikes and six balls, while Thomas in the last two frames pitched 11 strikes and seven balls. Which only goes to show how completely Alexander outhurled his three rivals on the New York American League club.

For the sixth time in the series, the Cardinals pitched to Babe Ruth and for the fifth time, the Babe failed to hit any home runs. In fact, he went hitless and he did not even get so much as a hard fly to an outfield.

Pitching to Ruth.

Pitching to Babe, Alexander performed as follows:

First inning—Ruth rolled to Bottomley.

Third—Ruth rolled to Bottomley.

Sixth—The Babe worked the call to three and two and walked.

Seventh—Rolled to Thevenow.

And Ruth came to the plate in pinches on two occasions. In the third, runners were on first and second when he came up, while in the seventh, there were runners on second and third. But Alex knows how to pitch. And he showed it by the easy way in which he disposed of the home-run king in these two tight spots. It was real hurling and the crowd applauded Alex loud and long when he went back to the bench after each round.

The Yankee pitchers were not as fortunate against Hornsby.

In the first, the Cardinal manager walked. In the third he rolled to Koenig. In the fifth he grounded to Lazzeri. In the seventh, to start against Shocker, he singled to drive in a run, while in the ninth, facing Thomas, his infield roller sent the final Cardinal run across the plate.

And now the seventh game. Hornsby's ace is Jess Haines, while Huggins will probably use either Shocker, clouted last Sunday and today, or Dutch Reuther, another who has been pounded.

Clubhouse Chatter After Game

Cardinals, jubilant over victory, confident they will win series—Huggins says his team won't be stopped again.

By Brian Bell
Of the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Jubilant Cardinal players made the welkin ring in their clubhouse after today's game had returned the St. Louis club the winner and extended the world series to its full length of seven games.

"They can't beat us now," declared the National Leaguers. "We came from behind again, and we'll win tomorrow."

Rogers Hornsby, manager of the National League champions, joined in the enthusiasm of his men, although he managed to control his emotion. He was confident, however, when he said:

"Alexander stopped them and won, just as I said he would. Alex has left a mark for the next generation to aim at, with his world series games 11 years apart.

"I was absolutely confident that Alex would beat the Yankees today and I am just as confident that Jess Haines will beat them again tomorrow and give us the championship. Jess may not shut them out again, but we don't figure he will have to, to win.

"We hit the ball today when we had to, and we will hit again tomorrow when hits will mean even more than they did today."

The Yankees took their defeat philosophically. They were frankly disappointed, for they had expected to end the series today, but they had not lost courage, and declared that while they will have to wait another day for their championship victory, it would none the less surely be returned tomorrow.

"We didn't hit," somewhat sadly remarked Manager Miller Huggins. "The boys are playing some 'in and out' baseball in this series, but it will be all right when we win tomorrow. Alexander had a better game left in his system than we thought, and he was better than our pitchers today.

"We have too good a club to be stopped twice in a row, when the championship hinges on one game. We will be there tomorrow."

Huggins said that he was impressed today, as he has been in previous games, by the sterling play of his three young infielders, who have not cracked under the strain, as it had been suggested they might.

Hornsby praised the play of Roscoe Holm, a Cardinal substitute, in the sixth game. He called attention to the hitting and fielding of the center fielder, who was playing his second full game of the series on account of injuries to Taylor Douthit.

Manager Huggins was not ready to announce his pitching choice for the final game tomorrow, and may not decide definitely until just before the game. He was known to favor Waite Hoyt, who has a winning game in the series to his credit, as first choice, with an outside possibility that "Dutch" Ruether would get the assignment.

ST. LOUIS U. HIGH AND ST. CHARLES TIE

St. Louis U. High's football team and St. Charles played a scoreless tie at St. Charles yesterday, a heavy field slowing down the teams. The St. Louis team got close to a score in the opening quarter but within 10 yards of the goal line, Achepohl of St. Charles intercepted a pass. After a fumble, the ball changed hands and Kruel ran 14 yards through the line, getting out of danger.

Selling of St. Charles and Airnt and Farrell of St. Louis U. High starred also.

John McGraw Thinks Old Bob Made a Terrible Mista Not Pitching Curves—Praises Work of Thevenow and Holm.

By John J. McGraw.
(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Cardinals won the sixth ga carried the series into a seventh largely because Bob Shawkey on the theory that Hornsby's outfit couldn't hit fast ball pitchi found himself badly fooled. It's been a long time since I ha that many fast balls pitched in a ball game.

Bob, grand old veteran that he is, threw one fast ball after another in the first inning and was hit solidly by Holm, Bottomley and Lester Bell. Those clean wallops drove in three runs and gave Alexander just the lead that he needed.

Old Alex didn't pitch as good a game as he did a week ago against the Yanks, but he knew what he was doing in the pinches. It is a wonderful thing that old Alex after all his years has won two games in a world series in addition to helping the Cardinals win the pennant. He will go down in history as one of the great masters of baseball. The big crowd showed plainly how well his efforts were appreciated.

Now that the Cardinals have come back by knocking the ball all over the lot I expect them to start Jess Haines in this deciding game to put a quick finish on the series. If he does anything like his good work in St. Louis, Haines ought to win.

No Intention to Use Shocker.

Huggins is in a ticklish position for selecting a pitcher. To a baseball manager it was quite evident that he has no intention of pitching Shocker in the final game when he sent him out to warm up the moment Shawkey got in trouble.

Huggins' judgment was confirmed when the Cardinals started right off on Shocker in the seventh inning by hitting a single, a home run and a double. I did not think that Shocker could beat the Cardinals and said so at the start of the series.

I have not talked with Huggins but the only logical conclusion to draw from his using Shocker is that he intends to come back. A manager is not saving up pitchers for next week now and the thing to play is the best card in the deck, I should think.

It is possible that Huggins will start Hoyt and have Pennock ready or many turn them around the other way. Pennock is said to need a lot of rest, but in a case like this I imagine that he is eager to get in there. A pitching artist like Pennock will always give a good account of himself.

There is little to be said about that one-sided sixth game except that the Cardinals hopped on Shawkey's fast ball and hammered it hard. Luck did not figure this game. The Yankees ply held tight by Alexander, the Cards slugged the ball.

WASHINGTON U. OUTCLASSES ROLLA MINERS, WINNING 25 TO 2

yes, Senne, Collins and Harding Score Touchdowns —Thomas, Rolla Quarterback, Is Carried Off the Field.

By J. Walter Goldstein.

A group of young engineering students from Rolla School of es learned all the horrors of entombment yesterday afternoon. ncis Field served as their laboratory and the Washington University football squad as an unrelenting faculty. Before they were reed from the wreckage the score was 25 to 2; but the scor does begin to tell the story.

Washington.	Position.	Rolla.

McDonald	R. E.	Sharp
Hayes	Q. B.	Thomas
Senne	L. H.	Lemon
McDonough	R. H.	Ledford
Whittler	F. B.	Lee (c)

Substitutions: Washington—Millard for Hayes, Vesper for Elliott, Harding for McDonough, Hoffman for Kaplan, Jacoby for Libman, Hall for Senne, Duncan for McCarroll, Burch for Millard, Rickert for Senne, Rossetti for McDonald, Lohrding for Millard, Bray for Rossetti, Miller for McCarroll, Bradley for Whittler, Campbell for Rickert, Drake for Libman, Heinrichs for Miller, Mikkelson for Collins, Sturbers for Mikkelson, Bohlinger for Drake, Brown for Vesper, Brown for Jacoby, Berkowitz for Hoffman, Stock for Libman, Ling for Bray, Lorenz for Bradley. Rolla—Cavanaugh for Lemon, McCauley for Allback, Herbert for McCauley, Defoe for Johnson, Hogdon for Bolen, Cavanaugh for Thomas.

hese Miners, who are perennial rs at the local campus, are lly worthy foemen. In recent s they have provided Washington with the few bright spots in rwise drab seasons; but the es have always been severe and ly decided by more than a hdown margin. Yesterday, the State players were so far outed by the Green varsity that h Higgins decided to give his re squad an airing, with the re that more than 30 Washington rs saw service, the third g athletes proving quite able hold the cause.

e 25 Washington points repre four touchdowns and one subnt point scored by a placekick following the last cross f the Rolla goal. The visitors able to score only through a y, which came in the third pe s a result of a poor pass from r when Wittler was endeavorto punt out of danger. The ricocheted past him, and, after ering it, he was brought to ground before returning to the -marked territory.

Hayes First to Score.

ashington entered the game out the services of Capt. Ma halfback, or Kurz, a husky d; but not much of the play spent before it was learned these men were not needed. a punt had been returned to 0-yard line, McDonough start lone-handed assault which ght 20 yards in three offle smashes. Then Hayes started n a wide end run, cut in at le and scampered 52 yards field for a touchdown. The was missed when Elliot flivved ss back to Wittler.

in the same quarter, the took possession in midfield McDonough and Hayes sponanother attack. The pair of alternated carrying the ball, scrimmage producing five to yards. When the ball was ced to the 20-yard line, it d as if the scoring effort be scotched by a 15-yard y; but a 15-yard forward Whittler to McDonough, red this loss and then Senne hrough a broken field for 26 and another touchdown. This like the preceding score, through a tackle cut-in.

ashington's third score was er earned than the two earlier To open the second half, e took the kick-off on his -yard mark and, aided by a -sweeping interference, red 45 yards to Rolla's 47-yard With only one man to pass, med as if he were headed for Hall of Fame through a run e field, but the lone defender ht him down.

line smashes and then a 33pass, Whittler to McDonough, the Bears first down on 's 12-yard line. McDonough skirted left end for 11 yards t was first down with a yard Here the Miners stood val, turning back three line On the fourth there was a local fumble with a Miner covering; but the visitors had the misfortune to be offside so the play was brought back and Washington was given another chance. Clyde Collins was then called back from his tackle position to tote the ball and he leaped over the line for a touchdown. The try for goal was blocked by a Rolla forward.

Harding Scores Final Touchdown.

A third brilliant run resulted in the last score of the day. Early in the fourth period, Harding, a substitute back, shot through tackle, reversed his field and eluded a half dozen would-be tacklers to make a 39-yard run to the Miner goal line.

Just how many points Washington would have scored had McDonough, Whittler, Hayes, McCarroll, Senne and the other first-string men stayed in the play is a matter of conjecture. This lad, "Micky" McDonough, was a Tartar and gained almost at will. Hayes returned punts with the grace of a Mordkin and was always good for a long advance after kicks. The "subs" showed nice running skill; but there was not the definition of attack with them carrying the ball as characterized the first team play.

Rolla showed offensive strength on two occasions, advancing the ball 42 yards at a stretch in the third period and 35 yards in the second. Strength to sustain the drives were lacking both times. This was surprising, since the veteran Rolla backfield of Ledford, Lee, Lemon and Thomas is a powerful one and last year proved difficult for Washington to stop.

All in all, it was a fine day for Washington adherents, even if most of them did forget their slickers and got thoroughly dampened. The Victory Bell chimed merrily at the close of hostilities and everybody went home with nothing to worry about except the Nebraska team, which calls next Saturday.

He d the Yankee star once, in sixth, but in three other atts the Babe could not get the ut of the infield. Twice Ruth to bat with two on bases and ut, but each time he was reeasily.

Alex Never in Danger.

e furious attack with which Cardinals greeted Shawkey in first inning gave Alexander a ient margin to work on, and gh rapped hard at times, he never in danger, as his teamincreased their advantage. support was not perfect, an by Bell contributing toward the Yankee runs, but Southcame through with a sensatumbling catch of Dugan's er in a neighth-inning pinch, g Meusel off second to a threatening Yankee rally. ow made one error, but also contributed a fielding gem in the second inning when he robbed Lazzeri of a hit with a wonderful stop over second, throwing out his man and holding Meusel, who had doubled, to the middle bag.

It was a day for heroic work by the Cardinals as a whole and not the least of them was the centerfield substitute, Roscoe (Wattie) Holm, who replaced the injured Taylor Douthit.

Holm, who figured in three scoring rallies altogether, besides starring in the field, began the Cardinal cannonade in the first inning with a single to right. He was forced by Southworth, but Hornsby walked and Bottomley doubled, scoring Southworth, while Bell crashed a drive past Dugan that sent over Hornsby and Bottomley.

Shawkey tightened after this, striking out Hafey and O'Farrell to end the first inning and breezing through the next three without allowing a hit.

Thevenow's single, Alexander sacrifice nad Holm's blow over second base produced another run in the fifth, and Shawkey's downfall finally came in the seventh.

A muff of a throw by Tony Lazzeri, and Meusel's misjudgment of a fly, proved damaging in this inning, but not nearly so damaging as the Cardinal bats. Thevenow opened the attack with a single to left and all hands were safe when Lazzeri dropped Severeid's throw to first on Alexander's sacrifice bunt. Holm forced Thevenow, but Southworth doubled, the blow being lost by Meusel in the sun, and Alexander tallied.

Biggest Victory in Many Seasons for the Billikens, Who Show Nice Versatility on Both Offense and Defense; Make Touchdowns Al most at Will.

By Jack Alexander.

For the first time since fullbacks wore noseguards and cut their hair with aid of a pretzel bowl and a pair of shears St. Louis University defeated an opponent by an oppressive score yesterday. At least, it seems that long. Before 3000 alumni and friends at Sportsman's Park, the Billikens socked good old Drury College to the tune of 52 to 0. And that's pretty oppressive.

Men were present whose memory carried them back to the days when a man could not only buy a heavy mug of beer for five cents, which had to be raised with both hands, but actually did and the football men of the Blue and White were his toast; when the Bulldogs (as the Billikens were then called) were the idols of the athletic youth of the city and went in for peg top trousers and four-minute derby hats; when the name of St. Louis U. was a threat in the football world and "that fellow Cochems out west" was developing a play in which the ball was thrown down the field instead of carried.

Marquette Next Week.

These old-timers saw a very good team perform against Drury and exhibit a diversified type of football. Its play was smooth, well-coordinated and thoroughly prepped-up in the art of interference. It plunged, swept the ends and forward passed with equal facility. The line held and the line opened holes. It was a young group of players, most of whom were new to varsity work, but each cog in the machine performed effectively.

Even if this year's squad is not in the big time class (and this will be decided next Saturday against Marquette) it stands for an athletic system that promises much for the Billiken athletics of several years hence. Athletic director Mathews has done away entirely with the star system and is drilling in the idea of subordination of the individual to the good of the group. Probably the outstanding feature of his eleven is that it is well drilled.

Long runs were in order yesterday and were made by Kearns, Jordan, Feld, Kennedy and Denvir time after time. At the close of the first half the Billikens had run up 20 points and came back stronger in the second half to count 32. Drury could make only four first downs while the locals were reeling off 27. In addition the Billikens averaged 22 yards on their completed forward passes.

Meusel and Southworth Hit First Triples of the Series

Lazzeri Turns His First Error in Six Games—Yankees' Lead-Off Batter Gets on Base in Six Innings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

The series had been marked by the absence of three-base hits until the sixth game, when two were recorded. Meusel tripled in the fourth inning and Southworth followed suit in the ninth. Meusel and Southworth each had a two-ply swat to go with the three-base blows.

Lester Bell, who was late starting to hit, seems to have struck his stride. He drove out a double and single in the final game at St. Louis and today contributed a home run and two singles. One of the singles and the home run were equally efficient. The single in the first inning scored Hornsby and Bottomley and Bottomley was again on base when his home run soared into the left field stands.

Bottomley made two hits for four bases. His second double was hard hit but the first was converted into two bases when Bob Meusel lost it in the sun and just reached the drive with the tips of his fingers.

Ruth rolled twice to Bottomley, once to Thevenow and drew a pass. Alexander pitched to him every time. When the Big Bam drew his base on balls two strikes had been called and the fourth ball was a pitch that Alexander tried to slip over a corner.

Shawkey, after being nicked for three hits and as many runs with only one out in the first, forced Hafey and O'Farrell to miss third strikes and retired the next six men in order before breaking the spell by passing Bell to start the fourth. There were only three batsmen in the inning, however, as Bell was put down trying to steal third.

Lazzeri made his first error of the series in the seventh. He dropped Severeid's throw on Alexander's sacrifice bunt, the ball bounding away as if his glove had been filled with rubber.

Determination of Team and Hitting Won Sixth Game, Alexander Says

Pitcher Admits His Work in B ox Helped but Declares Mates Would Have Batted Any Hurler to Vic tory.

By Grover Cleve land Alexander.

As Told to a Representative of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—We walked on the field at the Yankee Stadium today determined to even up the series. That determination or "fighting spirit" we displayed right in the first inning by slamming Bob Shawkey for three runs.

The determnation grew stronger as the game wore on and tomorrow we'll be out there with more "fighting spirit" and Big Jess Haines. Haines shut out the Yankees in St. Louis and he'll win the championship for us tomorrow.

I was the first one in the clubhouse after the game. As I sat on my stool in front of the locker, the other players came dashing in and shook my hand.

"That was great pitching, Alex, old boy," they commented. A mob of fans attempted to shake my hand, or pat me on the back when I left the stadium.

"Hitting Won the Game."

But while my pitching helped, it was great hitting that won the game for us. The boys hit today and when the Cardinals hit, no pitcher in the country can hold them in check. Right in the opening inning they gave me a three-run lead to work on and when I walked out to the pitchers' box in the first inning, I said to myself:

"The boys have done their part. Now it's up to you. Don't fail them."

And that good right arm of mine didn't fail me. It behaved like a little major. It never tired once and it was as strong at the finish as it was at the start of the game. The day was cold, however, and at times I had trouble in cutting loose with my fast ball, but my control was exceptionally good with men on the bases, and that was what helped me to my second victory of the series.

Cold Affected Control.

It was my control that kept Ruth from hitting. Every ball that Babe hit broke on the inside of the plate, close enough so that the big fellow could do no damage. I did not purposely pass him in the sixth inning. I tried to get the ball over the plate but my arm was a bit cold at that time and the last ball I pitched to him failed to break right.

Before the series started, Hornsby declared that we would pitch to Ruth. We have pitched to Ruth from the start and outside of his hitting three home runs in the fourth game of the series, the Babe has done no real damage to us.

But make no mistake, he's a great hitter, and is likely to knock the ball out of the park any time that he comes up to the plate.

"We're Better Club."

All of the Cardinals are satisfied now that we'll win the championship. We believe that we have the better ball club now and will prove it in the seventh game. We're hitting now and are gong into the final battle with a pitcher that shut out the American League champions in the third game of the series.

Not only was our hitting good, but so was the fielding. The work of Tommy Thevenow around shortstop was brilliant. I told the readers in my first article for the Post-Dispatch that Thevenow was the best shortstop in the National League. While not a spectacular player, he is steady and can go as far either way after a ground ball as any other shortstop in the big league.

Thevenow Started Rally.

That stop that he made in the second inning was one of the prize plays of the series. It helped, too, for it shut off a run and saved me a lot of trouble. Don't overlook the fact that it was a single by the shortstop in the seventh inning that started us to five runs and made certain of victory. He is one of the heroes of the series.

I felt a bit sorry for Bob Shawkey. Bob, like myself, has been around baseball many years and a victory would have been a great thing for him. But it was not in the cards for Shawkey to win. He ran into the Cardinals when they were hitting and was batted out of the box.

I had more luck. The Cardinals gave me a comfortable lead and my arm didn't fail me. That's the way it goes in baseball.

I want to thank the fans of New York for the way they have treated the Cardinals at the Stadium. They have been fair and square, ever ready to applaud when a good play was made.

Harvard Loses Again, 19 to 14

Holy Cross Scores 3 Touchdowns in Last Half to Win.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 9.—A revamped Harvard team, with only three regulars in the opening line-up lost its second consecutive game when Holy Cross won today, 19 to 14.

After scoring two touchdowns in the first half, the Crimson offense collapsed as the Purple Backs completed 30 and 40-yard passes from all sections, once from far behind their goal line.

With the ball on the Purple's one-yard line in the fourth period, Sayles fumbled and Daley recovered for Holy Cross. Wise, standing behind the Holy Cross goal line, hurled a forward pass to Healy and the latter came down on his 20-yard line. Wise threw four more and the ball rested on Harvard's 16-yard line.

"I'll Use Hoyt In Final Game"-- Miller Huggins

"Nobody to Blame for Yesterday's Defeat; Just a Wild Affair," Rabbit Says.

By Miller Huggins.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—I'll pitch Waite Hoyt in the final game of the series tomorrow. I've decided that definitely. Hoyt won his last game, you will remember, and though he was hit fairly hard at times he had a lot of stuff in the pinches. And Hoyt is the type of pitcher who gets better the second time he faces a club.

The Cardinals, no doubt, will come back with Jess Haines, who shut us out in the third game. But, frankly, I do not expect Haines to go as well in this final game as he did before. He's the type of pitcher my men ought to hit hard —and I expect them to do some hitting tomorrow.

There's nothing much to be said about today's game. The Cardinals were on one of those wild hitting sprees when every man was smacking the cover of the ball. We had one just like it in St. Louis a few days ago. Streaks like that come to every ball club and there is nothing to be done about it. I imagine any pitcher we had sent in would have taken the same sort of punching. And as a matter of fact, so far as the remaining game is concerned, that smacking today does not mean anything.

Game a "Wild Affair."

If we had lost by a close score it would have been different. In that case my men probably would have been blaming each other and staying awake all night trying to figure out ways they could have won. Now they do not need to. They lost in a wild affair of the sort that happens now and then and that's all there is to it.

The feature of the game, of course, aside from the smashing hitting of the Cards, was the pitching of Grover Cleveland Alexander. Alex pitched great ball. He had a lot of stuff—and more than that he had perfect control.

He also had a brain that was working every minute. There is no getting away from the fact that Alex is a smart pitcher—as smart as they come. And his experience helped him a lot in that battle today. But they have no Alexander to throw in there tomorrow. They have to go with a man less experienced. I figure I have the pitching edge. I have Hoyt, Reuther and Jones all ready, and I won't leave a man in there very long if he is being hit. Hornsby has Haines and after that he is up against it.

I will say frankly that I had hoped to see the series ended and the Yankees victorious today. That is natural enough. But the minute the Cardinals started slamming the ball I knew that we had a seventh game on our hands. So did all the boys on our club—and right away they started making their plans.

And I know I never had a club that could come from behind better or one that was less affected by bad breaks. We had an error today, but it was an excusable one. If you go through the record you will see that my kids have played great ball all through. They have not cracked in the tight places. And they won't.

"HORNSBY" AMONG FAIRMOUNT WINNERS

early speed and led his five opponents under mild restraint for the first three-quarters. Thereafter Prickly Heat which had been closest in pursuit moved up determinedly and in the sharp drive that ensued during the stretch, Prickly Heat proved the stronger and he was drawing away from the Bedwell representative steadily at the end. The time, 1:46 for the mile and a sixteenth, was by far the fastest that has been recorded during the present meeting.

Backers of favorites were again sadly off in their judgment, for outsiders were successful in most instances.

In the secondary feature, J. C. McGill's Manzana was victor after a game effort to down Basket Picnic. The latter displayed a fine order of speed and held on tenaciously only succumbing to the persistent Manzana in the last 70 yards. Gliding Fox finished in third place here with Blockhead and Dr. Clark following.

The field of 12 raced closely grouped here until the last furlong, where the Bedwell representative secured an advantage and retained it to the end to win from Aurieda and Miss Chiniquy in third place.

The concluding number found Vennie Day, an outsider, grouped with others in the field, the victress over Alard with Lavinia in third place. Alard had been the leader in the early stages and after he had disposed of Lavinia he looked a certain winner but he succumbed when Vennie Day came with a resolute challenge in the last sixteenth. Super King and Magic Light expected contenders were never strongly in the running.

LAVERN FATOR RIDES THREE WINNERS AT JAMAICA RACE TRAC

SWEEPSTER IS VICTOR IN THE BALDWIN STAKE

Noah, Left at Post, Comes Fast, but Too Late to Beat Nida, Ridden by Fator—Big Crowd in Spite of World Series.

By G. F. T. Ryall.

JAMAICA, Oct. 9.—The Rancocas Stable, Sam Hildreth and Lavern Fator held one of their old-time field days at Jamaica track this afternoon. Sweepster carried the white and green of Harry F. Sinclair to victory in the Baldwin Handicap and then Nida beat Powhatan a nod in the Montague Handicap with Navigator third. Both were ridden by Fator, who also had the leg up on Gnome Girl, winner of the opening race of the day.

In spite of the conflicting attraction, the battle between the Yankees and the Cardinals at the Stadium, a crowd almost up to holiday proportions turned out for the last Saturday's racing of the season on the Long Island tracks. And they saw some horse racing.

The whole completion of the race might have been changed had Noah not been flatfooted at the start, but even Noah at his best would have had to be a sharp horse to head Powhatan in the Montague.

He stepped off the first quarter in 23 seconds and the half in 46 2-5 Nida, who was giving him 8 pounds according to the scale and six more than she did when she beat him a few days ago, stuck to him all the way. Rounding the turn, Powhatan bore out slightly allowing Navigator to slip up on the rail and at the furlong pole it looked as though the Greentree Stable's colt would come on but he weakened at the sixteenth pole.

Ellis was singularly unfortunate with Noah, the favorite. He seemed to be wool gathering when the barrier went up and then sent his mount after the field with a rush. Despite the pace of Powhatan, Noah moved up Resolutely rounding the turn and it looked as though he had just a chance, but the effort was too great and he tired in the last furlong. The time for the distance was 1:12, the fastest race of the day.

The Rancocas Stable had a profitable afternoon as the Baldwin Handicap was worth $4500 to the winner and the Montague Handicap worth $3025. Cheops' third money brought the total to $7825.

Sweepster Best in 2-Year-Old Race.

Sweepster and Cheops, from the Rancocas Stable, finished one, two in the fourteenth running of the Baldwin Handicap for 2-year-olds at six furlongs. Sweepster, under top weight of 124 pounds, took the track in the first furlong and stood a hard drive all the way to win by a length and a half, while Cheops, outrun for the first couple of furlongs, as usual, closed with a rush and was beaten for the place by a head. The time for the distance was 112 3-5.

Nine 2-year-olds faced the starter and there was a delay of five minutes at the post occasioned in the main by the fractiousness of Saxon and Don Bonero. When the break came, Saxon was away on his toes with Donnez Moi close up and Sweepster third. Approaching the turn out of the back stretch, Fator sent Sweepster up on the outside and to the front. Cheops, down on the rail, managed to improve his position but was no help to his stable companion. Saxon, winner of the Babylon Handicap at Aqueduct, which was receiving six pounds from Sweepster, fought on gamely but Fator outrode Ellis to the sixteenth pole and then the latter had all that he could do to save the place.

The race was a fast one, considering the going, Sweepster stepping the quarter in 24, the half in 47 and the six furlongs in 112 3-5. Donnez Moi again disappointed, tiring badly in the last furlong.

Spugs beat a field of cheap ones over the mile and a furlong route, coming from behind the pace of Foreman around the stretch turn. Kumonin was third.

J. L. Holland, who won the opening event with Gnome Girl, won the last with Ramoneur, a roan colt, by Sweep. The Green Tree Stables' Arrogant was second and J. E. Madden's Horicon third. Arrogant was away running while Ramoneur had to make up a lot of ground on the outside. When the roan did get to the front he hung onto the end, although Arrogant was wearing him down. Sonata was away badly and Fator rushed him into a contending position rounding the turn, but he tired. Lester Doctor's War Flame also will bear watching.

YALE WINS FROM GEORGIA, 19 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 9.—Although Georgia put up a sturdy resistance, Yale's brilliant aerial attack and Bruce Caldwell's line plunges gave the Elis a 19 to 0 victory over the Southerners here this afternoon.

Yale's passing game was solved in the latter part of the game by Georgia, the visitors intercepting six tosses and forcing the Elis to abandon their forward passing.

Latter, probably much the best, was away poorly and had to race wide when forced out by Dr. Glenn. Moss Fox II came with a rush through stretch and was going fastest. Dizzy Blonde showed good speed for a half mile. Meding Mattie was taken back in first quarter. Bob Cahill was away poorly.

Jenny Dear Wins Best Race on Aurora Card

Filly Captures Geneva Purse Over Five and a Half Furlongs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AURORA, Ill., Oct. 9.—The best race at Washington Park this afternoon was the fourth event, which brought together six good youngsters, over the five and a half furlong route. It was a condition race, carrying an endowment of $1100 and named The Geneva Purse.

L. M. Severson's good filly, Jenny Dear, piloted by Jockey J. Morar, proved the best, when she led every inch of the trip, and had a three-length margin over The Hovel, from the Durnell stable, when the finishing line was reached. B. Berman's The Wire raced to third place, barely outlasting the Joliet Stable's Riot. The latter was a pronounced favorite, but showed a dull performance, and failed of getting in a contending position at any stage of the tilt.

Allen Brothers continued on their winning way when their 10-year-old mare Ring, piloted by the diminutive Morar, racing gamely, outstayed C. E. Durnell's Finis Glorious through the last eighth mile in a sharp drive to win the purse in the third number. The two dominated the early running, with Finis Glorious setting the pace and Ring forcing him to do his best to retain the lead. After going five eighths of a mile, Morar took his mount to the outside and gradually wearing him down, took a small lead at the eighth post, and managed to outlast him. May Buddy came from the rear with a rush in the last quarter mile and finished close up, after saving much ground in the inside easily secured third money.

H. Herron's old campaigner, Royal Charlie, going in improved form and given a hustling ride by Jockey L. Whitacre, proved a surprise in annexing the opening race, a dash.

NOTRE DAME SHOWS REAL POWER IN DEFEATING MINNESOTA TEAM

ROCKNE MEN BRILLIANT IN SECOND HALF

Dahlman Runs 69 Yards for Touchdown and Flanagan Repeats for Dash of 62 Yards.

Fred Collins was taken out with a broken jaw two plays later.

Two brilliant runs of 69 and 62 yards, the first by Dahlman and the second by Flanagan, and Hearden's dash through his right tackle for 15 yards were Notre Dame's touchdown plays.

Gophers Score on Forward Pass.

Minnesota's score came in the second period when Geer tossed a long forward pass to Wheeler, who ran away from Flannagan to cover 18 yards across the goal line.

Notre Dame quickly showed its strength, scoring a touchdown on its third play when Dahlman darted around left end for his 69-yard dash to the Gopher line.

That reversal seemed to act as a tonic for the Gophers, and from that point on, they kept the ball in Notre Dame territory until the third period, except on an exchange of punts.

Several times the Gophers advanced to Notre Dame's 25-yard line and once or twice threatened from well inside that mark, an attempted drop kick by Peplaw from the 20-yard line missing by inches. In the last minutes of play Coach Spears' men vainly tried for a touchdown by the forward pass route.

Christy Flanniagan, Heardon and Wynne, were constant Rockne threats.

Barnhart, Almquist and Joesting, with the forward passing of Geer, made up the Gophers' attack.

It was in second half, when the Rockne men showed their full power, and the spectators had glimpses of play that recalled the brilliant backfield quartet at Notre Dame in 1924.

Coach Rockne said the injuries to Boland and Collins were "not the fault of Minnesota players, but were in fact, caused by our own ..."

ois Crushes Butler, 38 to 7.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 9.—Coach Robert Zuppke's backfield, working behind strong interference, ran away from Butler this afternoon, 38 to 7.

"Frosty" Peters, Zuppke's star sophomore halfback, broke through the Bulldogs for two touchdowns, kicked a field goal and accounted for three points after touchdown. The Montana lad's performance recalled Grange's playing.

Blair French, a plucky little back, weighing only 153 pounds, brought the 15,000 spectators to their feet in the last quarter when he gained 72 yards in two plays, running 33 yards after receiving a pass from Stuessey for a touchdown.

Butler used an aerial attack in an attempt to turn back the Illini, passes being completed while a large number failed.

The Hoosier team staged a comeback at the opening of the final quarter, two passes, Collier to Frosith, featuring a touchdown. Frosith kicked for Butler's extra point.

icago Trounces Maryland, 21 to 0.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9. — A somewhat erratic offense that gathered speed under the impetus of frequent substitutions today carried Chicago to a 21 to 0 defeat of the University of Maryland.

The Terrapin varsity found attempts at deceptive attacks disastrous and the heavier Maroon line hard to get through, but the Maryland defense made Chicago's advance haphazard until the closing minutes.

Stagg threw more than two full teams into the game after starting an eleven almost entirely second string. When the regulars swung into real action near the close two touchdowns came in rapid succession.

hio State Swamps Ohio Wesleyan, 47-0.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 9. — Ohio State's Western Conference team smothered Ohio Wesleyan, 47 to 0, in the Ohio Stadium here today before 45,000 persons. It was the worst drubbing the Buckeyes have administered to the battling bishops in several years. Capt. Marty Karow rambled 77 yards for one touchdown and the fleet Byron Eby of Chillicothe carried the ball 43 yards at one time and 67 yards at another time for two touchdowns. Wesleyan was never in scoring position.

ICHIGAN SWAMPS MICHIGAN AGGIES, 55-3

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 9.—Michigan mixed a pile-driving line attack with a passing game to defeat Michigan State College in their twenty-first meeting today, 55 to 3. State's score, a drop kick by Paul [illegible], was the first made by State against Michigan in eight years. Friedman's passing and the line-smashing of Molenda and Rich were Michigan's offensive trumps.

Drake Baffled By Air Attack, Navy Wins, 24-7

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 9.—Navy turned back its second Mid-Western invasion today, defeating Drake University, 24 to 7. Purdue was sent home with trailing pennons last week.

The weight of the Iowa line, averaging 185 pounds, forced the Middies to resort to an overhead attack. Navy completed 10 of 15 air passes. The big line broke in the final quarter, however, when slippery Forward Caldwell, substituting as fullback for Ransford, shot through for 65 yards on seven successive thrusts for Navy's final score.

Everett, who replaced Capt. Fry at quarter for Drake shortly after the start of the game, starred consistently. Long run-backs of punts, sensational tackles and smashing line plunges made him the threat of the Drake backfield.

Navy scored first, when a forward pass, Ransford to Lloyd, advanced the Blues 30 yards and Ransford circled left end for 10 yards and touchdown. Tom Hamilton's toe added the point.

The thud of the kickoff scarcely had faded when Navy was again in scoring position. Hannegan tossed from the 40-yard line to Hamilton, who sprinted 20 yards to the goal. Hamilton again converted with a drop kick.

Navy added three points in the third quarter when Hamilton drop-kicked a field goal after Hannegan had been thrown for a 10-yard loss near the posts.

INDIANA DEFEATS KENTUCKY U., 14 TO 6

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Oct. 9.— Indiana University repulsed an invasion from a border neighbor today, defeating Kentucky University, 14 to 6. Held scoreless in the first half, Indiana scored twice in the last half, Bennett and Mess going over for touchdowns. Briner kicked goal each time. A long pass, Jenkins to Mahney, gave Kentucky its touchdown.

CENTRAL WESLEYAN DEFEATS MISSOURI MILITARY ACADEMY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WARRENTON, Mo., Oct. 9. — Central Wesleyan College defeated Missouri Military Academy in a fast and close game this afternoon, 7 to 0. Rain and mud brought about much sliding, slipping and fumbling.

Outstanding players for Wesleyan were Fullback Bescher, Capt. Wustrich, Schuette and Proett.

Webster Beaten At Louisville

Male High Eleven Romps Over St. Louis County Team, 25 to 7.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 9.—The Louisville Male High eleven defeated the Webster Groves, Mo. High squad here this afternoon by the score of 25 to 7. The Missouri team was outplayed during the entire contest.

Webster Groves was the first to score. A fumble by White, Louisville back, on Webster's 30-yard line, resulted in the score. Sample, Webster fullback, scooped up the ball and ran 70 yards for a touchdown. Sample's place kick for extra point was good.

Louisville did not score until the second quarter, when she forced over two touchdowns. Reiske, quarterback, and Baer, sub-halfback, made the touchdowns. Only one of White's place kicks was good.

Reiske and Baer each scored another touchdown in the third quarter.

The playing of Sample of Webster stood out. The fullback did all the kicking and most of the passing. On defense he was the only backfield man who could back up the line to do any good. Sample staved off several touchdowns by his long punts.

The line-up and summary:

Webster Groves.	Position.	Male High.

Alex, That's All, Is the Way Babe Explains Defeat

Fine Control of the Old Master Cause Famous Slugger to Marvel.

By BABE RUTH.
(Copyright, 1926.)

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, N. Y., Oct. 9.—There's nothing much to be said about that game today, the Cardinals just beat us, that's all. They pounded the ball all over the lot. They fielded well and they got greater pitching from Old Alex again, our pitching was a little weak and we didn't do any hitting and that's that.

Personally I don't feel as badly about a defeat like that as I would if we had lost 2 to 1, or by some other close score. In baseball we learn that games like that one today come along every now and then and they don't mean a thing. I am just as confident of the Yankees winning the championship as I was yesterday or the day before.

We will be out there tomorrow giving them a real battle, watch what I tell you.

It's only fair, though, that I say a word about Old Alexander. He and Herbie Pennock certainly have been the outstanding stars of the series and will continue to be no matter what happens.

I thought we would beat Alexander today. I still believe we might have won if our pitching hadn't been a little bad, for we found the old boy for a lot more hard hit balls this time than before. In fact I've got a hunch that if the game had been close we might have had him in trouble often.

Alex's Control Won.

But that's over and past; we lost and Alex pitched a whale of a game to trim us. A lot of fellows, after he pitched that last game, wrote long stories about his speed and his curves and all that sort of thing. To my mind his greatest bet is good control. He can put that ball within an inch of where he wants it to go every time he pitches, and he has a great old bean on those shoulders, too.

If there was anything that pleased me in today's defeat it was the fact that Bob Meusel came through. We've missed Bob's timely blows in this series. We need them and it looks as though they might be coming our way. And personally I can't think of any better place for a chap to get his blows than in the final game which decides the championship.

Expects "Slam-Bang" Game.

Like the other games that have been played in this series today's was a slam-bang, hit-and-run affair in which there was little so called "inside baseball" but that's the type of game I expected when the Yankees and Cardinals met and it's the sort of game I expect again tomorrow when we meet in the battle to decide the title.

The Cardinals naturally are very cocky and confident. I don't blame them. At the same time I don't believe they figure themselves as any better than a fifty-fifty bet and I don't think they are that good. We haven't done any real hitting but once in this series.

We are due to start again and remember the thing I've said all along. The Yankes play their best ball in the pinches. They are strongest when there's something at stake. Tomorrow there will be plenty at stake. Watch us go out and win.

Drop Kick Beats Central Eleven

Borah Recovers Fumble for W. M. A. and Boots Field Goal in Final Quarter.

A 15-yard drop kick in the fourth quarter gave Western Military Academy a 3-0 victory over Central High School, yesterday afternoon, at Roosevelt Field. The opportunity to score came when Borah punted to Johnson of Central, who fumbled, Western recovering on Central's 15-yard line.

The third quarter had ended, at this stage, and, when play resumed in the final period, Western advanced the ball to the five-yard line on two line plunges. Borah drop-kicked for the winning points. Western again threatened to score in this quarter, but lost the ball on the one-yard line and the game ended there with the pigskin in Central's possession.

Despite yesterday's defeat, Coach Walker sent a much improved eleven against the Alton team. The line has been seemingly strengthened by the shifting of Willits from fullback back to center, and Western had great difficulty in penetrating the Red and Black defense. Central's entire team yesterday was grealty superior to that which lost to Webster last Saturday.

Sprint Over Goal Line Wasted.

Central's hopes were raised early in the second half, when Kline snatched an apparent fumble and ran nearly 40 yards for the goal. The ball had been declared dead, however, and was brought back.

Central draws the bye in the league opening on Oct. 23, and plays Principia on that date.

TIGERS WHIP NEBRASKA, 14-7, AS CLARK STARS

grew scant, Stuber tried for a field goal, which was wide.

Aside from the one display of terrific drive at the start of the game, the play so far had been all Missouri, with the Tigers keeping the Huskers safely away from the Missouri goal line, and forcing most of the play to the Nebraska side of the 50-yard line. But the Nebraskans were not through.

The first half of the third quarter found the battle fairly even, but then came a mad dash by the Cornhuskers. They started from their own 15-yard line, and reeled off three successive first downs, the last a gain of nearly 40 yards by Brown, who was finally forced out of bounds by the Tiger safety man on the Missouri 18-yard line. But Missouri's forward wall held, and the Tigers took the ball on downs.

Tigers Hold On 6-Inch Line.

Stuber punted to midfield, and the Huskers came right back. In the closing minutes of the third quarter and the first of the fourth they reeled off three more first downs. The ball went to Missouri's 3-yard line, then to the one-yard line, then to the Missouri 6-inch line, the Bengals hurling Marrow back on the fourth down to take the ball on downs.

Stuber punted from far behind his goal and placed the boot so well that it rolled to midfield. But again came Nebraska and an 18-yard pass, Stephens to A. Mandry once more put the Huskers inside the Missouri's 25-yard line. And again the Tiger line held, and Missouri took the ball on downs.

Stuber punted out of danger and Nebraska's day was done. The Huskers opened a determined aerial attack, a last resort, but twice the flips were intercepted, and the end of the game found the Tigers inside the Nebraska's 25-yard line with their backs to the wall fighting desperately.

Nebraska's punting superiority failed to materialize. Stuber's 35 and 40-yard boots were frequent; he never got off a bad boot, and placed them so well that there were few that the Husker safety men could handle. Bacchus, also, was fast under the kicks, and held returns to a minimum. At carrying the ball Clark was the Missouri star, while the entire Tiger backfield was kept busy at checking the Nebraska offense.

MY LIFE AND FIGHTING CAREER—By Gene Tunney, New Heavyweight Champion

Lacking Burliness, He Held Down Appetite And Built Himself Up

Began Work at 14 for $5 a Week as an Office Boy—Believes a Man May Write a Sonnet and Deliver a Jab as Well.

This is the first of a series of articles about the new champion heavyweight fighter of the world, the man who conquered the "Swat King," Dempsey. The articles have been prepared and written by the champion himself. They will appear from time to time as announced at the end of each chapter.

By Gene Tunney,
World's Heavyweight Champion.

CHAPTER I.

IT requires a little time for such a diadem as the Heavyweight Crown to settle, but I hope to have it fitting snugly soon. My first days as champion, the endless crowds, the handshakes and acclaim and the reaction of it all have left me a trifle muddled.

If I were to adhere to the prescription of Benvenuto Cellini, greatest of autobiographers, and not write my life story before passing middle age, I am afraid I would have few readers. I hope I should have something interesting to tell when 40 or 50 years old. But I am mindful that an athlete's colorful days are brief. And sportsmen are fickle in their plaudits and their praise.

On the morning of Sept. 24, I rose to find myself famous. Telegrams, letters, newspaper headlines—it was "Tunney this" and "Tunney that." To the unknowing ones, those who notice you only at the moment that your star is in the ascendancy, it seemed that I had come into fame and fortune with one flurry of gloved fists, with one night of effort.

But like every other true success, whether it be in the ring or among the learned ones of the professions, my rise was backed by years of toil. My championship was gained by no accident and by no lucky stroke. I worked hard. I tried to do the thing that I set out to do. I sacrificed much. I suffered some. But I had a singleness of purpose, and perhaps in my life story other boys can gain hope and victory.

"A Man May Write and Fight."

In this series I want you to see the real Gene Tunney—christened James Joseph, born in Greenwich Village, May 15, 1898. I want to speak frankly of myself and my career. I will make no effort to display myself as a "goody goody" boy. Neither will I be able to state that I was the "baddest" lad in the village. I was just "that young Tunney fellow who maybe will amount to something some day.

I want to tell how I did what many normal boys do. I will speak of my experiences in the war, but I do not think—and certainly will never say—that I won the war or that I did anything but my duty in going across. Uncle Sam owes me nothing. I, on the other hand, owe Uncle Sam everything. The First Lieutenancy in the United States Marine Corps Reserve which was conferred on me after the Dempsey battle is one of my proudest titles. That's a title I hope to keep long, long after some of the coming boxers succeed me as heavyweight champion.

As the first New Yorker to hold the heavyweight laurels, I naturally feel great pride in my city. It is so often claimed that city boys do not have the opportunity for physical development. Although I do think that it is more important to have brains than mere brawn, I can see no reason why a smart man should be puny or backward in body. I tried to keep my mind and body improving steadily all the while, and when I am criticised for being a student of Shakspeare and the classics, I am not dismayed. Anyway, I can follow up a fairly correct quotation from Keats or Shelley with a precise left jab to the mouth if necessary.

I have had a lot of fun poked at me for my literary pursuits. Still, there have been some two-fisted men who liked literature and not a few who wrote well and fought the same way. Lord Byron was handy with his punches and could swim a Hellespont or write an ode with equal celerity. Even old Dr. Johnson was strong, although his eyes were not fitted to insure good judgment of distance.

Would Be Another Friend.

I entered the ranks of professional fighters only after deep thought and with some hesitancy. I will tell how, when and where at the proper time. Such figures as that of James J. Corbett helped me to decide, by force of example, that boxing could be decently done and that a man need not be an illiterate thug to win with his knuckles. It is my ambition to accomplish for the modern game what Corbett did for the older order.

Don't think that my so-called book learning prevented me from living a colorful life. I have had hard knocks and plenty of them since I began earning a living 14 years ago. It was not much of a living then, to be sure, when I rose from $5 a week to $17 as office boy and later a clerk. All my days have not been white collar days by any means. When you read of me as "Smiling Gene" don't think that the sun of good fortune forever shone on me. And I'm glad the hard knocks came, for without them character cannot be moulded properly.

I was not a burly boy. My present physique and present good condition of health were an outgrowth of logical training and constant watchfulness over my appetites. I will tell how I progressed in strength and stamina and will indicate how any boy or ordinary build may grow into sound manhood. My story in this respect is interesting to me and will interest you. I never had tuberculosis, as the late President Roosevelt is said to have had when young, but I imagine I was not much stronger than he was when I was 10 years old.

In my short life as well as in by drive for the championship, I believed myself to be a sort of "Man of Destiny," and that thought made possible the championship. Of course, I backed up thought with deeds. I never had a "loser's complex." I realized that I must always be ready. And I was ready when the big chance came. Now I shall grow autobiographical and try to reveal to you the real Gene Tunney, in and out of the public eye.

St. Louis Soccer Eleven Meets Detroit Today

Sportsman's Park to Be Scene of Opening Game of Season—Solvay Club Rated Best in Detroit's Major League, Having Defeated All-Scots, 3-0.

By Dent McSkimming.

The professional soccer season will be opened here this afternoon with a game between the St. Louis picked team and the Solvay Club of Detroit. The match will be played at Sportsman's Park, providing for the first time in many years first-class accommodations for spectators.

Solvay is second in the standing in the eight-club league in Detroit and comes highly recommended by Deroit's leading soccer men. Perhaps the most significent fact about its class is a 3-to-0 victory registered over the All-Scots, three weeks ago.

Today's match serves a twofold purpose. It is a promising attraction in itself, and it will provide excellent practice for the St. Louis team, which will oppose Sparta of Prague, at the same field next Sunday afternoon.

Start at 3:15 P. M.

Starting time today is 3:15 o'clock and the admission charge 75 cents.

There are several players in the Solvay lineup who have appeared here before. Outstanding among them is Redfern, the center forward. He is not a Jimmy Dunn in his goal-getting manner, but is regarded as the cleverest field general in Detroit. Sam Abernathy, left fullback, has played here with a Detroit picked team.

There is not an American-born player in the lineup of the Detroiters. They are all from the British Isles except one, and he is a Canadian.

Joe Hand will appear at center forward for the St. Louis eleven, although it was at first intended that he should play fullback or outside right. Jimmy Dunn is unable to play because of an infected toe. Hand has proved himself a very capable center forward. He will be flanked by two experts in Hansen and Bochnicek, while young O'Reilly and Tal Mulroy will take care of the wings.

The great halfback line of the old Vesper club will take care of the middle line: Oster, Burke and Fink. Erbe and Mencke will be the fullbacks, and it would not be surprising if Mencke turned up as the star of the game. Bartnett will be in goal.

The probable lineups:

St. Louis	Position.	Solvay.
Bartnett	G.	Foster
Erbe	R. F.	Conner
Mencke	L. F.	Abernathy
Fink	R. H.	Watson
Burke	C. H.	Corrigan
Oster	L. H.	Judge
O'Reilly	O. R.	Laird
Bochnicek	I. R.	Mearns
Hand	C.	Redfern
Hansen	I. L.	Robertson
Mulroy	O. L.	Allen

Mlle. Lenglen Wins in First 'Pro' Tennis Show

French Star Defeats Miss Browne, 6-1, 6-1—Only Third of 19,500 Seats Filled.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Suzanne Lenglen, erstwhile amateur woman tennis champion and still the world's greatest woman player, made her debut as a professional in Madison Square Garden tonight. She defeated Miss Mary K. Browne, former American National champion, who turned professional as a "business necessity" and to meet the famous French woman in the round of professional tennis planned by Charles C. Pyle.

Suzanne's leap into the realm of tennis finance was a victory for her in that she defeated Miss Browne in straight sets of 6-1, 6-1. The predicted crowd was not there, though. The 19,500 seats, with the tennis court in the center of the garden, were only one-third filled.

That it was largely a tennis crowd, which is believed to be limited, was apparent from the applause of good shots. "Big Bill" Tilden and other stars were on hand, figuring it no breach of amateurism to watch the new pros.

Suzanne hippodromed the match in real show style. She went in with a flurry to make her art pay. Of her theatrical ability, there was no doubt. She was all fireworks, but her outbursts were to make the game go.

Vincent Richards made his initial appearance for a cash consideration and happily evened a score with Paul Feret, the Frenchman, who defeated him last June. Richards was victorious in straight sets of 6-3, 6-4. There was no question, though, but that the spectators were there to see Mlle. Lenglen play.

Admission prices ranged from $2 to $5.

Suzanne later paired with Richards to win a mixed doubles set from Miss Browne and Howard Kinsey of California, 6—2.

Richards and Harvey Snodgrass of California defeated Kinsey and Feret in a men's doubles exhibition by a similar score.

St. Mary's Wins From California, 65,000 See Game

"Cowboy" Smith Runs 80 and 45 Yards for Two Scores in Big Upset.

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 9.—Under the somber setting of a rain-driven autumn sky, 65,000 spectators saw St. Mary's conquer California, 26 to 7, today, in one of the most stunning upsets on the Pacific Coast in years.

Not since 1917 had a St. Mary's team triumphed over California until the blue-jerseyed Oakland warriors wrote their brilliant chapter of gridiron history today.

Two thrilling runs of 80 yards and 45 yards for touchdowns, with St. Mary's little halfback, Boyd "Cowboy" Smith, as the carrying vehicle, marked the second and third periods and dashed the hopes of Califorina.

California scored its only touchdown in the second period on a drive down the field from the Golden Bears' five-yard line.

HORNSBY PRAISES THEVENOW, BOTTOMLEY, BELL AND SOUTHWORTH

that day and that criticism really was ridiculous. Sherdel pitched to Ruth Thursday and Alexander pitched to him this afternoon and the Babe failed to get the ball out of the infield. He walked once, but Alexander was pitching to him and gave him three strikes, one a foul, before the fourth ball put him on first.

Ruth grounded to Bottomley in the first inning with nobody on and in the third, with two on bases and the crowd yelling for a base hit, he sent another hopper to Jim. Neither was a hard chance. We insist that it is good baseball to pitch to Ruth, just as we would pitch to another dangerous hitter.

I don't mean to detract from his hitting ability. Of course, if he gets hold of the ball, he'll knock it further than any other man in baseball. There's no denying that. But he swings so hard that a properly pitched ball will get him off stride and turn him into an ordinary batter of no particular danger and I don't care about any laws of average, we'll pitch to Ruth any time he comes to bat, unless the situation is such that we want to set things for a double play. Then we'd pass anybody and if it happens to be Ruth, he'll get four wide ones.

The whole Cardinal team played a great game today. Thevenow contributed two singles and started two rallies. Bottomley fielded his position in grand style and came through with a double in the first inning that drove in our first run. Then Bell tied the world series record for runs driven in his single driving in two in the first inning and his home run in the seventh accounting for two more.

Southworth is sure to be one of the heroes of the series. He has hit like a champion and his fielding has been great. He turned a great sliding catch of Dugan's liner in the eighth and then lined the ball to second base for a double play. Bill helped us win the pennant and he sure has been a great player in this series.

We are tied with the Yankees now in games and we are far ahead of them in batting and every other department of the game.

We will have Haines to face them tomorrow and if Big Jess is half as good as he was when he gave them a good trouncing in that St. Louis game, the boys at home can start shouting.

We showed today that we don't care who pitches against us. Shawkey may not be a strong pitcher over the long route, but he certainly has the reputation of being able to stop the best hitters for a few innings. But we nicked him for three before the game was 10 minutes old and then we climbed on Shocker.

We didn't want to play any favorites, so we punched in a run while Thomas was out there.

There were two errors for us, but neither did any damage. The grounder that Thevenow missed was really his first deserved error of the series and the country must realize now that this kid is a great little shortstop.

Proud of Whole Tteam.

Our hitting was well scattered through our batting order, O'Farrell and Alexander being the only men to go hitless. Alex did enough with his pitching arm and Bob has done so much for us in this series that he's still away ahead of most of the players.

This has been a great series. We intend to win. Of course, we will be prouder in victory. But I'm proud of my men right now and will be proud of them, no matter what happens tomorrow.

Pants Store Nine Wins Long Game At Cincinnati

St. Louisans Beat Fenwicks, 5-4, in 12 Innings, in Inter-City Series.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9.—The Pants Store team, municipal baseball champions of St. Louis, defeated the Fenwick nine, Cincinnati title holders, in the first of a two-game inter-city series at Redland Field this afternoon. The score was 5 to 4 and the contest went 12 innings.

Hasmer, hurling for the visitors, allowed but seven hits, while his mates collected 14 off Leeds. Bases on balls by Leeds proved costly to the Fenwick outfit.

Principia Beats Beaumont, 29—0

Richardson Stars for Victors, Scoring Three Touchdowns, One on 30-Yard Run.

The Principia Academy football team defeated the Beaumont High School eleven, 29 to 0, in a game on Taylor Field, the new academy grounds in St. Louis County, yesterday afternoon. This was the second game for Principia, the Cadets holding Roosevelt to a scoreless tie last Saturday. Principia meets Soldan in its third game next Saturday.

Coach Green's team crossed the Beaumont goal line twice in the second for a total of 12 points. The Academy squad rolled up 17 points in the fourth quarter, scoring two touchdowns and a field goal. Principia used a few substitutes during three quarters of the game, Coach Green evidently saving some of his players for the Soldan contest next week.

Principia advanced to the Beaumont 11-yard line as the first quarter ended. Richardson's drop kick went wide after the teams lined up at the start of the second period. The Academy scored when Richardson, the fullback, went through left tackle for the first touchdown. The goal kick was blocked.

The second score in this quarter came when a Beaumont kick was blocked, the ball rolling behind the Beaumont goal line. Roth, the Academy center, fell on the ball for a touchdown. Richardson missed goal. Beaumont outplayed the Academy in the third quarter, but failed to score.

THE HUNTING - - CALL - -

By ALEC MERMOD

THE continuous rains have worked havoc with the farmers in many sections of the country, but the duck hunters who are not fortunate enough to enjoy shooting over club grounds will probably reap the benefit.

So many cornfields have been flooded to such an extent that the crop is ruined and will not be gathered; besides the corn there is other food that is attractive to wild ducks.

This condition will also work a hardship on the owners of commercial baited ponds and fields, for the ducks will be able to find plenty of food on the farming land in the bottoms.

Cornstalks as Blind.

During the next two or three weeks the unattached hunter who will take the pains to locate a flooded cornfield close to the flyway will have good shooting if he will put out about 50 wood decoys in an open spot in this field.

A good blind may be constructed very easily and quickly out of corn stalks.

Don't be stingy with your blocks. Put out at least 25 if your space is small, but 50 will be much better.

The modern duck shooter is inclined to "skimp" too much, as far as decoys are concerned, and seems to have an idea that a half dozen live decoys are much better than two dozen wooden ones.

Live decoys are all right and should always be used when possible but it is much better to help out with wood blocks.

Crowds Attract Ducks.

Wild ducks are very much like human beings. They are attracted by the crowd, and will decoy from a greater distance to a big flock of blocks than to a small bunch of live decoys.

If you are shooting from a sand bar in the river you should have at least six dozen "blocks" out, ten dozen would be better.

If your blind is close to back water when the current is not strong a half dozen like decoys anchored close in will help out quite a bit.

Several years ago a certain manufacturer put a wooden decoy on the market styled "Rough Rider," which was designed especially for river shooting. These decoys were a third larger than the ordinary mallard, and were so constructed that it was impossible to top them over. They were always right side up.

One Had Different Species.

Thirty years ago some duck shooters had an idea that they must have wood decoys of different species; for instance, if they were going to shoot teal, they must hace decoys of that breed, and so on, but now nearly every one in this section uses mallard decoys for all species and find that they are not far wrong.

On the Texas Gulf Coast decoys are used that are just painted a dark gray; the hunter depends on numbers rather than herds, and it is not uncommon to see as many as 300 decoys in one bunch.

Taking it through the season, mallards will decoy more readily than most other species, though there are days when all ducks seem to fight shy of your blind, from no apparent reason, while there are other days when you can't frighten them off.

Several years ago my doctor chased me out to Colorado, telling me that I wouldn't last a year in this climate. He cautioned me to leave my gun at home, and to take no exercise.

Now, Colorado was my home for a great many years, and this "death warrant" was read to me early in September, so I did not leave my gun behind, for I knew of two mighty good duck sections one in the San Luis Valley.

A Long Flight.

My friend and I soon located a flyaway on the Star Ranch.

The flight started about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and for three-quarters of an hour a continuous stream of ducks, no not a stream for they came in bunches, would come down across one of these lakes, paying no attention to either of us as we sat on top of muskrat houses; many would fly so low that we could have reached them with a rake handle.

Mallard, green wing teal, spoon bill and widgeon seemed to be there in equal numbers, and all came in about alike.

In the morning at the same place it was almost impossible to get more than a half dozen shots within range, though we had perfect blinds and a good bunch of decoys.

This goes to show that you can't always tell about what ducks going to do.

Amateur Training.

In teaching a puppy to drop on command, he must be shown what is wanted of him, so keep him in hand with a short lead and the word "drop" or "charge" press him down gently on his shoulders gradually using more force until you have crowded him to the ground. Keep him in this position for a minutee or more, then say and remove your hand, repeat this performance about 15 times during a half hour. If your puppy has ordinary dog intelligence it will only take a few days to have him drop at the command, even though you are not close to him.

After each lesson pat the puppy and talk to him and give him a tit-bit which he is fond of.

After the puppy has learned a few lessons each one afterwards will be more easily learned.

In giving any command speak sharply and quickly, but never at your dog.

There is no great secret in teaching a dog to do the ordinary things necessary.

Patience is the greatest requisite, next you must have time to give him his lessons regularly.

Some trainers never use a whip on any dog, others are too free with its use.

Some dogs require the use of the whip once in a while, but great care should be exercised and the whip used very sparingly when he has actually disobeyed an order which he has been taught to execute.

There are some dogs, especially the 100 per cent Llewellyn setters, that should never be touched with a whip.

LOUD SPEAKERS KEEP WASHINGTON FOOTBALL ROOTERS WELL POSTED

The 4000 spectators at Francis Field yesterday afternoon may have seen better football games; but it is doubtful if they ever understood the program of play as much as they did during the Rolla-Washington hostilities.

Five large loud speakers, above the ground, told them every play, every substitution, every penalty and the reason for them. There was not an incident of the game that was not broadcast to the entire gathering.

Football, which has always been a game which kept the spectators at a loss as to detail, is now almost as clear even to the novitiate as Graham McNammy can make a world series baseball game.

4000-MILE TRIP THROUGH RUSSIA TO INVESTIGATE CONDITIONS AS THEY ARE Returned Writer Tells of Peasants Still Grumbling, but Industrial Life Getting Slowly Back to Better Conditions — Rent, Food and Amusements.

By HOWARD BARNES.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

WHEN I entered Russia, I expected to find misery. A certain amount of wreckage does remain from the chaotic conditions that preceded 1923, but the individual and social life as a whole has returned to a very normal condition. And on this base of normal, every-day living Russia is vibrant with profound changes, often hidden, but working steadily toward an adjustment of the disequilibrating forces of revolution.

Entering Russia by the back r, by Batum on the east end the Black Sea, I traveled over 00 miles, from the southern-st tip, where tropical vegeta- and tea plantations abound, the city of midnight sun, Len-rad. I visited small villages cities, I talked to peasants, ineers and high state officials, men and children, foreign con-sionaries and people engaged in siness under the "New Econom- Policy"—N. E. P., as it is lled—the entering wedge for a turn to capitalism. The actual ndition of the people in differ-t walks of life is what interest- me, the difference which exist- between the peasants and in-strial workers, the living con-tions, the way they amused emselves, the religious feeling prevalent and finally the at-de toward the central oligar- group in the government, h very recently has passed ugh political ferment.

lin Brings Main Issue to the Fore.

The recent accession of Stalin "dictator" of Russia focuses rly the main issues which face sia today. More than 85 per t of the population is peasant. lin is a peasant from Georgia. had part of his early training Tiflis, the still gay and care- capital of Georgia, nestled on ty cliffs on the banks of a hing torrent, tumbling down m the high, snow-covered ks of the Caucasus. Stalin re-zes clearly that it is not enough t the revolution has given the sants their land. He has heard e murmur of disaffection which es from every peasant com-nity; now conciliatory mea-res will be steadily increased.

A Russian peasant village may sist of only a scattered hand- of houses, or it may be over mile in extent, almost a small n. Here the peasants live and m here they go, often even 20 s to their outlying fields, to k. As one approaches one of e settlements, one passes these lying fields. There are no itations, but curious-looking cks, rude shelters raised on stout poles and heavily tched, dotting the landscape, h in its plot of ground. These lters house the peasants over-ht after their long trek from village; also they serve to re grain safely. The village it- lies in a clump of trees usual-, the houses strung along broad t roads. On one side is a sort common, where horses and cat- graze. One passes villagers in ge wagons, the boxes set high ove the axles, going out to work the fields. In the far south mels and water buffaloes were d for draft animals. The houses made of sun-dried brick, in est districts, of wood. They small and would seem squalid an American farmer. Every-re I saw building and repair- going on in the villages.

sants Refuse to Pay High Prices.

The peasant one meets always mbles. One man I met in Vla-kaz is a typical example. He well fed and comfortably sed, but in a novel costume. said he could not afford the s sold in the government co-tive stores or in the stores run on capitalistic lines under N. E. P. So his wife made s clothes. He wore a coarse-woven, home-spun smock and bagging pants, a wide-brimmed hat of the same material which, having been cut without a fitting, drooped in folds about his head and face, and big, flopping boots, without heels, made of sheepskin. He was considerably dissatisfied with the government.

"Do they think I'm going to raise grain for them when I can't buy a pair of shoes for less than a week's earnings?" he said. Shoes cost about $20 in Russia. He told me his wife made all his clothes and the other manufactured articles a peasant uses. He grew enough grain to feed himself and his family and buy a little tobacco and vodka and no more. He railed against the soviet officials, but left me suddenly and with much ceremony addressed a man who was passing. "That's our representative," he told me; "smart man."

There are a few new aristocrats among this class of peasants. Two men I talked with owned a tractor. They were using scientific agricultural methods on their farms instead of crudely scratching the soil, never fertilizing and relying on nature to do all the work, as is the custom of the majority of peasants. What is more, these men have large bank accounts.

Youth Dominates, Particularly in Cities.

Russia is still a land of classes. But from the outside one sees only two, the peasant on one hand and the industrial worker of the cities on the other. One evening I had gone to an amusement park in one of the southern cities with an industrial worker. He paid no admission, only showed his union card. He was dressed in leggings with neat boots and a white smock. He wore a cap with the insignia of his trade on it. We sat and listened to a concert and drank "kvass," the Russian beer, at a small table. The park was filled with men like my acquaintance and young women, but there were no peasants. Some days later I asked one of the peasants I had met to go with me to the park. He refused to emphatically; he was ashamed of his dress and his calling among the proletarians.

The city life is very gay in some of these southern cities. In the long summer evenings crowds of young men and women walk up and down the broad, tree-covered streets, laughing and talking, or congregate in the parks to hear music or attend outdoor theaters and vaudeville houses. The old people have perished for the most part in the years of chaos and suffering. The revolution has given these young workers many opportunities for leisure. It has become a religion to them almost now that the years of suffering are behind. There are restaurants where small orchestras play and they dance, sometimes curious Russian Caucasian dances.

When one has remained for a time in a great city like Moscow and talked to many people, classes within the workers' group emerge, another instance of the profound changes taking place gradually. There is the small remnant of the old aristocrats. Some of these, curiously enough, are employed and paid well by the soviet regime. These are curators of museums or in charge of restoring or classifying art treasures. For the most

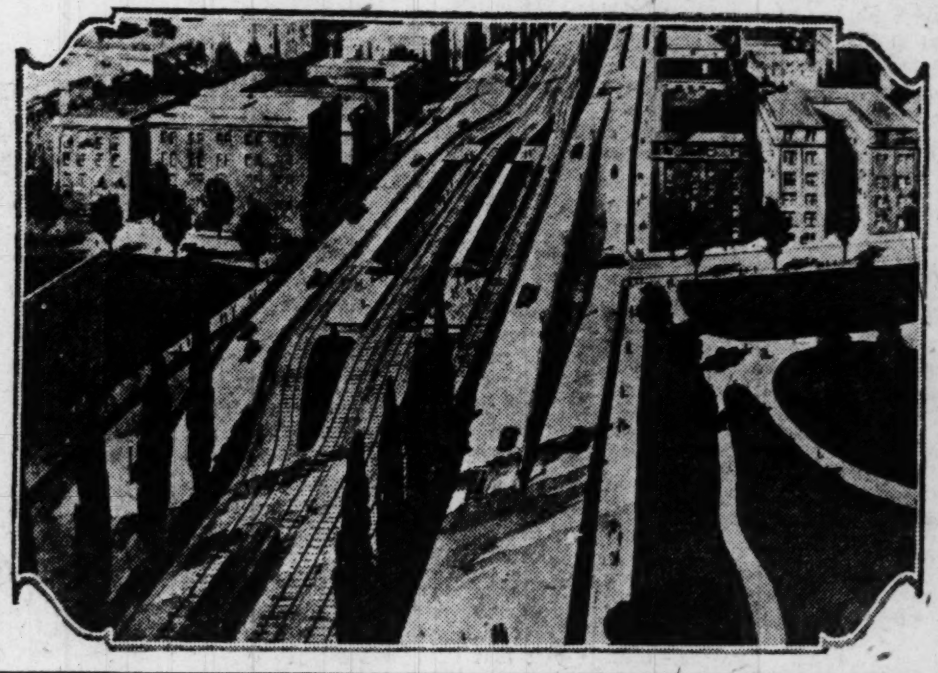
Detroit's Plan for Subways and New Highways Compared With Traffic Problems in St. Louis

COUZENS, VICTOR IN 10-YEAR FIGHT, GIVES ADVICE

City Should Control Absolutely Every Kind of Public Transportation, Says Former Mayor — "Service at Cost" Mere Trickery, He Asserts—Tells People Not to be Frightened by Public Ownership — How Detroit Got Possession of Its Surface Lines and Now Plans to Spend $280,000,000 for Underground Service and Better Highways.



Type of Superhighways Planned in Detroit

This picture illustrates the type of superhighway that Detroit is planning to radiate from its city limits into surrounding counties to a distance of 15 miles. The street is 204 feet wide. Space in the center is reserved for rapid transit by electric cars. On either side are one-way boulevards. These highways are to be intersected by other streets every half mile and the illustration shows how the highway will be carried over the intersection. Automobile traffic can proceed at high speed the entire length of the highway without encountering an intersecting street at grade. Three counties have united with the city upon this plan, actual construction of some of the highways has begun and right of ways for others are being acquired constantly. The counties have power to levy a half mill tax for this construction and the city has a mill tax for widening streets to take up the volume of traffic brought in by them.

By WILLIAM F. ALLEN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 9.

DON'T venture upon subways until the city first gets control of its surface street cars. If it is practical for the city to own subways, it is practical for it to own surface lines and it is decidely impractical to have separate ownership.

Don't experiment with "service-at-cost." The valuation upon which service-at-cost is based usually is exhorbitant, the cost hence is too high, and divided control between the city and the private owners means "passing the buck." There never is divided control in big business.

Don't consider any subway plan that does not spread its benefits equally among all car riders. When you are certain that your plan does that, go ahead boldly—finish the job. Do not tackle it piecemeal.

Don't build another mile of surface lines unless they are linked permanently to your subways. Use busses to reach unserved districts.

Above all, don't shy at municipal ownership of street cars or be deceived by the cry of "political machine." The Mayor who is fool enough to play politics with transportation will not be Mayor long.

Why Couzens Can Speak Authoritatively

These are convictions of United States Senator Couzens of Michigan which he gave to the writer here today, and he wavers not a syllable from them.

But what, it may be asked, has a United States Senator to do with street cars and straphangers? Just this: Couzens became United States Senator from Michigan chiefly because Michigan thought he had made an excellent Mayor of Detroit. And his record as Mayor of Detroit was made almost solely upon his leadership in matters of city transportation. It was he who led Detroit to municipal ownership of street railways. It was he who set Detroit looking 75 years ahead with plans for subways and rapid transit running into hundreds of millions of dollars.

So Detroit, by common consent, sends inquirers upon this subject to Couzens. This writer had come to Detroit because Detroit has answered—to its own satisfaction, at least—two questions which St. Louis is being called upon to answer for itself—what to do with its street car system and whether to build subways.

It may be said here that the consensus of opinion in Detroit is that this city next spring will vote $280,000,000 for subways without "batting an eye." There has been two test votes to show public sentiment and both have indicated that Detroit is willing to foot the bill. That is another thing that Couzens taught Detroit. He once was opposed for re-election by a man who said he would reduce taxes. "He's a liar," Couzens said from the stump. "I've fixed things at the City Hall so that he can't reduce taxes. Furthermore, I promise you that I will raise taxes. If I can, I am going to keep Detroit a step ahead in all municipal improvements."

No American Mayor—with the possible exception of Tom Johnson of Cleveland—has been quite so bold in matters of city transportation as has Couzens, and few, if any, have pored the question more searchingly. So Couzens is primed for all questions and when someone pulls the trigger on the subject, he explodes his views from a mind unhesitant. He has fought this thing out in his shirt sleeves, for Detroit did not come to his way of thinking overnight and it required nearly 10 years of unceasing effort to whip public opinion to a majority support of his own clarified opinions.

Fare in Subway Worth Ten Cents

Couzens is blunt, incisive, direct. He is independent as men with millions can be independent and he let chips fall where they may.

Take his first "don't"—"Don't venture upon subways until the city first gets control of its surface lines." This is the practical, stripped-down manner in which he disposes of that.

"Suppose you should build subways and suppose your privately owned street car company should decline to operate them, you could not force the company to lay its rails in the tubes. What would your city do then? Either one of two things. It would capitulate to the street car company's terms for operation, including fare to be paid, or it would be forced to operate a second system of transportation. Street car passengers would pay an extra fare in the subways. No subway plan is wise that does not provide for free transfers among all forms of transportation—subways, cars, busses. If a city is ready for subways, there is no reason why a fare of 10 cents should not carry every rider to his destination with or without transfer.

"Another thing. Why is your street car company suffering now—and, I take it, your company is sharing the griefs of most street car companies. Their revenues are inadequate because they are getting the unprofitable long hauls. The fat, short hauls go to the busses. Put your subways in competition with street cars and your subways will suffer as your street cars do now. The profitable short haul will return to the street car. Your expensive long haul will be underground and your rate of fare will stifle rapid transit. It cannot be done. The two must be co-ordinated.

"How, then? In Detroit we bought the railways and no one has been sorry since. We can proceed confidently with our subways and know that when we are through we will have subways knit to surface lines in an economical, convenient ride for all the people wherever in the city they may reside. And here in Detroit we are planning to bring our country roads to subways, but that is another question." This feature is explained with the picture on this page.

The Senator was told that the city of St. Louis proposed to assume the necessary control over its street car lines by a so-called service-at-cost ordinance, giving the city the right to specify how and where street cars should run, agreeing only that the car riders would foot the cost with their fares.

Derides Theory of Service at Cost

"That is criminal," the Senator exploded. "I will say no more than to predict that when trouble arises, there will be an interminable passing of the buck. Divided control is fatal in any business, public or private. If the city is to assume control, it must have ownership. You can't let private capital own the railways and expect it to jump at the crack of someone else's whip. Don't be befuddled by any service-at-cost plan.

"Now you say that St. Louis would welcome advice. I am glad to tell you my convictions. If I were Mayor of St. Louis I would remember that the best subway plan is the plan that gets votes. That is the practical side of it. I have seen scheme after scheme, beautiful and roseate, that failed utterly because it would not get the votes to make it effective. I would say that the vital thing is to make your subway system serve everyone and don't adopt any partial plan that does not serve everyone. First, determine that you need and want subways. Convince the public that subways can be supported without undue fare. I do not consider a 10-cent fare too high. The public should be willing to pay 10 cents for subways.

"Look there," the Senator pointed to a long table in his office over which was spread the Detroit subway plan. "The Rapid Transit Commission has asked me to criticise it. I am criticising it only in one particular. It serves nearly all the people, not all. I am going to say to them that these and these little patches must be filled in with some form of transportation to subways. Then the plan is complete—satisfactory. Do the same in St. Louis. You say that the project is to begin with putting street cars underground in the downtown. Don't do that. Make your first step, if you insist on building in steps—make your first step rapid transit operation. Your people will be disappointed with anything short of actual rapid transit. You may save some minutes with street cars underground in the downtown, but it won't be worth while. Find a plan to serve the whole city and then build it as a continuous project. That will win votes.

Don't Fear Municipal Ownership, He Says

"Let me add just this—and I think it most important of all—do not hesitate to adopt municipal ownership. I can just see your people curl up at the mention. 'Municipal ownership' and shudder. Much injustice has been done to municipal ownership. We have not the best street car service in the world in Detroit, but we ride for 6 cents and we pay trainmen the best wages in the country, save one. We pay all our costs and we are meeting $1,500,000 each year from profits to apply on the purchase price. Our street car system is paying for itself.

"Don't be disturbed by the bugaboo that municipal ownership means a political machine that some Mayor can wield for improper perpetuation of power. I say to you that the Mayor who plays politics with a street car system is a damn fool. He will be kicked out at the first election.

"I say that a street car system offers a good Mayor the best link with his citizens that is at command. Your water system is a cold faucet. And he should be perpetuated. Good Mayors are scarce nowadays. Honest public service is rare. NO FOREIGN COMPETITION, HIGH WAGES, IN ANOTHER UNPROTECTED INDUSTRY

Staunch Republican, Head of Large Fertilizer Company, Says High Tariff Not Necessary for Prosperity in His Business.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

FEW, indeed, are the important American industries that have no protection under the Fordney-McCumber tariff. Those few are without protection only because they didn't ask for it. In framing the present tariff law, the Republican leaders acted on the principle that large manufacturers who wanted a tariff that would keep out foreign competition, were entitled to whatever they wanted. Some of them were virtually allowed to write their own schedules.

Among the few who wanted no protection were the shoe manufacturers, the typewriter manufacturers and the manufacturers of fertilizer. Consequently, those products are on the free list, and any foreign manufacturer who desires to compete with the American product for the American market can hop to it, without suffering the handicap of a tariff.

Let us not forget the principal argument which is offered in defense of the present tariff—the most extortionate in American history. It is this: That foreign labor is cheaper than American labor, and that unless a tariff is erected to equalize the cost of production here and abroad, foreign manufacturers could invade the American market and undersell American manufacturers, thus forcing them to cut wages in order to meet the foreign competition. The argument is intended to win the support of American wage earners for the party which is responsible for the tariff, and to counteract the unquestioned fact that the tariff increases the price of manufactured commodities to the American consumer.

Industries Prospering Without Protection.

Desiring to test the truth of this argument, the Post-Dispatch started out to explore those industries which are unprotected, to discover whether they had suffered from the lack of protection. Obviously, if it could be shown that the lack of protection had forced these industries to cut wages in order to meet competition, then the argument for protection would be upheld. If, on the contrary, it were found that they had maintained their wage scale and continued to prosper without protection, then the argument would be exploded.

In recent interviews with Post-Dispatch writers, Jackson Johnson, a leader in the shoe industry, and Benjamin E. Winchell, a leader in the typewriter industry, have explained how those industries have continued to prosper without protection. Instead of being forced to cut wages, they have constantly increased them. Instead of suffering from foreign competition, they have established a large export trade. In both industries these results were due to mass production, modern machinery, improved methods, superior workmanship and better products. In other words, they were due to advantages that are typical of American industry. Neither needed protection; neither wanted it.

For information of the fertilizer industry, the writer called on John Jay Watson Jr., president of the International Agricultural Corporation, one of the largest manufacturers of fertilizer in the world. His office is in the center of the New York financial district, a few yards from Wall street.

Staunch Republican Says "No" Frankly.

Watson cannot be accused of political bias against the Republican tariff. He served as a Republican member of the Rhode Island Legislature, and belongs to the Union League Club of New York, which is the most conservative body this side of the House of Lords. He shuddered with horror at the very thought that his words might be used against his party or against Big Business, but like an honest man and a good manufacturer he gave the facts about his business, and let the quivering chips fall where they might.

"Does the American fertilizer industry need a tariff to protect it against foreign competition?" he was asked. Watson shifted uneasily, smiled a dry, ghostlike smile and answered:

"I cannot say that it does. In fact, we have no foreign competition. No mixed fertilizers—or practically none—are imported by this country."

"Why not?" the writer demanded. "As a Republican in good standing, you are doubtless aware that the protective tariff is all that saves American manufacturers from the onslaught of foreign competition, with its 'pauper labor' and cheap materials. Without protection, how have you escaped?"

"The answer," Watson replied, "is extremely simple. By the time foreign manufacturers of fertilizer have paid the freight to this country, they cannot afford to compete with us. Our production is on a much larger scale than theirs. The manufacturer's profit on a ton of fertilizer is less than one dollar. The freight on a ton of fertilizer from Europe to America is considerably more than that. We can produce it here cheaper than they can deliver it here.

No Competition in Foreign Fertilizers.

"No," he continued dryly, "I really cannot say that we need protection. If we did, no doubt we could get it."

"Has the threat of foreign competition ever forced you to cut wages?" the writer inquired.

"It never has," was the answer. "Most of our men are employed in handling and mixing fertilizers in bulk. This does not require great skill, but for labor of that type we pay as well as any concern in the country."

"Have you had much labor trouble?"

"We never did have any."

The importance of the fertilizer industry is well shown by figures collected by the United States Tariff Commission for 1923. In that year 23,500 persons were employed in the manufacture, and received in wages and salaries a total of $26,124,000. The total cost of the raw materials used was $127,980,000, and the total value of the manufactured product was $183,000,000.

Not only had this unprotected industry entirely withstood foreign competition without reduction of wages or loss of business; it had, on the contrary, as shown by the same figures, exported $3,600,000 worth of its product, paying the freight, and making a profit on it!

The principal ingredients of fertilizer, Watson explained, are potash, nitrates, phosphate rock and ammonias. Potash is imported from Germany and France, and nitrates from Chile. Virtually all the phosphate rock and ammonias are produced in this country. All these raw materials are on the free list. As a matter of fact, if the tariff were extended to them, it probably would increase the cost of American production to such a point that German fertilizers would be able to compete in the American market, Watson said.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Voice From Texas.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT IS A MATTER for congratulation that the democracy of the great State of Missouri, through its State convention recently assembled unanimously presented to the democracy of this republic, the name of Senator James A. Reed as the Democratic presidential nominee in 1928. As was said in that resolution, in substance, Senator Reed is "unexcelled in debate, and stands without a peer in the greatest deliberative body in the world, and possesses a political courage and independence of the highest order." The purity of his democracy, measured by the Jeffersonian standard, is unassailable.

To the great ability, the unquestionable courage, the far-sightedness, the broad patriotism and the forensic power of James A. Reed, more than to any other American citizen, in the United States Senate or out of it, is due the credit for keeping this great country free from the dangerous broils and entanglements of Europe which would inevitably have resulted from our entrance into either the League of Nations or the World Court.

However, the great services of Senator Reed in protecting his countrymen—from the insidious dangers of the League of Nations and the World Court, are not the only claims that he has upon them. He is a great Democrat; he is a great citizen; he is an admirable Senator and a courageous statesman, and one who has a firm and safe grasp on domestic problems. The Democratic party would honor itself by nominating Senator Reed for President of the United States, and the country would do itself a great service and honor by electing him to that great office.

Treatment of Cattle on Sidings.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE appeared in the People's Column of your Wednesday edition an article headed, "Merciful Man Is Merciful to Beast," and signed, "Red Cross." The inaccurate impression conveyed by this article has prompted me to make a reply, particularly in view of the fact that the writer of the article appears to be connected with the great humanitarian organization, the Red Cross.

Anyone living in the vicinity of the Frisco railroad tracks at Lindenwood is quite likely to hear the bawling of livestock quite frequently, but one who has had sufficient experience to speak on the subject is aware of the fact that most of the bawling is done by calves, and that which is done by grown cattle is largely accounted for by the fact that they are cooped up in railroad cars and denied the freedom of the open range or farms, to which they are accustomed, and in some instances, the bawling is done by cows whose calves have been taken away from them.

As to the statement that packing companies give no water to cattle for at least 24 hours before butchering—this is another indication that the writer might well have made inquiry before going into print, from the fact that practically all cattle sent to market are consigned to commission houses for sale, and the first service performed by the commission man after the receipt of the cattle is to see that they are filled as full of water as possible, as the commission man is working for the owner of the stock, and he makes a supreme effort to weigh as much water up to the packer, in the cattle, as it is possible to do.

Cause and Effect.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ONE needs only to read newspapers from other cities to realize that the assault of the 14-year-old girl in St. Louis recently is only one of many that are taking place all over the country. This article, however, is not to treat of the cases that come to the notice of the authorities, but of the cases that do not.

In the course of the years, I have come across any number of women who have met with sorrows of this sort. They have comprised no certain class. Rich, poor, educated and uneducated have all fared alike. Now, what becomes of these women? Some of them marry, become mothers, others rise to the pinnacles of fame. Still others, obsessed with the idea that there is no hope for the fallen, descend and descend until the world at large reads their stories in their faces and in their actions. Is the world forgiving, is it merciful? Indeed, not. It cares not one iota about the cause, it is the effect. It judges you by what you seem to be rather than what you really are.

Virtue, of course, is invaluable, but once it is gone it cannot be brought back by tears and despair. We cannot say why this or that happens to us in this world, but we can reconstruct our lives in order to forget the unpleasant things that have happened instead of constantly thinking of them.

The reason in despair should have been put aside with the eras long since passed. We should be advanced enough to understand that the will to do generally means the way to do, and be Christian-like enough to discriminate between the erring and the totally wicked.

VOTE FOR PROPOSITION NO. 1.

Missouri voters who want to vote for a workmen's compensation law and put Missouri on the list of progressive states must bear two things in mind when they go to the polls.

One is to avoid the trickery represented by Proposition No. 3, which is an initiative bill concocted by the ambulance chasers and a few radical representatives of labor. They should vote "No" on No. 3. Scratch the "Yes."

In order to assure the adoption of a sound compensation law, the voters must go to the polls and vote "Yes" on Proposition No. 1.

Proposition No. 1 is a carefully considered and drawn workingman's compensation law. It embodies the conclusions of representatives of industry and labor, who agreed upon each one of its provisions. It was adopted by the State General Assembly after careful consideration in committees and on the floor of the Senate and the House. Its provisions are in harmony with the best laws on the subject in other states. These provisions have been tried out and proved to be sound and workable.

Proposition No. 3, on the other hand, is a counterfeit compensation law, designed to deceive and fool the voters and to block all good compensation legislation for a time. It was framed not for the benefit of industry, labor, or the State, but for the benefit of the ambulance chasers, who profit enormously at the expense of both industry and labor and of the people generally, by the absence from the statute books of a good compensation law.

Concerning the benefits of a good workman's compensation law there can be not the slightest doubt.

It is humane, because it saves injured workingmen and their families from privation and suffering. It gives them immediate relief, without a rake-off for damage suit lawyers or court and litigation expenses.

It is economical. It eliminates all expensive litigation and gives the injured workingman or the family of a workingman who has been killed the full amount of compensation to which he is entitled. It reduces the cost of liability insurance, which increases the cost of all commodities and of all contract work throughout the State.

It does not increase taxation. Not a cent of the compensation is paid by the taxpayers. All expenses are borne by the insurance companies, and they are reduced to a minimum.

Missouri stands alone as the only industrial state without a workman's compensation law. It is one of only six states in the Union without a workman's compensation law. On this measure of progressive humanity and economy it is at the bottom of the list of states.

Proposition No. 1, which is on the ballot through referendum, has been indorsed by both the Republican and Democratic parties in their State platforms this year. It is approved by the Associated Industries, the Missouri State Federation of Labor, the American Federation of Labor, the Industrial Employes of Missouri, the farm, bank and press organizations, the Missouri Committee of Women in Industry and other women's organizations.

We can say without fear of contradiction from any intelligent source that the voters can rely on the soundness of the measure embodied in Proposition No. 1, and of the benefits that will flow from its adoption.

Vote for Proposition No. 1.

ABE BUZZARD.

It is with sadness that we learn of the arrest of Mr. Abe Buzzard of the Welsh Mountain section of Pennsylvania on a charge of chicken stealing. A number of times before, it should be said, Mr. Buzzard has been taken into custody, and our grief has been as intense as it is now; not, we hasten to add, because we have the honor of knowing him personally or because we have any special admiration for his character, but simply because he is named Abe Buzzard.

Was there ever such a marvelous monniker as this? It falls off the tongue with a delicious commingling of sibilant consonants and polychromatic vowels; it has a quaint and curious connotation; it is 100-per-cent American past a shadow of doubt. It seems to us a pity that a man with such a name should languish in durance vile. We trust that the grand jury will take into consideration his great age, which is 74 years; his fondness for reading the Bible; his 43 years in jail, and decline to return an indictment. After all, what are chickens when an Abe Buzzard is the chief figure of the proceedings?

MAN AND AMERICA.

Discovery in Java of the complete skull of Pithecanthropus Erectus may serve to remind us of the interesting fact that man in America seems comparatively recent.

It was in Java that the first trace of Pithecanthropus Erectus, the first man to walk upright, was found. The Piltdown Man comes from England: Neanderthal Man is from Europe. The Cro-Magnon Man is European. Rhodesian Man is from Africa. Of all the great land areas, America alone is exceptional for not having made a single interesting contribution to the science of man's evolution to his present status.

Not that there have not been found in America traces of humankind interesting to the anthropologist. The Calaveras Man, found in California, has been thought to have possibly indicated that man occurred in America before the glaciers. The same claim has been advanced for the Lansing Man, found in Kansas. It is in contributions to the science of man's development from the anthropoids, if so he did come, that America is weak. The testimony to date is against the age of America by comparison either with Europe, Africa or Asia. If she were as old as they are, it is reasonable to suppose that her contribution to the exhibit by which the development of the species is traced would approximate that of these other continents. The probability, therefore, is that the Western Hemisphere is comparatively recent. This is the evidence of anthropology, and it is also the evidence of archeology. There is nothing in American archeology to indicate that man lived here as long ago as he lived in some other parts of the world. No scientist has ever thought of America as the cradle of the race, but always as a distant part of the world, to which man emigrated after he had developed.

It is thought that the first culture in America, which seems to have been in Yucatan and Guatemala, began since Tutankhamen was buried in Egypt. The Aztec and Peruvian civilizations discovered by Cortez and Pizarro at the beginning of the sixteenth century were comparatively young. Neither had been in existence 500 years, though Rome had by that time risen to reign for a thousand years, and behind Rome lay the ruins of Old World civilization almost without end. The age of almost any people is indicated by their arts. If we may believe what the artifacts of America tell us we may be sure that man virtually knew nothing of America until he began to wander about the earth. He likely discovered it about the time Asia discovered Europe. He was probably making his way across Behring Strait at about the time the first Asiatics began to appear in Europe. It was Asia, seemingly, that overflowed. The Aryans pushed westward and the Mongolians pushed into the East. The American aborigine is at bottom a Mongolian.

So it was in Java, by all we know, that man first walked. And what a journey he went on!

MISSOURI'S HIGH SCHOOLS.

During the past 10 years there has been an increase of nearly 100 per cent in the number of Missouri high schools. Charles A. Lee, State Superintendent of Schools, recently made a survey which disclosed that 305 of 530 first-class high schools studied had fewer than 15 students in the graduating class, and 132 graduated fewer than eight. Last year 152 of these schools had an enrollment of less than 60 students apiece. The teaching force in 200 schools consists of three teachers, and the curriculum is necessarily circumscribed. All students must take the same courses and there is no room to permit the individual to express a bent in any direction but the one outlined.

It follows that, while numerous thinly populated sections have high schools, the schools themselves are inadequate and the cost of maintaining them is extremely burdensome. Mr. Lee says that in one extreme case two years ago it cost the taxpayers of a third-class high school district $392.43 for each child enrolled, and in another the cost was $309.14 per child. The survey shows that more than half of the present high school districts in the State do not have population enough to maintain high schools.

This is based on the estimate that no high school can be properly maintained on a solid financial basis with fewer than 20 students in each of the four grades. This is a low estimate. To conduct a high school efficiently and with modern educational methods, there should be 100 students or more, with the financial backing that that figure represents.

We understand the pride which small communities have in their schools and their eagerness to own their own high schools. But they must decide between the little one-horse schools which are a constant drain on their pocketbooks, and the larger consolidated school. The consolidated school was impracticable 20 years ago because of the lack of means of quick transportation. The automobile has changed that. Many consolidated schools now have their own bus lines, which can be maintained for a small fraction of the cost of separate schools, and students are picked up along the roads and transported in a few minutes distances that would require hours on foot or by wagon.

The people of Missouri should think over the high school situation most carefully, and we believe that any fair-minded person will see the advantages of the consolidated system. It is better for the children, and in many cases will lighten the burden of the taxpayer.

MORE MIRACLES TO COME.

With Harry Daugherty facing a criminal charge before a New York jury, the Teapot Dome decision reversed in a Federal Court of Appeals, with Republicans of Illinois and Pennsylvania in open revolt against the Republican primary scandals in those states, with the farmers rising against the tariff and Fall and Doheny, albeit struggling, being slowly brought to trial——

With all this to dampen his ardor, one might suppose that Senator Phipps, chairman of the Republican Senate Campaign Committee, is not very cheerful. It is not a grateful task that he has. There is not a political observer of any standing in the country who believes the Republicans have a chance to retain their control of the Senate.

Yet Senator Phipps is exuberant. The world is his. He sees not a cloud on the sky. The Republicans are going to win Senate seats in Massachusetts, Maryland, New York, Kentucky, Missouri, Ohio and Illinois. Butler, who is useless, is going to beat Walsh, who was useful. Williams, wobbler, is going to beat Hawes, who is courageous. Willis, a tailor's goose, is going to beat Pomerene, an able man.

If that is so, then the age of miracles has not passed.

REED SMOOT.

Reed Smoot in danger? It sounds absurd, but reports from Utah say that Smoot is facing the hardest campaign since he was first elected to the United States Senate in 1903. As a talking point for re-election he has stooped to boast of the fact that Federal jobholders from Utah during his regime have increased from four to nearly 500. This from the distinguished apostle of the Mormon Church, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and prince of sugar beets, of whom it is said in the current American Mercury:

> The public no longer thinks of him as Smoot, the Mormon. He has become somebody. A word from him gets more press attention than an hour of the best eloquence found in the two chambers on the bill. He is chairman of the Finance Committee, ranking member and virtually chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the watchdog of the Treasury, a militant proponent of economy in government, and one of the chief financial advisers to the President. Eloquence in the Senate is becoming a lost art, a sort of vestigial hangover from the Daniel Webster days. Government is more and more a matter of patient grinding in committee rooms—and here Smoot excels. In these committee rooms laws are made, mutilated or killed; appointments are made, deals are made and men are made. In them there is no playing to the galleries, no beating of tom-toms. Work is the chief thing—and Smoot is the most untiring worker in all Washington.

Yet this commanding figure, this "watchdog of the Treasury," goes before the people of Utah for re-election, and argues for himself that he has found jobs for nearly 500 of his constituents. It is a puny note for a man of Smoot's ability to sound. It would be more to the credit of this Cerberus of the exchequer, and certainly more consistent with his vaunted reputation if he had reduced 500 governmental jobs to four.

MR. ANTWINE'S OPINION.

"I used to think," said Mr. Antwine, "that the fellow who believed all that the seed catalogues say was the world's prize optimist. Then I was inclined to put my money on a Democrat running for Mayor of St. Louis. But lately, I have leaned more and more towards Senators Butler and Phipps of the G. O. P., otherwise Give Oil Permanently. For hopefulness, those two have a native son recounting the glories of California sounding like a New Yorker's unrevised opinion of Chicago.

"Senator Butler claims the country will approve the administration's policies. I don't doubt the country would, if we could find the policies. Waiting for a katydid to say something definite, final and irrevocable, sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, and until death do us part, is child's play compared to the herculean task of finding said policies. If I were a song writer and could play the ukulele, I'd borrow an old tune, and sing of the policies:

"They're only a squirrel in a gilded cage, They're getting nowhere fast";

meanwhile accompanying myself on the ukulele. Senator Phipps is worse. He foresees Republican victories in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kentucky and the Island of Yap. He is what I would call a land grabber; one who, like the man who said he was the biggest liar in seven counties, takes in entirely too much territory. A man who can feel that way in the dismal October would make a hell-roaring member of the Gopher Prairie Chamber of Commerce in the sweetly scented month of June. And an article in Harper's Magazine just got through telling us to have faith in Indiana. How anyone with faith in Indiana could vote for Watson is more than I can figure out, as the man said of his wife's bank balance. When it comes to straddling issues, Watson has our junior Senator looking like a paralyzed man under ether, strapped in a coffin. Watson can swallow anything. He climbed aboard the klan band wagon when the klan captured Indiana, but if Indiana ever gets normal, Watson may go down to Notre Dame and ask Knute Rockne to let him play on the team. Anyone with faith in anything could not vote for Vare. And there are some things worse than Ernst, but the only one I can think of offhand is arsenic.

"The way I figure, this is a Democratic year, and the Senators are whistling in a graveyard. The people may have lost all sense of honor, and the difference between the two parties may be hard to detect, but for the past six years the country has smelled of stagnation, money and oil. A few Democrats in Congress would guarantee a refreshingly different smell. The only way I can figure a Republican victory would be for all the employes of all the bureaus in Washington to go home, and get regular jobs under the present prosperous regime, and vote the Republican ticket. But if we lost all the bureaus, that would be a Democratic victory."

MORNING STAR.

Paul Verlaine

(Translation and adaptation).

While thy bright beams in splendor fail,
O lingering star, the morning lighting,
A thousand swiftly running quail
In moist thyme-scented fields are piping.

Let fall thy paling, soothing ray
On poet's eyes with love o'erflowing;
The skylark sings on high "The Day!"
And damask clouds in rose are glowing.

Bold Phoebus drowns thy last faint ray;
The cooling sighs of night are dying;
Life throbs again to quickening day.
And swollen grain to gold is drying.

O morning star! Far, far away,
Would that my thought like thee were shining.
The blades of grass dew-laden sway,
And shed their tears for thee repining.

Sweet visions still seal my love's eyes;
She waits in dream while I am aging.
Awake, my love, arise, arise!
Live golden morn ere sun be raging.

not create a machine. It creates a test of your Mayor, surer, quicker than any other you can devise. You will discover a bad Mayor through bad street car service quicker than any other way. Buy your street car system. That is all I have to say."

Couzens was a picturesque figure throughout the struggle for municipal ownership in Detroit. It was a tedious, long struggle with many dramatic highlights. The idea first was broached by the Detroit Daily News, a newspaper devoted to sane conservatism.

Mayor after Mayor, seeking to capture Daily News support, pledged himself to municipal ownership and went to sleep after his election. When Couzens first ran he pledged himself to municipal ownership of the car lines and added: "I mean what I say." He had scarcely warmed the Mayor's chair when he entered into negotiations for purchase. He agreed with the street car company to let the price be fixed by the Circuit Judges of the city. "Oh, yes," he interpolated. "I forgot to remind you that service at cost always is hypothecated upon a high valuation. It fails from the start because at the start costs are high."

He went to the public with his proposal and it was beaten. "You are giving the Circuit Judges a blank check," was the cry raised—the cloak under which business had fretted with the very mention of municipal ownership waged its campaign.

"Very well," Couzens said, accepting defeat, "we will try again." Three years later, he again brought the proposal to the polls. This time there was a fixed price—$31,500,000. Again Couzens was beaten. "Maybe it is just as well. I'll get the price down," Couzens said. Fortuitously the franchises of the street car company were beginning to expire, just as they are beginning to expire in St. Louis. The necessity of a refranchise for the United Railways before it can be brought out of receivership is the fact that makes consideration of municipal ownership in St. Louis imperative at this time, Couzens believes. The city never will be in a better trading position.

Car Company in Defiant Attitude.

Haughty in two victories at the polls, the street car company began its discussion with its $31,500,000 price. What cared it for expiring franchises? The city needed street car service and franchise or no franchise, it would continue in the streets.

Couzens began a counter offensive. He proposed to the people that they give him $15,000,000 with which to start a competitive system or at least a system that would carry service to points in the rapidly expanding city where the street car company did not or would not extend. Like the St. Louis company, it was in receivership and could not extend.

The war waged anew. "You can't build a street car system in a day," Couzens' opponents taunted. "Maybe not," Couzens retorted, "but I can and will make a start the very day that I get authority from the voters."

His opponents ridiculed him. "How can you let contracts and get going in one short day?"

"Never mind," Couzens told the people, "you believe me and the day you give me the money I'll start giving you street cars that the street car company has denied you."

By this time the public was beginning to be impressed with this ceaseless, never-say-die fight by its Mayor.

And Couzens was secretly laying plans to make his boast good. He imported a New York subway engineer. "Give me a street car plan," he ordered. "Give me one that will tie in with the old system, because some day we're going to municipal ownership and we don't want any duplications of service."

His engineer gave him the plans. Couzens selected a stretch of track in a district that sorely needed transportation. He called in a contractor. He made these negotiations secret. The contractor gave him a price of $55,000 for the first piece of track of the Detroit City Railways. Couzens signed the contract as a personal obligation. He trusted that when a public bidding occurred that his contractor would be the lowest and he would not have to pay the contract price.

Ordered Car Tracks From Busy Street.

He was growing confident of his public as his public was growing confident of him. The $15,000,000 bonds carried. Couzens fulfilled his promise. Before the vote was fully canvassed construction crews were at work.

But the important thing was: By a slender majority, Detroit citizens had at last committed themselves to the principle of municipal ownership.

The railways began to be worried and when Couzens reopened negotiations for purchase their price began to come down. It fell from $31,500,000 to $27,000,000. This time Couzens said "No." Down another notch. Still Couzens said "No."

Now the franchise on the railway company's most profitable line expired. It was Woodward avenue, comparable to the Olive street lines in St. Louis.

The company began to cry for an increase in fare. Couzens said: "Keep the fare at 5 cents and we'll let you stay in Woodward avenue for a time." He thus avoided the constitutional inhibition, so often employed to raise fares—no confiscation of private property. The fare must be adequate to produce a reasonable return. Couzens said: "We don't ask you to stay. Take the fare or quit business." The company was slipping but it grimly held on.

Then Couzens pulled a bold stroke. One morning he served notice to the company to remove its tracks from Woodward avenue. The company and the public were aghast. Couzens was grim. "Take them up," he commanded.

The street car company appealed to the courts. "You have no franchise to use the streets. The Mayor can order you out," the court decided.

Then the company grew sly. It obtained a permit to make certain repairs in Woodward avenue and when the city granted the permit, the company proclaimed: "You have restored our right to Woodward avenue."

Trolley Lines at Last Capitulate.

They went to court with that. While the case was pending, Couzens chanced upon the company counsel at lunch one day. The counsel was jubilant. "Mr. Mayor," he said, "we have you licked. We have paid Charles Evans Hughes $25,000 for an opinion in this case and he says you cannot oust us from Woodward avenue."

Couzens went back to his office. He wrote his personal check for $25,000. Then called in the City Counsellor. "Take that to William Howard Taft," he said, "and see if we can't get an opinion to support our position."

The City Counsellor took a day to consider. He reported back that he could whip Charles Evans Hughes without William Howard Taft, and he did. The Supreme Court of the United States upheld Couzens.

That won the fight. The street car company agreed to sell for $19,500,000. Couzens advised the voters to take it and they did.

Now Detroit is preparing to spend $280,000,000 for subways that will radiate six miles in three directions from the downtown. Couzens believes that it will carry. Before the project could proceed beyond the stage of discussion, it was necessary to amend the city charter to provide that 51 per cent of the $280,000,000 should be assessed against benefited property. It required a two-thirds vote. The proposal got 68 per cent of the vote. A freakish change of the State law required another election upon the same point. This time it got 70 per cent of the vote. On the basis of this action, it is predicted that next March, when Detroit polls its sentiment for subways, $280,000,000 will be voted.

Couzens and municipal ownership—Couzens and his theory to spend more to keep Detroit ahead, seems about to get its final victory.

SOCIAL WORKERS DEPART FOR CONVENTION AT BOONVILLE

Five-Year Program of Activity Will Be Proposed for State Conference for Social Welfare.

Approximately 100 St. Louis social workers departed last night to attend the twenty-fourth annual convention of the Missouri Conference for Social Welfare, to be held in Boonville, beginning today and continuing until Tuesday evening.

The delegation was headed by Scott R. DeKins, secretary of the Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, who also is president of the Missouri Conference for Social Welfare—elected at the convention of the organization held in St. Louis in October, 1924, and E. G. Steger, general manager of the St. Louis Provident Association, who also is secretary of the Missouri conference.

It is expected that from 400 to 500 delegates from practically every section of the State will attend the convention.

President DeKins will propose a five-year program of activity for the organization, which will require a campaign for a $15,000 budget, so that a full-time executive staff may be employed to carry out the program.

Junioh C. of C. to Hear School Head.

Charles A. Lee, State Superintendent of Schools, and Charles M. Hay, St. Louis attorney, will address a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium Thursday noon.

4000-Mile Trip Through Russia

part this class has disappeared; some accounts place the number that has perished at 2,000,000. The remnant that is left and not employed along aristocratic lines is bitter and with no hope for the future. They dress like the workers, engage in some trade or other, but the change involved is too drastic. They are wreckage of the revolution, but at present they make up only the merest fraction of the population. Then there is the unskilled industrial worker, for which there are certain compensations. The government has handed over confiscated theaters and amusement parks to the unions. Also, it has often provided them with confiscated chateaus in the south. Every workman has 20 days holiday a year and all his expenses paid for travel. I had passed trainloads of workers on their holiday, coming up across Russia from the south. Hospitals are maintained for workmen where treatment is free, and insurance cares for wife and children in times of sickness or in case of death.

Technical Experts Draw Big Pay.

There is yet another class of workmen, recently arisen. That is the trained technician, whose servises Russia needs sorely today. He often draws a large salary, huge, as salaries and wages run in Russia today. There is a steady shift going on, a return gradually to a capitalistic basis of production. The man engaged in trade or industry under the N. E. P., "nepman," as they are called, is in the most delicate situation, as regards this shift. The Government watches him with an eagle eye. Owning all the land and real estate and controlling a shifting scale of taxes, the Government remorselessly cuts down the "nepman's" earnings. Many are the tales of woe I heard from members of this class. One man who had a small bakery in Moscow was about to stop his business. Rent and taxes mounted monthly and he was actually on the point of losing money.

The women of Russia are in an odd situation of maladjustment, due to the changes of the revolution. They dress in every variety of antiquated style. Stockings are very expensive, so that the majority that I saw wore short socks. A rough skirt and a blouse or smock completes the apparel. Unspeakably dowdy is the effect produced, when they wear caps like those of the men. For the most part their hair is bobbed, though some indulge in an extremely ugly coiffure, pulling the hair out in long ugly knobs before their ears and wearing it banged in front. In all the time I was in Russia I think I saw no more than a dozen attractively dressed women. And they are unconscious of their looks. A complete deterioration in taste has followed, as a resultant of the years of misery. It is one with many of the living conditions, the so-called apartments, the food, the conditions of travel.

Condition of Women Is Improving.

The women are ostensibly on a basis of complete equality with the men. They engage in most of the trades that the men do, they have their membership in the various unions and even have unions of their own. But here also a profound change is taking place. The woman finds that a strenuous industrial occupation and a family are incompatible. One of the unions for women recently formed is called the "union of domestic workers." As to the state of marriage in Russia, statistics prove without question that far from being a country of free love and license it is increasingly domestic in character. Divorce is slightly on the increase. This depends on mutual agreement of the couple, or in cases where the wife is maltreated and the husband refuses to consent to divorce, a judicial committee investigates and grants the decree. Thereafter the husband must grant one-third of his income to his wife as alimony and support whatever children there may be. If the wife remarries, he must still support the children. This not only is on paper, I met with individual cases where this procedure had been carried out.

The Government has been turned toward improving the condition of children. Parks in Moscow and Leningrad are set aside for them, where they may play. Kindergartens have nurseries attached to them which care for children of working women at a nominal sum. There is, of course, the constant depression exerted on an outsider by the absence of sanitation as we know the connotations of that word. This is again due to the deteriorated sense of values after terrible suffering.

City Dwellers Hopelessly Crowded.

In the cities no one owns a house, although in what we should call suburban districts it is possible to buy or rent a small house. For the worker this is impracticable, because the train service is still considerably disorganized. Thus the average Russian family in one of the cities rents a room; if it is lucky, two or three rooms. The rent for this "apartment" varies according to the man's calling and sympathy with Communism. In some cases it is purely nominal, $2 or $3 a month; in others the same quarters cost a huge amount. I visited several different "apartments" in Moscow and Leningrad. They are unattractive, furnished with mere necessities and often terribly crowded with a large family. In Moscow, particularly, the recent growth in population of the city has made it almost impossible to obtain any rooms at all.

Food is not only expensive, it is very bad. The woman who prepares her food at home is faced with bad markets and no variety in foodstuffs, besides the discomfort of cooking in the same room used for bedroom, living room and all other activities. There are no green vegetables, the meat is handled with a woeful ignorance of sanitary methods and the water is positively dangerous. If one goes to astolovaia," a restaurant, usually down dirty, narrow steps, in a cellar, one runs even greater risks. The average meal obtainable consists of a greasy soup, with floating chunks of meat in it, coarse black bread and "pibo" or "kvass." And this meal costs the equivalent of a dollar. In the expensive hotels the restaurants are better. I was interested in learning what the common Russian eats and I paid for my curiosity by an illness from which I have only recently recovered. The people have passed through actual starvation, now that they have enough to eat it does not occur to them to have their food properly cared for.

Swinging Back Toward Religion.

In Moscow, on a street leading into the "Krassnaia" or Red Square, where Lenin's tomb stands, is one of the most revered ikons of the Russian Church. Before the Revolution people crossed themselves passing this shrine even two squares away. A tall Russian priest stands outside crossing himself and blessing the pasers-by. At one side on a conspicuous portion of the wall of a state building is chiseled a sentence in large letters, "Religion is the opiate of the people." The people ignore the warning of the Communist leaders and continue practicing their devotion. Though some of the churches such as St. Basil's have been converted into museums or even libraries, the majority of them are open and crowded. The younger generation is sometimes excitably atheistic; for the most part Russia is still profoundly religious. The tomb of the patriarch Tihkon is kept covered deep with flowers. It is another instance of changes occuring inevitably which the government is powerless to control, which, in fact, it must adapt itself to.

In Russia the people in the cities amuse themselves much as an American crowd might. There are many moving picture theaters, concert halls, theaters for legitimate drama. Then there are the parks alluded to before. It is interesting to see a great crowd of Russians together in one of these in the late afternoon and evening. There are two kinds of parks in Moscow. One is reserved for athletics. Here people pay a nominal entrance sum and then, after a physical examination by a doctor, engage in every variety of sport. Teams are formed to play football, or soccer rather, and basketball, part of the crowd merely watches. The other type of park has two or three theaters in it and tables where one may sit and watch the passing crowd and drink something. These parks nominally belong to central executive sections of the great unions. Any one may enter though for a small admission fee. There is moreover a curious educational diversion practiced in Russia today. It goes by the Russian name of "excursio." Crowds of common people are sent on these "excursios" under a competent director to museums, theaters, other sections of Russia, even on sightseeing trips through the city. One runs across them everywhere, seemingly interested, being talked to at a great rate by their leaders. I suspect that a great deal of Communistic propaganda is subtly worked into an explanation even of modern art.

Peasant Withholds His Increasing Wealth.

The most vital change that is occurring in Russia is in the economic field. A tremendous adjustment to new values is taking place gradually but steadily. The leaders of the present regime are concentrating every attention upon this problem. Educational experiments in the cities and among the peasants; applying the Dalton plan in the school systems, creating peasant club houses and the like all attend the bigger issue. The recent political ferment is only the latest manifestations of this. Russia is at present without capital in any considerable quantity. Her industrial development was far behind other states of Europe before the war, now it is pitifully inadequate. The stand of the soviet on foreign obligations denies them the possibility of foreign loans. Her vast internal wealth is in the form of agriculture, and from agriculture she mush create a fund of capital for carrying on industrial expansion.

However, a vicious circle obtains. The peasant cannot receive manufactured articles in return for an excess production of grain. Therefore he withholds this huge wealth which would normally be used as an exchange for loans to develop industry. The soviet regime is at the crossroads. Only with a gradual swing back to capitalism is a normal resumption of the country's economic growth to take place. Such leaders as Stalin, who recognize that it is not the proletariat, a mere 10 per cent in the population, but the huge majority of the Russian peasants, upon whom Russia's future rests, will hold the reins of government in the months to come. And inevitably this implies a restraint of Communist principles which will whitewash over the "red" connotations in Russia.

KEWANEE

The Key to Boiler Economy

A boiler which can't consume coal thoroughly is not economical. It's wasteful. Black smoke issuing from the smoke-stack proves that the fuel is not being consumed properly, because smoke is nothing but unconsumed fuel.

The reason Kewanee Smokeless Boilers are Smokeless is that they consume all the gases, and give you the full worth of every ounce of fuel you use. None of the cost goes up the chimney in smoke. That's real and continuous economy.

Another important element of the Kewanee Boiler's guaranteed economy is that it will burn any type of fuel without smoke. Even the poorest grades of soft coal are burned in the Kewanee Boiler without smoke. Figure what your savings would be between cheap, soft coal and the high-priced smokeless coal.

Imagine what this means to you if you are large users of coal. The saving will pile up into so much money that it will surprise you. And the facts have been demonstrated so often that you who ignore them are unwise.

BRITISH ASYLUMS IN SEVERAL CASES VERITABLE PRISONS

Investigation Results in Demand for Law Changes to Make Liberty of Citizens More Secure.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—How many people, as in the celebrated Harnett case that eventually was carried right up to the House of Lords, are now imprisoned in lunatic asylums—victims of an obsolete law easily manipulated by the unscrupulous?

How many children are cruelly committed to institutions for the insane through acts of babyish temper, as in the case of pretty Rose Berrows, who was certified because she kicked down the panel of a door in a room where she had been locked up as a punishment, but who afterwards created a stir through England by running away to be married, three independent doctors certifying her sane?

How many human beings suffering from such diseases as pneumonia, with its consequent temperature and mental disturbance, are robbed of their freedom—as is alleged by the naval architect, Mr. Hugh Holman, who remained for a long time imprisoned and was forced in the end to win his freedom by running away from Ticehurst Asylum, where Prince Ahmed Seif Ed-Din, a short time ago also escaped, to the astonishment of the whole world.

And—more sinister possibly—how many conspiracies succeed in "putting away" inconvenient relatives or even husbands, as Capt. Hume-Spry claims was the case when doctors, intriguing with his beautiful and fascinating wife, certified him a lunatic.

These are some of the questions which resulted in the appointment of a Royal Commission whose revelations have recently revived the anxiety of the British public to enable new legislation with stricter safeguards for the liberty of the individual. The findings of the commission chill the heart of every thinking citizen, for the veriest prisons seem not to inflict so much suffering as the asylum where, above all else, sympathy is needed.

Chapter of Horrors.

The history of lunacy—save in the East, where madness is regarded as the direct act of God—always has been chapter after chapter of horrors. It is believed by the majority of psychologists today that a great number of so-called witches burnt for their strange activities were in reality misunderstood lunatics.

Then came the period when madness was regarded as "possession," and the lunatic was forced to undergo the most ghastly tortures to cast out devils. The chaining of madmen, the violence used toward them, the frightful conditions in which they were compelled to drag out their existence is one of the most terrible indictments against humanity.

The horrors of lunacy of the nineteenth century were dimly apprehended when Charles Reade's powerful novel, "Hard Cash," exposed the danger to any citizen of being cast into the darkness of a lunatic asylum at the will of a conscienceless enemy. For many years England had blissfully cherished the delusion that the incarceration of a sane person was physically impossible. And then came Harnett.

W. S. Harnett was a wealthy farmer. His wife died of tuberculosis and Harnett, suffering throat trouble, believed he had caught the infection. He took the fatal step of consulting a quack. The fake doctor injected tuberculin, but in such manner as to make the patient desperately ill. The doctors for a while despaired of saving him.

As a result of this illness his mind became, for a time, unhinged. But so do those of thousands of other fever-racked patients even during the convalescent stage!

Harnett, after five days of nursing, was removed to Malling Place, in Kent. The chief of the asylum was Dr. George H. Adams. After a month, Mr. Harnett had recovered and, with a certificate given in due form from a Justice of the Peace, was allowed to go on a visit of 28 days to his brother.

Wins Nine-Year Fight.

During this time, Harnett visited the Lunacy Commissioners in London to protest at having to return to the asylum. Dr. Bond, who received him, immediately telephoned to Dr. Adams that Hartnett had "escaped" from the care of his brother and instructed him to fetch the patient at once.

In the court proceedings that took place nine years later, it was brought out that Bond never made any effort to see whether Harnett had actually escaped from his brother, and in the end the jury awarded Hartnett damages of $125,000.

The legal points involved threw light on the whole of the hitherto dark situation and at the suggestion of Hartnett's counsel, the appointment of a Royal Commission followed as a result of the farmer's martyrdom.

Close on the Hartnett case came nerve-racking disclosures made by Hugh Holman, who had suffered a similar fate, who was sent to the asylum at the instance of Sir Maurice Craig, a noted alienist. By some arbitrary ruling, he was not allowed to see his wife, although considered sane enough to transact business there. Removed to Ticehurst Asylum, Mrs. Holman was permitted to visit him and he was given unbounded liberty on parole.

Finally he withdrew his parole and determined to escape. He eluded the vigilance of the attendants and hid himself for 14 days, after which, according to the law of England, if a lunatic has not been found, the lunatic is free. Directly he was out of hiding, he went to several doctors who certified him sane.

In a month or two, Capt. Hume-Spray's action, charging the doctors with conspiracy to keep him prisoner, is to be heard. Revelations of the action of his beautiful wife during his detention are expected to throw a lurid light on the reason for his incarceration.

Fire Has Burned 79 Years.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISON, N. J., Oct. 9.—A load of live coals from a furnace fire kindled in 1847, and never allowed to go out, was carried from the Public Service gas works in Market street, Newark, to the new plant in Harrison. The new plant was put into service today.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not, as some believe, to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

From School Teacher To Great Eminence

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania studied diligently and qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save up enough money to put him thru medical college. He began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pa.

He was a student of nature, knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Later, he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where he launched his favorite remedies, and in a short time they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known blood medicine and tonic. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U. S. If your druggist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to the Dr. Pierce Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.

WANTS NIGHT AND DAY AFFAIRS WOUND UP

Finance Commissioner Believes 5 Per Cent More Will Be Paid —Loss Totals $950,000.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 9.—State Finance Department employes and special attorneys in charge of liquidation of the wrecked Night and Day Bank of St. Louis, have been instructed by Finance Commissioner Cantley to make every effort to wind up the bank's affairs by the end of this year. The bank closed on Jan. 6, 1922, and has been in the hands of the State for four years and nine months.

The loss to depositors, other creditors and stockholders of the bank will total approximately $950,000, it was stated.

Depositors have been paid $1,610,579, or 60 per cent of the approximately $2,600,000 in approved claims. The commissioner estimated that another "dividend" of 5 per cent could be paid. This will mean a loss of about 33 per cent, or approximately $250,000 to depositors and other creditors. The $100,000 capital stock of the bank was wiped out in the failure, involving a total loss to the stockholders.

Expenses of the liquidation, paid entirely from assets of the bank, have totaled $158,900 since the bank closed. This total does not include whatever additional fees will be sought by the special attorneys for their services since the allowance for fees for their 1925 work.

The special attorneys so far have received $65,000 in fees and allowances, and $2000 or $3000 have been paid to attorneys in commissions on certain note collections and compromises of accounts. The first $55,000 of these fees went to Thomas E. Francis and the law firm of Case & Miller of St. Louis. The firm comprised Clarence Case and Mayor Miller of St. Louis. Miller retired from the firm soon after he became Mayor of St. Louis, and the most recent allowance of $10,000 went to Francis, Case and law partners of the latter. The fee allowances were made by St. Louis Circuit Courts.

Cantley said the department desired to wind up the liquidation as rapidly as possible, to cut off the expense charges against the remaining assets of the bank.

Since the first of the year the insolvent bank division of the State Finance Department has wound up the liquidation of 16 banks whose assets at the time the banks failed totaled $3,264,221. In closing out 11 of the 16 banks, the depositors received their claims in full. In several instances this was accomplished by reorganization and reopening of the banks or by absorption of the closed bank by a going institution. In the other five bank liquidations terminated so far this year, the depositors and other creditors received from 11½ per cent to 84 per cent of their claims.

FORMER ST. LOUISAN WRITES OF MANY CHANGES SEEN HERE

J. H. Johnson, Visiting City After Absence of 35 Years, Is Amazed at Size.

Visiting in St. Louis last week after an absence of 35 years, J. H. Johnson, railroad agent of New York, was impressed with the "tremendous changes" which have taken place. He wrote to the Post-Dispatch:

"Note your Coliseum occupies the site formerly so well known as Uhrig's Cave, and the site of the old Pickwick Theater, now a large brass company. The Bell Telephone Building, the Railway Exchange Building, and many new theaters, and particularly the immense improvement of Grand avenue, impressed me greatly. The tremendous changes in St. Louis are perhaps more apparent to me than to those who have remained constantly in the city, and I heartily congratulate you on the improvement."

Thirty-five years ago, Johnson recalled, he was a guest at an entertainment by the St. Louis Press Club in honor of Richard Mansfield, the actor, at the club quarters on Sixth street. During his visit here last week, Johnson attended an entertainment by Modoc Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and was surprised to find C. H. Bartlett, directing the Modoc String Quartet, was the same one who directed the St. Louis Ideal Quartet at the entertainment for Mansfield.

FARMER ACQUITTED OF MURDER

Jury Frees Frank Riley at Bloomfield in 20 Minutes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMFIELD, Mo., Oct. 9.—Frank Riley, tenant farmer, charged with the murder of Charles F. McMullin, wealthy Sikeston landowner, was acquitted by a jury in Circuit Court here this morning after the jury had been deliberating only about 20 minutes. Riley's trial began Tuesday morning. The State demanded a first-degree murder verdict.

McMullin died of gunshot wounds suffered Jan. 1 last, in an encounter with Riley. A shot from Riley's gun penetrated McMullin's abdomen and he died after being taken to a hospital at Cairo.

Gas Men to Attend Meting.

Twelve officers and department heads of the Laclede Gas Light Co. and seven others depart today for Atlantic City to attend sessions of the American Gas Association beginning there tomorrow. Methods of using gas for househeating to eliminate smoke and household drudgery, its rapid development as an industrial fuel to reduce manufacturing costs and its forthcoming use as a household refrigerant, are among the questions to be studied by the gasmen.

Glassware Is More Than Important

A complete dinner service may be had in Glass, with graceful Fostoria stemware to match, and this lovely crystalware is impervious to heat or cold. Now that the color scheme is so basic a factor, it is delightful to find every wanted piece, of necessity or decoration, fashioned of sparkling crystal in glowing amber and cool green.

PICTURES

Well Selected for Various Rooms

"Pictures are back," say the decorators. People who have the knack of placing the right picture in the right room need not choose expensive originals to attain charming effects. An immense new shipment of framed pictures has just arrived in the Art Wares Shop, including all manner of subjects—pastorals, marines, birds, flowers, religious subjects—copying etchings, water colors, pastels and oils. Priced from $1.00 to $20.00. A special group of original oils is priced at $15.00.

MIRRORS

Reflect the Vogue

With the tendency to assemble rooms distinctly of the period modes, mirrors have come into well deserved prominence. Decorative in itself, the mirror multiplies in its crystal depths every fleeting light and shade of the colorful furnishings of a room. And by clever placement, one can apparently enlarge the size of the room.

Artwares Shop—Fourth Floor.

Decorative Objects

"The little things that count" are truly never more essential than in putting the finishing touches to the home. The gleam of old brasses beside the hearth; the vivid charm of peasant potteries; the queerness of old Chinese carvings; all contribute to the mellow warmth of rooms where people linger. The Art Wares Shop is replete with suggestions.

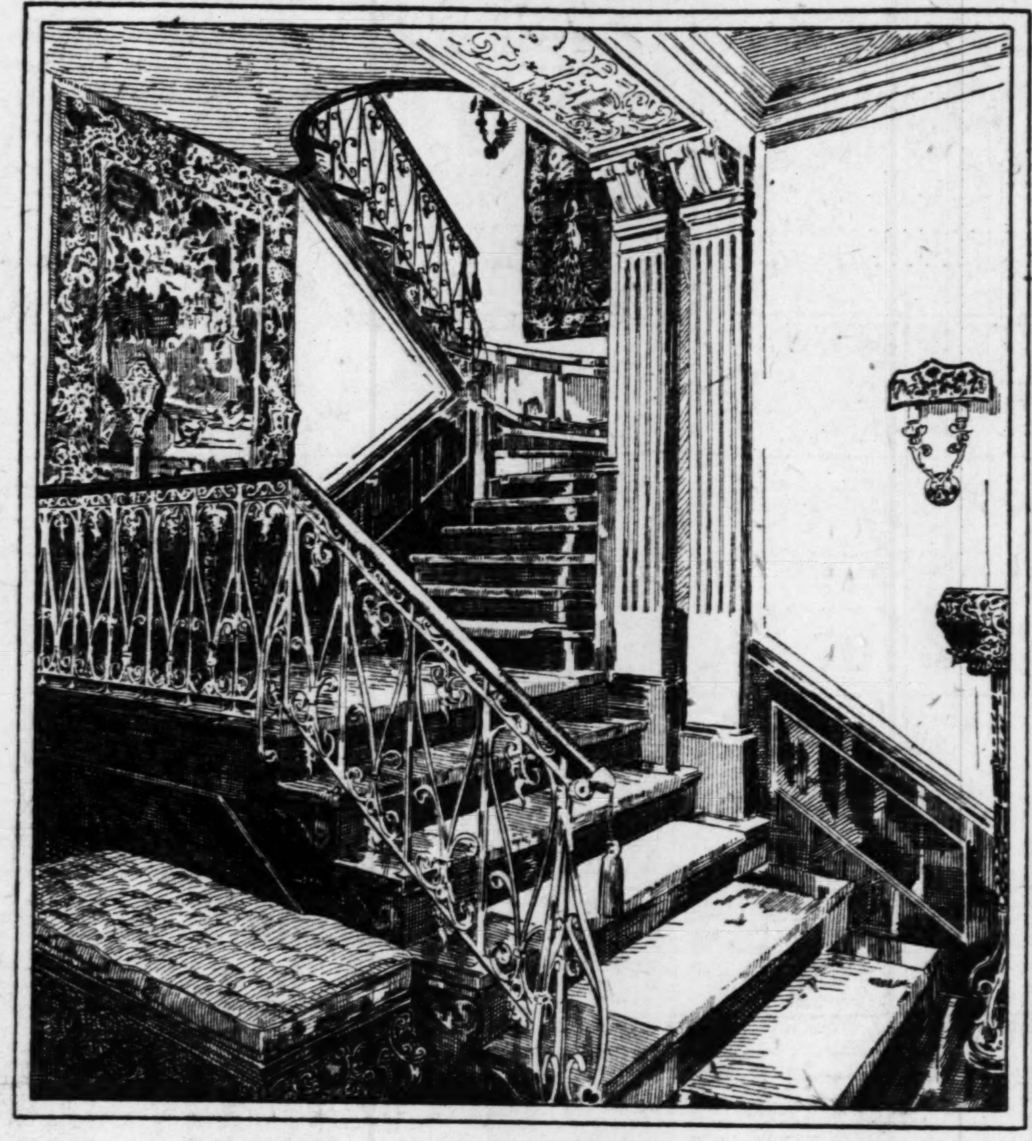
BOOKS

Every Home Should Own

Everyone who hobnobbed in youth with those "Dream Children" of the great authors, loves to thumb over the old volumes once in a while just to renew old acquaintance. No home can be complete without their silent presence. And then there are the ever increasing ranks of the new—picturing in sprightly language the kaleidescope of today. Surely no one can afford to be without books—of yesterday, today and tomorrow!

Vandervoort's Book Shop—Sixth Floor.

Entrance Hall by Vandervoort's Decorators



The Hallway shown above is an example taken from a house in which the entire decorating scheme was worked out by our Interior Decorating Studios. We are fully equipped with a highly trained technical organization to handle every detail from start to finish. Our vast stores of merchandise provide a wealth of material from which to assemble every type of beautiful interior.

How to Make Curtains and Floorcoverings Supply Proper Background for Any Room

Maintaining Correct Balance in Color and Texture

Plain stucco and plaster walls permit much latitude in choice of Rugs and Draperies; and textiles were never more artfully designed, more rich of coloring, than now, when the Latin type of dwelling is selected for so many of the better new homes.

Draperies May Mar or Make

Selection of the proper color scheme is the beginning of success; warm shades of rose, red, orange, tan, yellow and brown for the rooms of northern exposure, cool shades of blue, gray, green, mauve for rooms facing south or east. With the variety of rich brocatelles, damasks, brocades in plain, striped and figured weaves, offered in our Drapery Shop, there are infinite opportunities to achieve artistic combinations. For the exceptional requirement, our special order facilities bring within reach the best of the market, at home and abroad.

Novelties in Curtain Panel Laces

Never before have we shown so great a variety of styles. Where light, dainty window treatments are desired, there are the Chantilly Florentine Panels of sheer, allover lace with Chantilly ruffling at $18.50 the pair. Another type destined for marked preference due to the vogue of lace is the Watteau Normandy Panel, which is true to type.

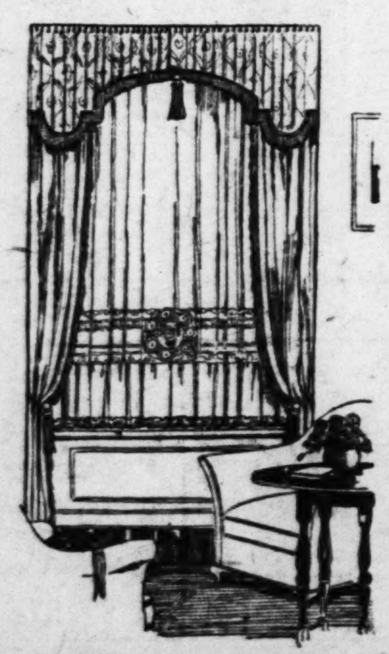
Quaker Curtains in New Gold Colorings

"Radiant Laces" they are called, so sunshiny are these new rayon panels, beautifully woven and flounced with lace. Others are of fine Egyptian yarns in soft ivory shades that lend themselves to every purpose where fine Curtains are in demand. The prices range from $4.00 to $11.00 each.

Drapery Shop—Fourth Floor.

Scotch Grenadines With Woven Floral Motives

Durability, economy and beauty are well served by these sunfast and tubfast draperies that come in one color or multi-colored weaves—the variety of colors woven into one pattern governing the price. Quaintly pretty are the designs in natural colored morning glories, hollyhocks, pond lilies and roses, while conventional paneled effects are offered in wide variety.



Domestic Rugs Show Marked Improvement

While plain, dull tones are still required in certain instances, where rooms are carpeted, the tendency in Rugs is toward a bolder use of design. Striking Spanish patterns are now obtainable in an excellent weave. Persian, Chinese and old sources in Asia Minor have been utilized to good effect in the fine reproductions offered by American manufacturers who pride themselves as well on the long-wearing quality of their Wiltons and Axminsters.

Linoleum Finds Itself in New Places

Obviously as satisfactory as ever for the service portion of the home, Linoleum has been developed for a whole new range of uses within the last few years. No one who has seen the new embossed tile effects could fail to see their delightful possibilities for the hall, sunroom, nursery—in fact, wherever a floor of real tile would fit into the general scheme. Newly imported Scotch patterns and best domestic grades are priced from $2.50 to $3.75 square yard.

Home of the Chickering

The Chickering Piano—with the Ampico or without—is sold at Vandervoort's exclusively in St. Louis. Beautiful period models may be had to suit any type of interior furnishings.

The latest music—for the player piano, Victrola or Brunswick—is always obtainable in our Music Salon.

Music Salon—Sixth Floor.

LAMPS

Never More Beautiful

Lamps are following closely the style trends in home furnishings that seem to grow more and more sophisticated. The quaint old colonial whale oil lamp adds a finishing touch to rooms of early American furnishings; stately floor Lamps and Torcheres fashioned of old brass and iron complete the room of Italian or Spanish influence; and there are countless adaptations of good design that are admirable in the average home that follows only the dictates of good taste and comfort.

A new floor Lamp has a hexagon-shaped shaft with hand-hammered tripod base finished in very dull old gold. With an entirely new type of soft leather-like parchment shade, it is priced $40. Several other designs and sizes of this type.

Proper Lighting Fixtures

An exceptional assortment of Lighting Fixtures is available this season; in size, variety and price it is particularly of interest to owners of homes because the individual needs of each different type have been carefully provided for. Some very lovely designs are shown in wrought iron, with touches of bright color charmingly introduced.

Artwares Shop—Fourth Floor.

ORIENTAL RUGS

Yielding the beauty that is beyond the consideration of price, fine Oriental Rugs inevitably find their way to the well-furnished home. Wonderful color combinations, reflecting the innumerable tints of an ever-sunny land, give inexhaustible charm. The infinite care bestowed on every stage of their production, gives them that character and quality demanded by those who discriminate.

Persian, Saruk, Laverre, Ispahan, Lilahan, also Kendahar, Iran, Belouchistan and beautiful rugs from China and all the finest weaves in great variety are found in our Oriental Rug Shop.

An exceptional group of room-size Siswans is priced for a limited time at $375. The popular 3.6x6.6 foot size in Iran Rugs may be had for $47.50.

Oriental Rug Shop—Fourth Floor.

LINENS

An ample supply of Linens is essential to the well-equipped home. Pattern tablecloth and napkin sets, luncheon sets and decorative Linens that advance the newest ideas are presented in a large array at Vandervoort's.

Most Successful Homes Are Furnished According to a Well-Made Plan Worked Out in Advance

OUR BUDGET BUREAU HAS HELPED MANY

Exhibit of Typical Rooms Attracts Many Visitors. Modern Trend Shown in Special Room

The Budget Bureau, during several years of successful functioning, has proven on repeated occasions to be an inestimable service to our patrons. Practical suggestions are given for furnishing the home wholly or in part, on the most economical basis. Actual personal help in selecting the right articles is often requested of the expert in charge. When a complete room or entire house is to be furnished, our Deferred Payment Plan will appeal to many. Part payment is made at the time of purchase and the balance is divided into convenient monthly instalments.

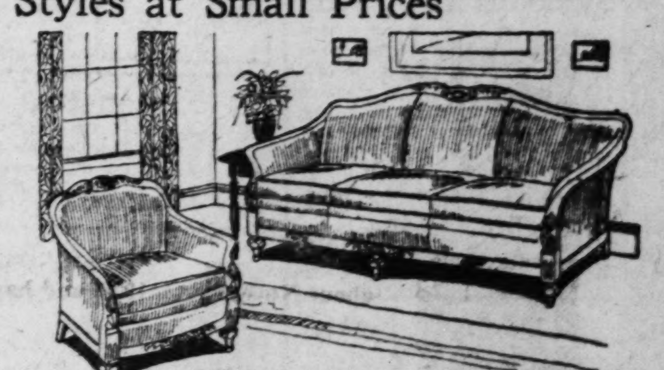
The Modern Trend Shown in a Room From the Paris Exposition

A completely furnished room, erected in the Drapery Shop, showing the use of new textiles displayed at the Exposition of Modern Art in Paris, is attracting much comment. Every detail of furniture, draperies, woodwork and objects of ornament, conforms to the new type, and the ensemble furnishes an interesting study in decoration.

This room was designed and executed in Paris expressly for Schumacher and Company, the great American drapery house. Its object is to demonstrate that these modern fabrics can be used in a manner acceptable even to the conservative taste.

Furniture Exhibit Shows Striking Examples of Good Styles at Small Prices

A visit to our Fifth Floor Furniture Shops will prove at a glance that careful thought has been taken to provide good selections at reasonable prices for every type of home. There are the exceptional things, of course, for the magnificent mansion; there are the simple, charming things of use and beauty for the little home; and all manner of attractive furnishings that may be added to any home, at any time, for use or embellishment.



This Suite is an example of comfortable living-room furnishings, well constructed. Covered in fine mohair, with hand-carved frame. Two pieces........$375

Bedroom of Early American Pieces

A full-size, four-poster bed, large dresser and either the chest of drawers or chifforobe completes this attractive Suite of brown mahogany. Every piece has been designed with the matchless simplicity and individuality that is characteristic of the period, and it is an exceptionally well made, inexpensive Set at $239. Odd pieces to complete the room are priced in proportion.

Dining-Room Furniture of Sixteenth-Century England

A collection of fine reproductions of old English Furniture has been placed on exhibit in the Furniture Shop. Made entirely by hand, after the fashion of centuries ago, the makers have exerted the utmost care to preserve every characteristic of the originals. Placed beside genuine antiques, they would scarcely be distinguished from them.

Unusual Display of Small Pieces That Fill the Awkward Corner and Make Home Complete

Though period furniture is in high favor, where the desired effect is great dignity and beauty, it is possible to guard against too severe and formal an atmosphere by combining pieces in comfortable informal groupings. Nothing adds more of cozy charm than the many little tables, used beside big restful chairs and the small sofas seating two. A large Coxwell Chair covered in frieze ($89) and a walnut-top End Table with book trough ($18.50) makes one of these attractive groupings.

Desk, $69 Chair, $22.00

Another piece of furniture that adds much to the livable atmosphere of a room is the roomy table desk, an example of which is sketched at left with a chair of suitable style to place beside it. The walnut fronts and top are richly colored and even the hardware appears to be hand hammered, in keeping with the design. A bright crimson plush seat gives color to the sturdy chair.

Unique Exhibit of Bedroom Furnishings Shows How to Make This Important Room Livable

Anna Catherine Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Page of 4939 West Pine boulevard, became the bride last night of Carlos F. Betz Jr., of the Park Hotel, at a pretty ceremony at St. Michael and All Angels' Church, the Rev. Dr. Carl Block officiating. The church was decorated in ferns and with an archway of the blossoms under which the bridal party stood.

The bride wore ivory satin made on straight lines, with a skirt slightly lifted in front and bordered with a deep band of pearl embroidery. The bodice has a transparent yoke sewn with pearls, and a bolero coat effect falling toward the back and forming a long court train lined with silver cloth and trimmed with pearl embroidery and clusters of orange blossoms. There were long satin sleeves edged with pearls and over the entire gown the tulle veil caught into a coronet of duchess lace at the hair.

R. W. Stuckenberg was best man and William Rodiek, Norman Dr. Carl Beisbarth, Roland and Arthur Elsterman, groomsmen. A reception at the St. Louis Woman's Club followed the ceremony. The ceremony was performed in one of the living rooms in the Crossen home, where Southern smilax, ferns and yellow and white chrysanthemums formed a graceful canopy over the altar. Cathedral candles and tall vases of yellow chrysanthemums augmented the stately setting. Dahlias and asters decorated the mantels in the living and dining rooms.

The bride was costumed in a wedding gown fashioned of heavy satin de landes and thread lace shot with silver, of robe de style design. At the shoulder of the tight-fitting bodice, two long ribbons of cream velvet were held by a cluster of orange blossoms. Coolidges Plan Dinner in Honor Of Queen Marie

Capital to Welcome Royal Visitor — Society Is Outlining Social Calendar for Season.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—President and Mrs. Coolidge have announced a dinner Oct. 19 in honor of Queen Marie of Rumania and her suite, with a reception afterwards to which all the notables of the capital will be invited.

The Rumanian legation is swamped with invitations for Queen Marie, and it seems that all America wishes to honor this granddaughter of Queen Victoria, who is known as the gayest Queen in Europe.

Her tour of the United States promises to be a triumph and the cities she will visit are planning unique entertainments. The Infante Beatrice of Spain, 40 years old, and not the Infanta Beatrice, 17 years old, daughter of the King and Queen of Spain, will accompany Queen Marie to America.

A signal honor has been paid to Mrs. James M. Thomson of New Orleans, daughter of the late Champ Clark, who has been appointed by the Governor of Louisiana to represent that State on a committee of notable women from every state in the Union, which will meet the Queen on her arrival in New York and escort her to Washington. This committeee is being arranged by Ira Nelson Morris, former American Minister to Sweden, and Governors of various states are appointing their most distinguished women for this service.

A brilliant season is forecast for Washington in the list of state dinners and receptions which will be given by President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House from Dec. 3 to Feb. 17.

The season will open with the Cabinet dinner, Dec. 3, followed by the diplomatic reception, Dec. 9, when envoys of many lands will bring greetings from their sovereigns to President and Mrs. Coolidge. A New Year's reception for the general public will be held this year.

The White House announcement has made it possible for other Washington hostesses to arrange their social calendars for the season. First and foremost come the entertainments for Queen Marie of Rumania whose three days in Washington, Oct. 19, 20 and 21, will be busy ones.

Mrs. Wilbur, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, has gone to Philadelphia to visit the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition.

Weddings and Announcements Of Engagements her sister, and Louis Pelletier will be best man for Mr. Swehla.

Miss Pauline Senst, daughter of Mrs. Anna Senst of 3141 South Grand boulevard, and Orville J. Young were married at the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church on the evening of Oct. 2 by the Rev. Charles Record. Miss Adele Drimme was maid of honor, and Gertrude Pieper bridesmaid. The bride's gown was of white satin and tulle, made with a tight bodice and full skirt trimmed with orange blossoms. Her veil was held to her hair with a coronet of duchess lace and she carried roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore pink taffeta and tulle trimmed with roses of the material and wore silver roses in her hair. Miss Pieper was similarly gowned in shell pink and both young women carried Ophelia roses. Elsa Senst and Grace Johnson, flower girls, wore pink and blue taffeta frocks respectively and carried baskets of pink and blue blossoms. Clifford Ostercamp was best man, with Alvin G. Young groomsman. The ushers were Oscar Fischer and Edgar Krueger.

A reception followed at the Liederkranz Club. After a wedding trip the couple will reside at the home of the bride's mother.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Caroline Tumalty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Tumalty of 5843 Cabanne avenue, and Lyle C. De Veaux. The wedding took place Oct. 2 at Clayton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hirsch of 5817 St. Louis avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Marguerite, to Lawrence P. Riedy. The wedding will take place Oct. 27 at St. Theresa's Church. Miss Margaret Munenroth will be bridesmaid and M. McCarthy will serve as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Freund of 5478 Delmar boulevard have announced the engagement of their daughter, Ruth, to Bert Stampfer, son of Mrs. Rose Stampfer. The date for the wedding has not been set.

Miss Ruth kenley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kenney of 11 Highland terrace, entertained guests with a bridge luncheon Saturday, Oct. 2, at which announcement was made of her engagement to Lewis Kilgour Lamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lamson of Clifton avenue. The party was given in honor of Miss Betty Herzog, whose wedding to Clarence McFarland will take place this fall, and included a shower for the bride-elect. The wedding is scheduled for this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klipper of 5034 Etzel avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosalind, to Fred Marcus, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Marcus.

A New Standard of Value in

AUTUMN AND WINTER COATS

—Possible Because We Joined Our Style-Knowledge and Purchasing Power With That of Sixteen Other Stores in a Half-Million Dollar Purchase

BECAUSE we grouped our orders with 16 other stores, we can offer you the unusual in value. Because the standards of workmanship, fabric and fur were so exacting, you are assured the exceptional in quality. And because these Coats were chosen, individually, from hundreds of models submitted to a committee of stylists representing all of the seventeen stores, you may know that these are the cream of Winter fashions—the utmost in chic, the styles that will be smartest as the Winter season advances. Our collection is complete in Coats for dress and for sports wear—no important style is missing, no figure type has been overlooked. We invite you to see these Coats Monday and to take prompt advantage of this unusual opportunity.

Dress Coats and Sports Coats for Misses, Women and Larger Women in These Specialized Groups

$59.50

Outstanding for their quality are the Coats that comprise this group—for though the price is low, you'll find here the high-grade fabrics, the rich furs and the careful tailoring identified with Coats of higher price. For instance—a woman's Coat of soft gray veloria, with a full Tuxedo collar of squirrel—is an example of the smart style and unusual value you may expect here in Coats at $59.50. And there are all sizes!

$79.50

Selection is at its widest and most fascinating, with all the newest style features shown in Coats at this popular price! Coats with the new tucking in motifs on back and sides; Coats with the slight blouse and deeper sleeves giving the fashionable silhouette; Coats with deep shawl collars and cuffs of smart furs; Coats with collars running to deep points in back—these are but a few of the smart styles.

$98.50

The distinction that comes with superior quality characterizes every Coat in this offering. Superior quality of rich pile and suede-like fabrics, and superior quality of furs that so generously trim them. Here one sees Coats of imported broadtail cloth that looks like fur, combined with black fox or kit fox in long collars; Coats trimmed with full fox animal scarfs (head and tail); Coats trimmed with caracul in deep points and reveres.

Sizes: For Misses, 14, 16, 18. For Women, 34 to 44. For Larger and Taller Women, 40½ to 50½

$125

Lavish in their use of fine furs, these Coats truly set new standards of value! Of extraordinary chic are the Coats in shellbark (a light, creamy tan) with natural lynx or golden beaver in deep cuffs and unusual collars; Coats in soft gray with the contrast of moleskin in Renee cuffs and collar; black Coats bordered with caracul and lined with American Beauty duvetyn, and Coats with sunburst tucking.

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails

Many St. Louisans In Paris After Vacation Jaunts

Art Students Prepare for Fall Exhibitions; Group Stages Private Puppet Show.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, France, Oct. 1.—Over on the left bank of the Seine, studios are being swept out by occupants returning from summer sketching tours in Normandy, Brittany, along the Loire River, across the Pyrenees into Spain and even so far afield as Scotland, the Balkans and America; galleries are preparing to receive the results of those summer excursions, and the habitués of the Dome are moving from the terrace to the warmer inside of that famous cafe to discuss them.

One of the first autumn exhibitions to open was that of Howard Ashman Patterson at the Galeries Alard, 20 rue des Capucines. It includes the product of his months of last winter and spring on the Azure Coast of France. Mr. Patterson comes from Philadelphia, where he studied in the Museum School of Industrial Arts and in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

The work which he did there was shown in Santa Fe, Denver, St. Louis, Kansas City and 40 other cities between the Rockies and New York.

A few days ago a number of Montpatnassians had the pleasure of viewing in the studio of Norman Jacobsen at 37 rue Eriodevaux, Paris, an amusing and original puppet show, at which much of the best talent of the Latin Quarter assisted. The artist himself, who was born in Wyoming, just 42 years before that day, had designed and made the very life-like puppets and also had made the complete little theater. Sybil Sutton Vane of the distinguished literary family wrote the sparkling little comedy, Remo Buffano, assisted by Miss Vane's brother, Noel, and by Jacobsen, manipulated the puppets, while incidental noises were furnished by Hiler Harzburg, the Philadelphia artist, who also is well known in St. Louis. In the audience was Roy Sheldon, the St. Louis sculptor.

A farewell reception and entertainment given by the United States Students' and Artists' Club at 107 boulevard Montparnasse last week in honor of Canon and Mrs. Killian C. Stimpson was attended by several hundred students and artists. Canon and Mrs. Stimpson, who came to Paris from St. Louis, where Canon Stimpson had a charge and where he met and married Miss Dorothy Baker, have been in charge of St. Luke's Chapel on the left bank for the past two years and have won the esteem of the entire Latin quarter. They go from here to Canon Stimpson's new charge in Florence, Italy.

Paul Dougherty has returned to his Paris studio from British East Africa, where he accompanied Ralph Pulitzer, son of the late St. Louis and New York publisher, and is preparing to transmit some of his sketches and experiences to canvas.

G. A. Buder and family of St. Louis, who have been traveling in the German Rhineland, were recent visitors to Baden-Baden, Germany, stopping at Brenner's Stephanie Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown of St. Louis, who have been spending the autumn in Switzerland, have arrived in Interlaken, where they are staying at the Hotel Schweizer.

A group of St. Louis people noticed frequently in and about the French capital during the past fortnight included William McMillan Lewis, Miss Emily Lewis, Mrs. Herbert Cason, Miss Pannela Harrison and Miss Louise Cason.

In response to an appeal from Mrs. Elizabeth Foley of 3510 Hartford boulevard, St. Louis, the Paris Post of the American Legion has undertaken a search for her son, Lee Albert Foley, whom she has not seen since he enlisted in the United States Marines at Paris Island, S. C., May 18, 1918. The son was last seen in a Place Vendome bank in Paris.

Maj. and Mrs. Charles E. Greenough of St. Louis and New York have arrived in Paris from Budapest, Hnugary, and Vienna, Austria.

The Counsellor of the United States Embassy in London, Frederick Sterling, formerly of St. Louis, has been in London throughout the summer as acting charge d'affaires during the Ambassador's absence. Mrs. Sterling has been back and forth between their Belgrave Square house and Margate, where they have a cottage by the sea and where their two children have been spending the summer.

Miss Margaret Milne. A reception was held for new members.

The History and Literature section, Mrs. E. H. Eikhoff chairman, will meet tomorrow. At 1 p. m. tomorrow the art section, Mrs. William Kopfstein chairman, will meet at a luncheon followed by a program by pupils of the Morse School of Expression.

The St. Louis County Federation of Women's Clubs will hold an all day session at the Monday Club, Oct. 22. Luncheon will be served and a program presented. The Education and Current Topics section, Mrs. John A. Nolan chairman, will hold an open meeting, Oct. 25, with luncheon at 12:30 p. m.

Miss Alice Igoe has been elected for the second time president of the Glee Club of Fontbonne College, Wydown and Big Bend boulevards, and will be installed Wednesday, Oct. 13, with the other new officers of the club who are as follows: Loretta Hennelly, vice president; Julia Kirk, secretary; Mary Schmeckebier, treasurer. The club, which is under the direction of the Sisters of St. Joseph of the Department of Music of Fontbonne College, will appear this year on two occasions. Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brilliantine, and no grease.

Simple Home Mixture Darkens Gray Hair

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Any One Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes.

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well-known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, ¼ ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use, is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

MABEL PALMER MARRIED TO RICH NEW YORK REALTY MAN

William Goldman, St. Louis Theater Owner, Will Not Have to Defend Breach of Promise Suit.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Miss Mabel Palmer of St. Louis has figured in a quick step romance which has made her the bride of Harry Bly, a New York realty operator, whose wealth can be estimated from the fact that her wedding gifts from him included title to real estate in this city said to be worth $500,000, two diamond bracelets and a diamond brooch.

The wedding will spare William Goldman, owner of the King's movie theater in St. Louis, the necessity of defending the $100,000 breach of promise suit Miss Palmer had brought against him. Prior to the marriage she told Bly all about it, and he told her to forget it. A honeymoon trip to Europe is scheduled to begin next week.

The romance had its inception in a casual meeting in the office of a New York banker, with whom both happened to have business engagements the same day. The banker introduced them and before the ensuing conversation had ended Bly had asked Miss Palmer to luncheon. That all happened on Aug. 14. On Aug. 21 they were married and had planned to sail on the President Harding. That reservation was canceled because both wanted to wait to see if the Cardinals won the pennant in the National League and the world's series to follow besides. Bly, a friend of Jack Dempsey, wanted to see the fight between the champion and Gene Tunney.

Bly started to be a lawyer, having studied in New York University, and had practiced for a time. He is 32 years old.

Helps Stenographer To Enjoy Vacation

Suffering from Run-Down Condition, Nervousness, Headaches and Loss of Appetite, Highly Esteemed Business Girl Recovers Lost Health. Thanks Tanlac

Pleasures of life become sordid travesties when health vanishes and a smile only hides pain. Miss Annabelle Bailey, a popular stenographer of 715 E. 9th St., Kansas City, Mo., saw summer coming with despair. For her health was broken. And she could not enjoy the simple pleasures in life. Recreation such as the theater, dancing or shopping exhausted her. "I wondered how I could get any enjoyment out of the golden months of the year," she says.

"My appetite for food was gone. And I had such terrible headaches I could hardly stand up. Night never brought relief, for I couldn't sleep soundly. Pains after eating bothered me. I was badly in need of help when I began taking Tanlac.

"Then my troubles vanished quickly. Tanlac gave me an appetite, relieved digestion pains, soothed my nerves. Now I feel so well in every way that every day is like vacation to me. I can work hard all day without tiring or getting the least bit ruffled. And as for my holiday, it was a round of wonderful pleasure... Thanks to this glorius tonic."

Miss Bailey is only one of thousands who have voiced their praises of Tanlac which has given them freedom from suffering and built up their strength and health.

Tanlac, made from roots, barks and herbs, usually builds up the body and helps wipe out poisons that rob youth and starve health. Benefit by the experience of others. Take Tanlac. The first bottle usually shows amazing results. At your druggists. Over 40-million bottles sold.

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No Other Laxative Can Replace Dr. Caldwell's in the Confidence of Those Who Use It

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grown-ups, so compounded that elderly people who are constantly forced to take a laxative find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for thirty years, and over ten million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world! The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

Millions of carefully conducted homes are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, torpid liver, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, colds and other evidence of bowel obstruction.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, coal tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

Write "Syrup Pepsin," 525 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for a free sample bottle.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

CITY NEEDS VISITING DOCTORS

Seeks to Fill Vacancies on Staffs of Municipal Hospitals.

Legally qualified physicians and dentists of St. Louis and St. Louis County, who have been in practice not less than five years, are requested to apply to Hospital Commissioner Shankland to fill vacancies on the visiting staffs of city institutions, effective Nov. 1.

Members of visiting staffs serve without remuneration and are not permitted to accept fees for any service rendered in city institutions, except at Isolation Hospital, and then only from patients who have employed them before entering the institution.

Priesthood Urged for Frenchmen.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—"Young men, study for the priesthood," is one of two signs displayed prominently at the doors of almost every church in the Savoie department. The other deals with women's fashions and reads: "Ye who enter here must be decently dressed." The appeal to young men to become priests is followed by this explanation: "The war has killed 4618 priests and church scholars and emptied the seminaries where youths were studying to become priests. Ten thousand parishes are without priests and there is only one priest for every 1661 souls in France, and he often is a very old man."

D. A. R. Leader Here.

Mrs. W. R. Painter of Carrollton, Mo., has been visiting St. Louis friends for a few days. Mrs. Painter is honorary State regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution and organizing regent of the Carrollton chapter, which has indorsed her for vice president general of Missouri, to be nominated at the State convention in Joplin Tuesday to Friday of this week.

Mrs. Painter is State chairman of the board of managers of historic Arrow Rock Tavern. She is the only woman on the capitol decoration commission, and has just returned from a meeting of the commission in New York City.

The party will resume their trip immediately after the luncheon.

New Women's Coats Blouse-Backed

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Bond street's newest offerings in coats for women have bloused backs, which women of fashion are accepting as a welcome change from the wooden-soldier type of back which has been in vogue. Black is a favored color in the new coats, which are offered in various soft materials trimmed with fur. Caracul is especially in vogue.

DEVELOPMENT OF MADE-TO-ORDER CAR IS PREDICTED

Appearance as Assembled Product, Not Necessarily Costly, Foreseen as Logical.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Fame and fortune await the manufacturer who will develop the business of making cars to order, in the opinion of those who are looking deeply into automotive trade conditions and find a market for the made-to-order car unexpectedly vigorous.

With more than 20,000,000 persons owning cars in America, it is believed that many thousands soon will be demanding machines made to order and built to their own exacting tastes.

More Than "Custom Built."

Despite the tremendous business in factory-made clothes, the made-to-order suit is gaining in popularity daily. Thousands buy homes built by volume operators, but the individually designed dwelling constantly is growing in favor. It seems natural that the discriminating motorist will seek the manufacturer who can build cars to order.

This trend is not to be confused with the "custom built" idea. At present the word "custom" is loosely used, and refers largely to certain de luxe body features. The custom built car of the day often is a conventional chassis with body refinements which do not appear on the regular models. But the custom idea in present-day marketing is believed to be paving the way for the real made-to-order car.

Need Not Be High Priced.

The machine will not necessarily be high priced. At present anyone can have a car built to his own specifications, but the cost is prohibitive for the average man. The fortune awaits the manufacturer who will build a made-to-order car in almost any price class.

Many, naturally, will ask, "But what is wrong with factory-built cars?" Nothing for most people. These inquirers have not considered the fact that trade-marked cars necessarily are built on a compromise basis and that this is not always agreeable to the discriminating buyer.

Many automobiles with low priced bodies could have more powerful engines save for the fact that the manufacturers rightly calculate that the average buyer of a low priced car also wants an economical motor. The average car is designed to fit the man of average size. To have certain mechanical advantages, many persons must forfeit something in style, comfort or body features they would like. Every motorist has to endure some features in his car, simply because no machine is built especially for him.

Thousands are dreaming of cars that will measure up to their ideals just as they dream of the ideal home. They are building these dream homes, but what of their cars?

where Just What He Wants.

The motorist has just completed a check of all the new cars and finds none that is exactly what he wants. The only car that offers him the body he desires, has a motor he does not favor. He could have a special body built for another make, but this car happens to be minus four-wheel brakes. To further complicate his problem, he wants a form of four-wheel brake which cannot be attached to the car in question.

Watch the tourists packing and unpacking at the entrances to hotels and one can see plenty of evidence of the ever-growing need for greater variation in bodies than the quantity producers ever will have opportunity to develop. Only a negligible percentage of cars have adequate accommodations for luggage, despite the tremendous growth of motor touring.

The made-to-order manufacturer could supply any type of engine in any style or size of chassis and could mount any type body. There are thousands of engineers in the country who know what they want in personal cars, but they have not been able to obtain them because there has been no organization strong enough and experienced enough to build them.

Made-to-order cars probably would be serviced by the branches of the specialists who contribute the engines, clutches, transmissions, carburetors, etc. They would be assembled cars, put together with great care and built with certain improvements which inevitably would suggest themselves during the assembling process.

The larger parts manufacturers are in a position to fill orders for all kinds of special equipment, and the development of the made-to-order car would, therefore, seem to lie with the creation of a suitable assembling organization.

HARD ROAD TO MAYA RUINS OF CHICHEN-ITZA PLANNED BY YUCATAN GOVERNOR

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 9.

AN official ceremony marked the starting of construction of the modern highway that is to connect Merida, in Yucatan, and the port of Progresso, about 25 miles away. Gov. Alvaro Torre Diaz delivered an address and threw the first spadeful of earth on the proposed road.

The road program includes not only the paved road between Merida and Progresso but a system of highways that will extend to Valladolid, through the ancient Mayan ruins of Chichen-Itza, and a number of other towns that are remotely removed from modern transportation facilities.

ROUTE FROM GRAND CANYON TO CARLSBAD CAVE READY SOON

With completion this year of a highway from Grand Canyon National Park, in Arizona, to Carlsbad Cavern, in New Mexico, 730 miles southeast, a new scenic route, easily accessible from the main transcontinental highways of the southwest, will be opened to tourists, according to John W. Becker of Springerville, Ariz., vice president of the National Old Trails Association. Becker is spending several days at the Automobile Club of Missouri, 4228 Lindell boulevard, going over touring conditions in the Southwest with George E. Drummond, manager of the Touring Department of the club. The new trail, of which approximately 650 miles is graveled and the balance of sand-dirt, will provide a direct line of travel through the most picturesque points of Arizona and New Mexico.

Among the points of interest on this route are the Grand Canyon, the Painted Desert, the Petrified Forest National Monument, near Holbrook, Ariz., the Apache Indian Reservation and the White Mountain resort country, the lava beds near Carrizozo, N. M., the Mescalero Apache Indian Reservation at Hondo, N. M., and the Carlsbad cavern, the largest partially explored cave in the world, containing the largest stalagmite and stalactite formations in any known cave.

Pullman Busses for Pacific Coast.

Pullman motor busses soon will be seen on the highways between San Francisco and Seattle, Wash. The busses will have dining, sleeping and lavatory accommodations.

SEASON NEARING FOR HUNTING TRIP INTO ADIRONDACKS

Rarely Lovely Mountain and Lake Scenery, and Plenty of Game May Be Seen on This Tour.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

Picture a big pond in the Adirondack Mountains. Thirsty Lake, they call this one. Two thousand feet above sea level, it must be reached by a winding, uphill trail. A little harbor is sheltered by an island. All around are the dense northern woods, whose evergreens point to the blue sky and whose foliage is ablaze with autumn color.

Slip out in a canoe beyond the island. Let the same wind that spanks the water into waves and penetrates the folds of woolen shirts carry the craft along the opposite shore. If one is lucky, as was the driver of Skidamaree, gypsy car of the Post-Dispatch, not long ago, a wild deer slipping through the woods to quench his thirst may reward him.

Two Does Stare at Car.

Or drive along a public highway in this delightful section of New York State at sunrise. Skidamaree, doing just that, encountered two young does, which stood and stared before they broke for cover. Deer pervade this country and are one of the prime attractions, whether the visitor is armed with rifle, camera or mere admiring eyes. For the hunter, the open season on deer begins next Friday and lasts till Nov. 15.

Here is a land of many sports, with something to interest everybody. It is a year-'round country, with air so dry and invigorating that a temperature near freezing point serves mostly to strain the larders of a thousand camps and resorts. Here the vacationist may find good hotels where people dress for dinner and pleasant spots of less pretension, where a lumberjack blazer beats a wing collar, and hiking boots supersede plus fours.

Wonderful Views.

Name your sport. The Adirondacks are pretty sure to have it, and the keenest enthusiast for the Missouri Ozarks will begrudge them not. Hunting, fishing, hiking and mountain climbing, motoring, golfing, tennis, canoeing, swimming, motor boating, flying, horseback riding, ski-ing—all these await as seasons change. Big public launches and even steamboats ply some of the larger lakes. Plant, animal and bird life attract him who admires nature with understanding. All sorts of larks are offered resort guests.

At the place of Skidamaree's entertainment, where all guests were quickly made to feel at home, the licensed guide and veteran woodsman who is the owner organized a party which he drove 25 miles away to Rondaxe Mountain. At the base of this 3000-foot uplift, near Third Lake of the pretty Fulton Chain, he said, "You folks climb up and look around all you want; dinner'll be ready when you return."

The "folks" climbed, and climbed, and climbed. And then they feasted their eyes on a circle of the Adirondacks with a radius of 25 miles. On one side was Fulton Chain, its excursion steamer looking like a dragon fly, and elsewhere a shining strip of new concrete highway bounded over hills and played hide and seek in forests. It was the key to a motorist's paradise and here all about was that promised land. Clouds danced just a little way overhead and rich haze veiled the distances.

Nights and Days to Remember.

At the high point of the mountain a State forest fire observation tower, watched by a woman, withstood the wind and took the hikers a few feet nearer heaven. Then they descended to nectar and ambrosia in the woods. The guide and his son had spread a banquet on logs in the forest, with native ferns for decorations. A handy spring and a bottomless coffee pot furnished nectar; for the rest there was broiled chicken, broiled steak, vegetables, jelly, pickles, salad and a few more trimmings, with half a dozen flapjacks and syrup just to top each person's meal. The charge for the whole trip and food was $3 apiece.

Another time, at night, the

STOCK MERCEDES SAID TO BE REAL 100 M. P. H. AUTO

Sports Model That Develops 180 Horse-Power Shows That Speed in Timed Tests in England.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Sept. 29. (By Mail.)—A standard stock automobile, sold to the general public, that will do 100 miles per hour without special tuning has become a fact in the new supercharged 33-180 h. p. Mercedes.

This car, in the short chassis sports model, will move at a crawling pace in traffic and better the century mark when crowded with supercharger in full play. This means 100 m. p. h. over the measured mile, not speedometer mileage.

With supercharger not in action, the Mercedes will do up to 80 m. p. h. on the road. With the supercharger, which is of the Rootes blower type, at work, the engine's power increases to a full 180, and 100 m. p. h. is easily attained. The supercharger also gives vastly faster acceleration and hill climbing ability. Maximum practical en-

INTRODUCING THE New
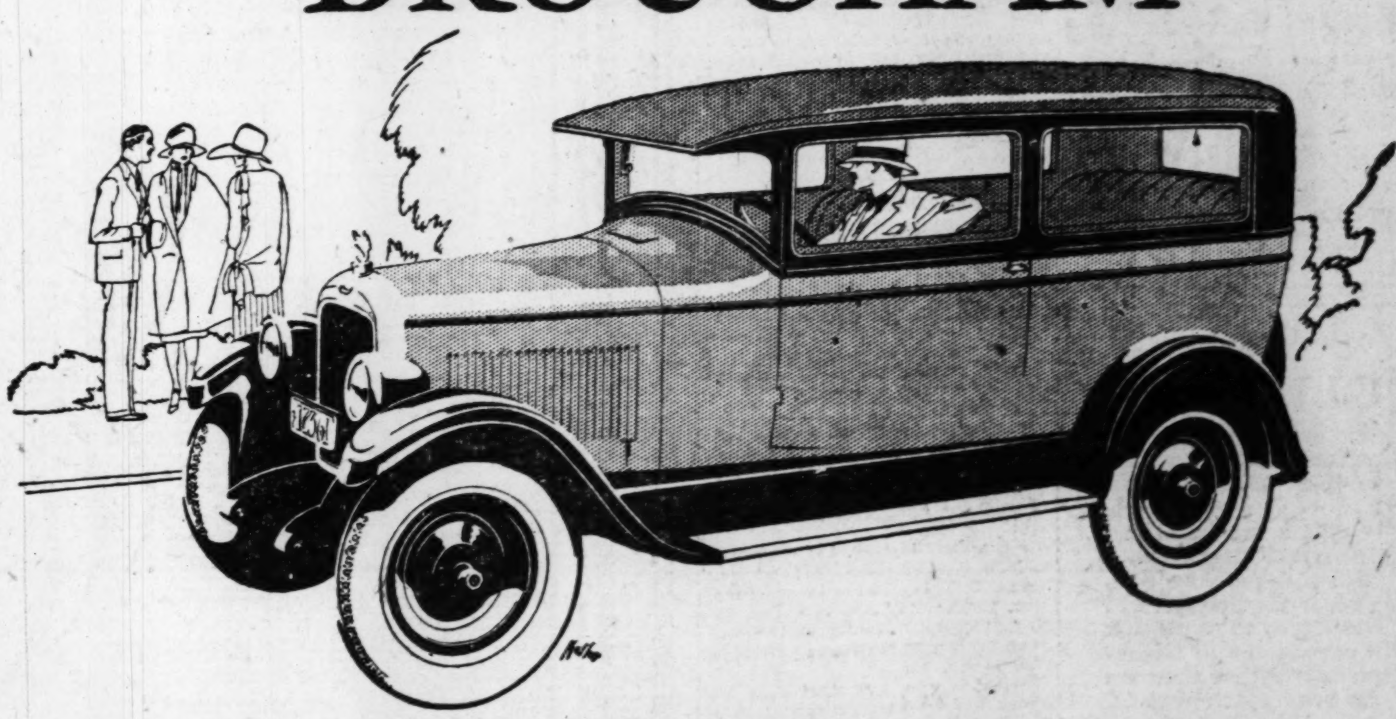
Jewett
BROUGHAM



The Second Most Beautiful Car in America

Smart, beautiful, comfortable and capable—as all of the beautiful new Jewetts are—this Brougham brings an even greater measure of economy to Jewett ownership.

Never has a motor car so sturdily and so conscientiously built been equipped with such exquisite appointments and sold at so moderate a price.

The list of its equipment reads like a catalog of the costliest cars: clustered, indirectly-lighted instruments, inlaid walnut-finish panels, luxurious cushions over nested springs with comfortable arm rests, silk sun shades, beautiful and enduring upholstery.

The front seats are adjustable to suit the driver's size—the motor is larger and equipped with the latest mechanical superiorities—the finish is a beautiful new two-tone tan, with beige trimmings—and, of course, Paige-Hydraulic 4-Wheel brakes are standard.

Come in and see this Brougham soon—we know you'll like it immensely.

FINER CHRYSLER '70' AT REDUCED PRICES

New Models Have More Graceful Body Lines, Smaller Wheels and Larger Tires.

With new body designs, smaller wheels and larger tires, a series of new Chrysler "70" models is being shown today by Midwest Motors, Inc., and its associated dealers, with considerably lower prices for this, the first and best known of the Chrysler line.

Seven new body designs are offered in the finer "70" line, with prices ranging from $1395 to $1795 at Detroit. These include the phaeton at $1395; sport phaeton, $1495; roadster, $1495; brougham, $1525; royal coupe, $1545; royal sedan, $1595, and crown sedan, $1795. In addition, a four-passenger coupe and a cabriolet will be announced later.

Interesting Body Designs.

The style, beauty and smartness of the new models are due not only to new lines, but also to a new conception of color distribution and contrast in harmonies designed by artist as well as engineer. On the closed job the new "town car front" and "cadet" visor lend distinction. The two-tone motif, pioneered by Chrysler, has been replaced by the new and more expressive combinations.

Each of the new models has its own claim to distinction. The phaeton has a novel rigid curtain construction; the roadster design is continued with addition of a rumble seat and other refinements.

The body beauty of the new finer "70" closed cars, led by the brougham with its trunk and two-door roominess, and followed by the coupe and the distinctive royal and crown sedans—all with sweeping new contours, from the new higher radiator, "town car" fronts and "cadet" visors, to the graceful rear panels—is noteworthy.

New departures are the painting of the running board splash aprons on the open models to match the body color and the "cadet" visor of the brougham, also to match. Another harmonious effect in design results from elimination of cowl lights, affording an unbroken line.

Some of New Features.

The new smaller 18-inch base wheels, with larger balloon tires, are responsible for a pleasing change in motor car appearance, resulting in new low and graceful lines.

The advantage of this new wheel only begins with its beauty feature. The 18-inch base wheel has a 10 per cent increase in braking efficiency over the old type of wheel, increases road stability, lowers the center of gravity, enables a stronger construction to take side thrust, lessens unsprung weight and makes for easier tire changing.

There is a larger, heavier radiator, special headlamps and new, attractive instrument board, which now includes an electric clock. Gear shift and emergency brake handles are nickeled, and a new 90-mile-an-hour speedometer replaces the former 75 mile type.

The closed cars are upholstered in special mohair velvet in colors harmonizing with the exteriors; seats are heavily cushioned, arm rests are built into the rear side walls. There are shirred pockets in rear and front doors. Vanity case and smoking receptacle are standard. The brougham carries a special trunk as regular equipment.

Basically the same chassis, whose worth has been proven in the hands of over 200,000 owners, is continued plus refinements added from time to time since its introduction.

"Only minor chassis changes could be made," J. E. Fields, vice-president in charge of sales, said, "to improve the car the public has known in months past—for service records from every section of the country make it readily apparent that, from the beginning, the Chrysler has been fundamentally 'right.'"

How to Go

Joint Touring Bureau: Because of recent rains, please publish best route from Duquoin, Ill., to Fayetteville, Ark.—A. B. S.

Take highway No. 2 to Ashley "Y," No. 15 to St. Louis, No. 60 to Springfield, Mo.; No. 16 to Monett, No. 37 to Seligman, Ark., and No. 4 via Rogers to Fayetteville. About 380 miles. Mostly gravel and concrete, with some dirt.

Through Sikeston, Hayti, Steele, Blytheville and Marion. Route from Lordsburg to Phoenix via Globe is shorter, but has some dirt. Route via Douglas and Bisbee and Tucson is concrete and gravel. Roads from Memphis to Texarkana are mostly gravel, with concrete between Little Rock and Hot Springs, and some dirt between the latter and Texarkana.

STOCK MERCEDES SAID TO BE REAL 100 M. P. H. AUTO

gine revolutions are 3000 per minute.

The new Mercedes was put through carefully-timed tests. The engine counter showed 3000 revolutions per minute, equivalent to 100 m. p. h., for nearly a mile. The half mile course on the rough Brooklands track was done in 19 seconds, or at the rate of 94.74 m. p. h. This speed was reached in spite of wheel spin, short track, tire slip and raised windshield.

On the Brooklands straightaway the car was timed at 100 actual m. p. h.

The six-cylinder engine has a bore of approximately 3.7 inches and stroke of 5.9 inches. Valves and camshaft are overhead type. The supercharger engages by a clutch at full throttle position. There are four speeds.

A price of $9000 for the chassis has been set.

SEASON NEARING FOR HUNTING TRIP INTO ADIRONDACKS

guide led the way to a three-cornered shelter on a wooded hillside, where he roasted popcorn and toasted marshmallows at an open fire and served lemonade.

'Twas a hard life.

Hunting esason now is about to open in full swing in the Adirondacks, with good prospects for getting game. Some of the chief quarry and the open seasons on them are:

Bear, Oct. 15-Nov. 15; cottontail rabbits, Oct. 15-Jan. 31; varying hares, Oct. 15-March 1; reccoon, Nov. 10-Feb. 10; squirrels, Oct. 15-Nov. 15; duck, goose and brant, Sept. 24-Jan. 7; grouse or partridge, Oct. 1-Nov. 15.

Bass is the principal fish on which the 1926 season is still open, the period extending to Nov. 30.

Adirondack Park is the official name of the State-protected and controlled area of several million acres comprising the real, picturesque mountain section. Roughly, the eastern boundary of the "park" is not far west of Lake George and Lake Champlain; the northern side is in line with Paul Smiths, where President Coolidge spent his vacation this year; on the south it approaches Utica and Glens Falls, and the western boundtry is about 50 miles from Lake Ontario.

Vast Domain of Beauty.

It is the State's intention to make this vast domain of beauty a real park, although of course it includes private property. The lakes can never be shut off from the public. One of the wildest sections remaining is a strip about 15 miles wide between Big Moose Lake and Racpuette Lake, where there is virgin forest, penetrated by one highway and by various foot trails. The State has a project for improving the condition and blazing of trails for the benefit of tenderfeet. There is a big rectangle between Speculator, where Gene Tunney started his training for the heavyweight championship, and Fulton Chain, which is particularly wild.

It was to this section that Skidamaree penetrated in the course of a 3600-mile jaunt into 16 states recently. There are two chief routes to the Adirondacks from St. Louis. One is the National Highway, straight to New York and up the Hudson to Albany, and the other is by way of Cleveland and Buffalo. From the eastern half of the excellent Buffalo-Albany highway there are a number of places to turn north for the land of bracing air. Albany, Schenectady, Fonda, Little Falls, Utica and Oneida are the best places.

Skidamaree went "in Utica" and "out Oneida," making headquarters at Big Moose, 70 miles north of Utica on the Montreal line of the New York Central Railroad. The trip northward through the foothills was illusory, for the climb into the mountains was so gradual and the increase of forest density so imperceptible that it took a trip to a mountain top to demonstrate the change. In a three hours' drive a complete transition of surroundings and atmosphere was realized.

Numerous Good Roads.

The road was of excellent bituminous macadam and concrete all the way, typical of all the State highways to the Adirondacks. Some road maps do not show Big Moose, but Skidamaree's route from Utica was by way of Alder Creek, McKeever, Old Forge and Eagle Bay. Once in the mountains, the resorts are on every hand, yet they have not marred the countryside. Big Moose is one notable center for these places.

Paving ends at Eagle Bay now, but is to be carried through to Deerland and Long Lake, about 25 miles northeast. There is an acceptable old road there, traversing the virgin forest previously mentioned and utilizing the long ferryage over Racquette Lake to save much distance. Long Lake is near the center of Adirondack Park, and the improved State highway runs there from the Albany section and continues up to Paul Smiths, Lake Placid and Saranac Lake.

Many good county roads exist which are not shown on big maps. For example, construction of several miles of excellent highway between Eagle Bay and Big Moose is being completed. North from Paul Smiths one may drive to Malone, N. Y., and Montreal, or go northeast to Rouse's Point, N. Y., and Montreal.

Adirondacks Show Place.

Highway improvements and other developments are bringing the Big Moose-Eagle Bay-Old Forge section into prominence as a rival of Saranac-Placid. Just to glance at the map is to want to wander all over the Adirondacks, however—the blank spaces denote the lack of towns and presence of mountains and the myriad lakes and ponds almost sparkle on paper.

One show spot is the summer home of Mrs. Fiske, the actress, on an island in Big Moose Lake, where she can gain seclusion. Many hikers look down on it from Billy's Bald Spot, a small mountain near the lake.

Making a reluctant departure, Skidamaree retraced its course to Alder Creek, turned back north a little way to Boonville and then slipped into the Central New York valley through a striking piece of country—the Boonville Gorge, and into Oneida on the way to Buffalo. This again was fine bituminous macadam and concrete.

Drives of Endless Charm.

The gorge is a steady, winding descent between two close hill ranges, which, unlike the nearby Adirondacks, are productive of crops and rather closely inhabited. From Boonville to Rome the highway is side by side with the used Black River Canal, [illegible] torturous rocks and twisting [illegible] path have succumbed to [illegible] while trucks are speeding [illegible] pavement. There are said [illegible] almost 90 locks in this stretch, with an average [illegible] feet each.

This is a pleasant interlude between the mountains and the [illegible] tile plains, but he who drives [illegible] will treasure for weeks and for years the rugged outlines of Adirondacks, the odors of [illegible] and balsam, the haunting [illegible] the autumn woods, the [illegible] of birch trees, the stateliness [illegible] pine and maple, the soft [illegible] moss and trillium under foot, the endless charm of [illegible] son.

NEW MARMON SERIES 75 SHOWN IN ST. LOUIS

Well Known 6-Cylinder Chassis Refined—New Customs Built Models Added.

The new series 75 Marmon has arrived and is on display by the More Automobile Co., Marmon distributor. The impressive new model does not depart from basic Marmon principles, but has as many new features and exclusive advancements as any Marmon series ever introduced.

While it has been announced in trade journals that later in the year a "Little Marmon" will be introduced, the new Marmon series 75 just received is evidence of Marmon's policy to continue more aggressively than ever before the large Marmon on which it has concentrated for years.

"This continuation of the precision-made Marmon," says E. Anson More, president of the More Automobile Co., "presents no radical changes of design. Yet it has many new features and developments that radically improve its ease of hardling, its roadability, that will yield an entirely new set of motoring experiences. The new Marmon 75 is not to be confused with rumors and ideas that have gone far and wide regarding the "Little Marmon," which will appear later as a fit companion to this big luxurious series 75. The fixed policy of the Marmon company to continuously develop its big luxury type car has not been changed.

Seventy-Fifth Anniversary.

"The same powerful and flexible engine is used, but with many refinements. The exclusive Marmon type of frame and suspension is also continued, with many improvements.

"In this new series, Marmon fully lives up to its tradition of precision manufacturing and advanced engineering which have been the keynote of the Marmon institution for 75 years.

"Among the new features of the new series perhaps the most important engineering accomplishment is the prevention of front wheel shimmy. This has been accomplished in spite of the employment of balloon tires and four-wheel brakes. Shimmy, as most motorists know, came in with balloon tires. It was further augmented by four-wheel brakes. The engineers of the entire industry have struggled with this front-wheel steering and tie rod trouble for several years. Now we have a solution.

Front Wheel "Shimmy" Eliminated

"Marmon's new steering stabilizer, an exclusive development with Marmon, is designed to resist any sudden motion of the tie rod, and yet offer no resistance to easy operation of the steering wheel. It is a simple friction device. Yet it is claimed that intensive tests over hundreds of thousands of miles have proved it a correct and thorough cure for shimmy. This device in combination with several other new Marmon features of steering and running gear and suspension stand out among the many new developments of the car. A new type of roller spiral Marles type of steering gear is employed on the new series. Every bearing point of the steering gear runs on all or roller bearing, giving very easy yet positive control. Further development of the steering control is brought about by a refinement of the front spring suspension. The shackle is now at the front end. This, with the steering stabilizer, the new steering gear and large hydraulic Lovejoy shock absorbers made it possible to include a new development of the Perro-Bendix mechanical four-wheel brakes as standard equipment on the new series Marmon and yet keep it from all tendency to shimmy.

"Several new engine and drive features add to smooth power output of the new series. The new Marmon modulator, a device mounted at the front end of the crankshaft, carries the engine through its entire range, without vibration. In combination with Marmon's exclusive type of double-fire ignition, the modulator gives increased smoothness and even more flexible acceleration. The modulator is said to add also to bearing life through elimination of certain crankshaft strainers.

"An even lighter type of cast iron piston is employed, adding to smoothness and increased acceleration ability. A single dry-plate clutch adds another touch of simplicity to the new series, and a new velvety action and quick gear shifting.

New 4-Wheel Brakes and Axle.

"With a new development of Perro-Bendix mechanical four-wheel brakes, which are standard equipment on the new 75, a new front axle design is presented. The massive Marmon features are continued, but the axle ends are of reverse Elliott type. The new design is even more massive in appearance. The big oil wells which have always been a Marmon feature are continued.

"Further developments of Marmon's force feed system now sends oil direct to every camshaft as well as to every engine bearing. As far as we know Marmon builds the only engine in which every bearing is lubricated under full pressure—a prime factor of long life.

"New refinements in the valve mechanism make for added quietness and the elimination of the last chance of valve clatter.

"The gear shift and brake lever have been moved forward two inches, giving added room to the front compartment. The accessibility of these levers has not been changed. They are still but an 'octave from the wheel.'

Six New Body Styles.

"An interesting addition to the instrument board is the mounting of an ornamental car number at the left end of the board. This is the Fedco number system that cannot be removed by thieves without damage to the board or to the numbers. The Fedco Corp. claims that the percentage of recovery of stolen automobiles has been vastly increased by this system, and that stealing of cars equipped with the device is diminishing, because of this.

"Six new bodies are offered in the new 75 series line. For the first time Marmon presents a Town Coupe (seating five) which lists at $3195, the lowest price in Marmon history.

"There also are four new Locke custom-built models: a 7-passenger touring speedster, a custom-built sedan for seven, one for five, and a custom-built sedan-limousine for seven passengers. An almost limitless variety of colors and trim options is offered with this custom-built line.

Models continued consists of the 2-passenger speedster, the 4-passenger speedster, the standard 5-passenger phaeton, the standard brougham the Victoria, the 2-passenger coupe, and the standard 5 and 7-passenger sedans.

A 2-passenger coupe roadster, with rumble seat, has a collapsible top.

"The standard equipment of all the cars of the new series includes Perro Bendix 4-wheel brakes, Lovejoy shock absorbers, double bar front bumpers, rear bumperettes, de luxe motometer, bar type radiator cap, automatic windshield wiper and cigar lighter. With the custom-built 7-passenger touring speedster a rear trunk is included."

GABRIEL SNUBBERS GIVE FREE PLAY, DISTRIBUTER ASSERTS

"Too much spring control may easily turn out to be worse than none at all," is the contention of H. C. Merry, local Gabriel snubbers distributer.

"The balloon tires and more flexible springs of modern motor cars are intended to absorb a certain proportion of road shocks, and must have complete freedom of action within their capacity to function properly.

"To provide for this, Gabriels are designed to permit a certain amount of free play, during which the snubbers exercise no restraint whatever on the ability of tires and springs to cushion bumps that are not severe enough to cause a rebound or upthrow of the car body itself.

"Without this 'free play' provided in Gabriels, spring control may result in stiff riding over roads that are comparatively smooth."

ERSKINE 6 BUILT FOR SALE IN EUROPE BY STUDEBAKER

Car, Named for President of Factory, Has 2⅝x4½-Inch Motor — Is Exhibited at Paris Salon.

A new American car, designed and built expressly for European requirements, was revealed Friday at the Paris Salon. It is the Erskine six, a 2½-litre car, built by The Studebaker Corp. of America, to meet European ideas of high economy without sacrificing the standards of power and comfort that have won popularity for American cars abroad.

The Erskine six is the only American built closed car under 68 inches in height. It will turn in an 18-foot radius, deliver 28 miles to a gallon and attain a speed of 60 miles an hour. In lines, general design and appearance, it is as unmistakably Continental as the smart cars on the Champs Elysees. Nothing comparative to it for distinctive design has hitherto come out of America, according to European critics.

This compact car is the direct result of a visit by A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corp., to the 1924 Paris Salon.

A dealers' meeting and banquet was held for Studebaker representatives and dealers from all parts of Europe. Before the banquet closed they expressed their ideas of the ideal car for the Continental market, and Erskine had for the Studebaker engineering staff a descriptive composite of a car to mark a new departure in the industry. In the 24 months that have elapsed, Studebaker engineers developed the car that is now formally presented to Europe. It was christened The Erskine six by directors of the Studebaker Corp. as a tribute to Erskine's 13 years as Studebaker's chief executive.

The Erskine six is a low hung car with a 2½-litre L-head type motor. Bore and stroke are 2⅝ inches by 4½ inches, giving a piston displacement of 146.1 cubic inches. Mechanical internal expanding four-wheel brakes of an advanced type are standard.

Two types of bodies, designed by Dietrich, were introduced at the Salon—a "conduite-interieure" or sedan, and a touring phaeton, both for five passengers. Ample room in the sedan is afforded for a man 6 feet 2 inches tall. The sedan body is of steel, full visioned, with wide windows and narrow pillars. Hood and cowl are of especially attractive design, suggestive of the smarter European cars, yet distinctive.

CHEVROLET DEALERS AND FACTORY OFFICIALS MEET

Chevrolet factory officials, St. Louis Chevrolet dealers and retail sales managers, met at a dinner in Hotel Statler Monday evening, Oct. 4. Following the dinner a sales promotion program was covered by E. W. Fuhr and W. J. Burns, regional zone sales promotion representatives.

Officials of the Chevrolet Motor Co. express their appreciation over the consistent increase in retail sales for the St. Louis district. St. Louis dealers are adding to their sales forces to handle a further increase in volume. This is in accord with the recent announcement of the Chevrolet Motor Co. of its expansion program to increase production facilities beginning Jan. 1.

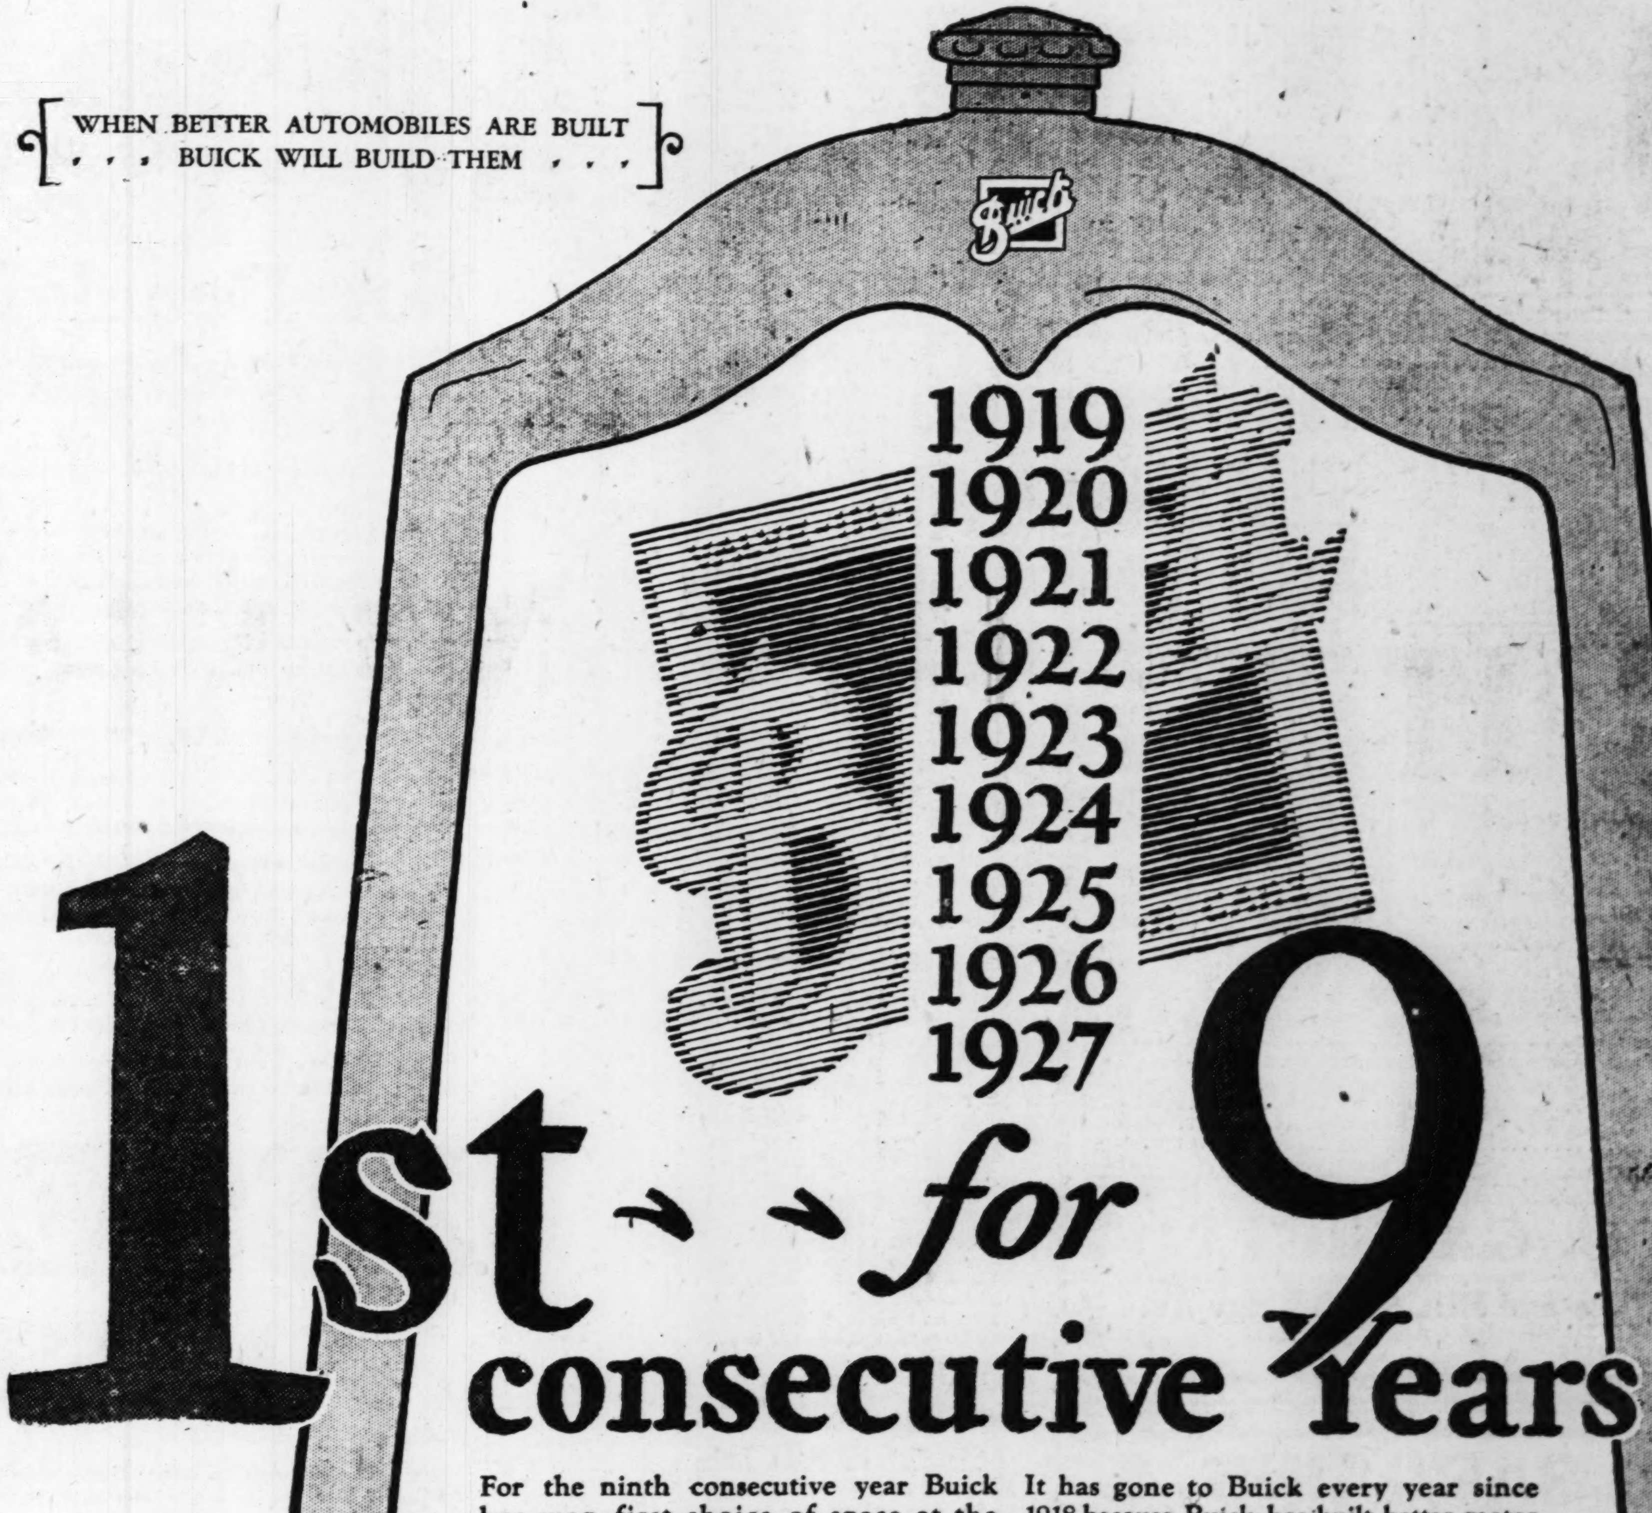
WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM . . .



1st for 9 consecutive Years

For the ninth consecutive year Buick has won first choice of space at the National Automobile Shows.

This is Leadership! For this honor goes annually to the member of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce with the year's largest volume of business.

Chance plays no part in this award. It is conferred upon the car which has found the most favor among the buyers of America—the car in which they have invested a plurality of their dollars.

It has gone to Buick every year since 1918 because Buick has built better motor cars, and continually put back the savings of increased volume and engineering development into still greater value.

Nine continuous years of leadership! For any other car to equal this would mean retaining continuous leadership until 1936—almost another decade.

The industrial history of America records no more brilliant achievement than these nine successive years of Buick dominance.

LUXURY MOTORING IN PIERCE ARROW "80"

Test Run Is Real Experience in Enjoyable, High-Powered Performance.

By "SPENCE."

Comfortable driving and riding have been developed to a surprising degree in the new Pierce-Arrow "80" models, yet power, acceleration and smoothness of engine performance have been increased. Being in one of these cars, whether as driver or passenger, is an experience in enjoyable motoring.

One of the Pierce-Arrow "80" coupes was put through its paces by the Western Automobile Co. for the writer the other day in city traffic and over county roads, and emphasized to him yet again what strides toward motor-car perfection today's automobile engineers have made.

The car has a world of speed. It slid up grades with a quiet but surging rush of power. It flashed away from stops. It "picked up" on such hills as that on Price road, when "tramped on," in a way to show that it would hold its own anywhere. In fact, in every department of performance it proved that it is possible to build for motoring comfort without sacrificing the spectacular.

The angle of the seats, the gear shift, the way controls have been placed for driver convenience, the springing of chassis and seats and upholstery, the accessories—all have been designed for ease and comfort. Little details of finish and appointments are as carefully designed and fitted.

Engineering details—from the special carburetion to the special Pierce-Arrow four-wheel brakes, which are of a type tested and proved for many years abroad—are equally carefully worked out.

The result is luxurious, high-powered motoring at a price far below that generally associated, in the public mind, with such comfort and performance.

The latest development in this type of body design appear in this new finer Chrysler "70" brougham, in which full-sized individual chairs replace the early type of seats. his is one of the new models shown by Midwest Motors, Inc.

FREE PARKING FOR AUTO CLUB MEMBERS AT 1416 MORGAN ST.

Free parking space for Automobile Club of Missouri members in the St. Louis business district has been provided by John Travers of Travers Garage Co., 1416 Morgan street, on a wide space at the rear of the garage, facing Lucas avenue. The Traverse garage is Service Station 188 in the Auto Club system of authorized garages. The parking area is large enough for 150 cars.

NEW HUPMOBILE VICTORIA EIGHT SHOWN IN ST. LOUIS

Five-Passenger Car Has Ample Dimensions—Body Two Shades of Green and Black.

The new Victoria on the Hupmobile eight chassis announced this week combines the clos-coupled seating arrangement particular to this type of body with an unusual amount of seat room for five passengers. This model, which lists at $2345, at factory, is on display at the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., Hup distributors.

Body colors have been selected to accentuate the original pleasing lines of this model. The lower body is finished in Southfield light green; the belt and rear deck in Monte Carlo darker green with black upper body; beading is black with thin white striping on belt, hood louvres and wheel hubs. The upholstery in grey wool mohair with button tufting gives an attractive tone to the interior.

Comfort for passengers is assured by the generous dimensions in all seats. The rear seat, 52 inches wide, gives ample room for three passengers. Arm rests and deep back cushion springs further add to the comfort of the luxurious body. A luggage compartment is in the rear deck.

"Wide doors (30 inches) and tilting front seats give easy access to or exit from all seats. The right front seat folds completely under the cowl when not in use, both front seats are adjustable for height to suit the owner.

The steering wheel is walnut, with walnut grained instrument boards and door mouldings. The body hardware is an attractive pattern of the newest and most convenient design such as "remote-control", door opener and crank-controls on windows and windshield.

There is now a complete line of body types, ten in all, on the Hup eight-cylinder chassis.

TWO NEW JORDAN MODELS ARE EXHIBITED IN ST. LOUIS

A five-passenger custom sedan and a four-passenger custom victoria, both mounted on the light eight chassis, have just been announced by the Jordan Motor Car Co., and are being shown by the MacCarthy-Archer Co.

Both of the new bodies come in optional two-tone color combinations, and are trimmed with custom broadcloths of exclusive patterns. Tufted seat cushions and backs, braided silk "pull-ups," newly designed vanity cases and smoking sets, add to the luxurious appearance of the interiors. The instrument board, instead of being jet black, as in standard models, is of burled walnut, to match the door panels. On the victoria, a trunk is standard equipment.

A new combination of shock absorbers, including Houdaile in front, has further improved an already easy-riding car.

The addition of these new models gives Jordan a complete line, including a custom style sedan and victoria on the Great Line eight chassis, a custom style sedan and victoria on the light eight chassis, and standard sedan, victoria and Playboy roadster, also on the light eight chassis.

The two new models list at $2195.

ROGER PUTNAM CO. WILL DISTRIBUTE NORWALK TIRES

The Roger Putnam Tire Co., 5719 Delmar boulevard, has been appointed direct distributor of Norwalk tires in the St. Louis district. This company, which sells at wholesale and retail, makes a specialty of handling balloon, heavy duty truck and bus tires.

Established seven years ago, the concern is widely known and has won a reputation for service among motorists here. It is now in a position to give the same service to dealers as they would receive direct from the factory at Norwalk, Conn.

The company also maintains an automobile service station at the above address.

C. W. Stanton, district manager of the Norwalk Tire and Rubber Co., of Norwalk, Conn., was in St. Louis last week. Predicting good business in the trade this fall, Stanton said, his company, during the time of depression resulting from Britain's high duty on rubber, used only high grade and no reclaimed rubber, thus maintaining its standard in manufacture of tires.

AUTO PAINTER HAS MOVED

BUICK MOTOR CO. FACTORY SHIPPED 1554 CARS SEPT. 30

All previous daily records of the Buick Motor Co. were broken on the last day of September, when 1554 of the 1927 models were shipped from the factory.

This is the second time since introducing its new model that a new daily shipment record has been set. On the last day of August, just one month after the new models were placed on the market, 1498 cars were shipped.

Running at capacity and turning out more than 1200 cars a day, Buick produced 29,102 cars in September and set a new record for the month. The best previous September was in 1925, when 21,575 cars were built. In August, the first month in which the new models were on the market, 29,355 cars were built, setting a new monthly production record and beating the best previous August figure by nearly 10,000 cars.

Motors Running in Parked Cars Costly.

Motors left running in parked automobiles cost American motorists $80,000,000 annually and create dangerous health conditions in large cities, says Prof. Alexander Silverman of the University of Pittsburg.

RUTH'S HOME RUN WALLOP BREAKS MOTOR FIRM WINDOW

One of Babe Ruth's mighty swats which netted three home runs for the Yankees in the game with the Cardinals sent the ball through a window of the Wells Motor Co., 3008 North Grand boulevard.

Following the smash, the Bambino went to see one of the results of his effort, then poked his head through the hole in the pane while his picture was taken before a large crowd.

Later, Ruth was given a Chevrolet car by the company.

Built This Fine Car Way

Note Details Found Only in Costly Cars—Nowhere in Cars of Essex Price

The secret of Essex success is simply that its good quality goes all the way through.

Thus throughout, Essex does not merely put quality into things easily seen, but it puts the finest construction into hidden parts that you never see, except in the long quiet operation of the car. Nothing is skimped. There are no substitutes for finest quality.

Just glance at the Essex details shown in another column. You will find these practices duplicated in many high priced cars, but never elsewhere in the Essex price field.

These differences are not so overwhelmingly apparent in a comparison of new cars. But they show up after months of hard service in the way Essex cars stay young, smooth, snug, quiet, with the snap and dash of new car performance. They are revealed in, Essex economy of gas, oil and maintenance, its freedom from repair needs and its long lasting reliability.

Roller tappet valves, adjustable front end timing chain, adjustable spring shackle bolts and other chassis features to take up wear, together with ventilated oil and motor protected from dust and dirt assure the long satisfactory service for which Essex is famous.

More than 900,000 motors of its exclusive Super-Six principle have established the supremacy of this design beyond all comparison. Easy to drive and operate, no car, regardless of size or cost, is more comfortably riding.

Back of these great results are years of development, experience and unlimited resources, which make this value, quality and price exclusive to Essex.

NEW PAIGE AND JEWETT MODELS ARRIVE HERE

Cabriolet Roadster, Broughams and Two , 5-Passenger Sedans Brought Out.

Four new Paige models—cabriolet roadster, brougham and two five-passenger sedans, one on the [illegible]-inch chassis, the other on the [illegible]-inch—and a new Jewett brougham are on display by the [illegible]son Motor Car Co., local distributor.

One of the most interesting is the new Paige 6-65 four-door sedan, which is unusually complete in appointments. Throughout the car curved lines are used. The corners of the windows are rounded and their tops follow the curve of the roof.

The general color effect is gray. Below the double belt moldings and between the moldings and over the hood Pilgrim gray is used. A cream stripe parallels each molding.

The upholstery is in gray mohair. The steering wheel, of all wood construction, is in walnut. The instrument board, of new design, the garnish moldings and the door panels are in walnut finish.

The rear and quarter windows have sun shades, and the rear doors shirred pockets. There are two corner lights, two smoking sets and entrance grips in the tonneau.

Other equipment includes four shock absorbers, coincidental ignition and steering lock, automatic windshield wiper, rear-view mirror, combination stop and tail light, lock-in right front door, remote control door handles, cowl ventilator, light control in center of steering wheel, integral sun visor and cowl lights.

Tires are 31x5.25. Artillery-type wood wheels are standard, but steel wheels may be obtained at slightly higher prices.

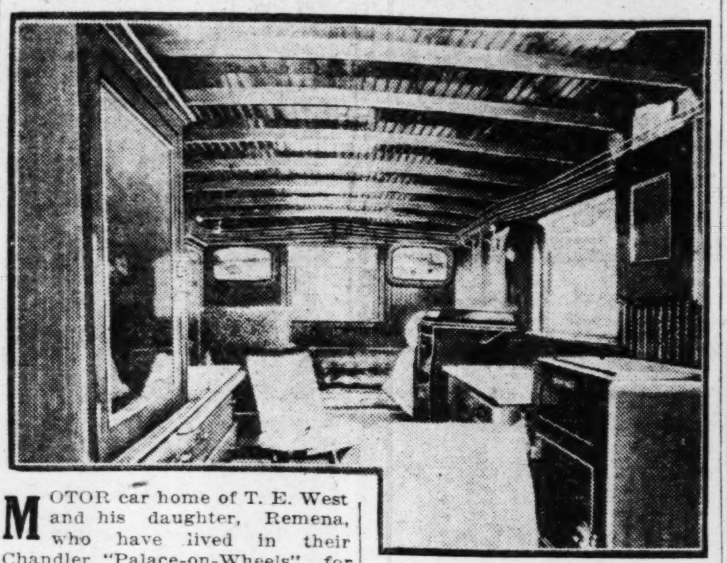
TENTH RHINO TIRE STORE OPENED AT 3100 LOCUST ST.

The Rhino Tires Stores, Inc., recently opened its tenth store at 3100 Locust street with a complete line of Cupples and Exton balloon and cord tires, products of the Cupples Co., 600 Spruce street. Carl Reifler, formerly of the Independent Tire So., is manager.

BABE RUTH GIVEN AUBURN CAR

In a contest recently conducted by a magazine, Babe Ruth was voted the most popular athlete in America today. As such he was given an Auburn 8-88 sport model Italian cream roadster at the opening of the world series at the Yankee Stadium.

Comfort in House on Wheels



MOTOR car home of T. E. West and his daughter, Remena, who have lived in their Chandler "Palace-on-Wheels" for several years. They have traveled more than 68,000 miles of the United States and Canada in this conveyance.

"We average about 200 miles a day in our Chandler, except Sundays," West said, "for then the roads are so crowded it is pretty much of a job trying to maintain our average mileage."

The West's rolling home is complete. The body—built by West—is 7½ feet wide, 14 feet long and 6 feet high.

Lighted by several large windows, it has window screens, a radio set, Victrola, icebox, folding bed, electric lights, rocking chairs, clothes press, kitchen cabinet, stove and stationary wash stand. A 16-gallon tank and an oil heater provide hot water.

West even has a cellar—a compartment 4 feet wide, 3 feet long and 8 inches deep, in which he carries 30 days' provisions.

The car, including passengers, weighs 6500 pounds. Despite the heavy load, the Chandler's "Pike's Peak" engine easily develops a speed of 50 miles an hour, West said, although his average driving speed on good roads is 25 to 30 miles per hour.

NEW TYPE OF U. S. CAR FOR EXPORT FORESEEN

Will Be Designed for Need of Mass Drivers Abroad, Says Erskine.

"Put our people on wheels; give them the wider opportunities of life which better transportation affords; raise our national standards of living." These are thoughts that have taken root in almost every country of importance in the world, according to A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation of America. "That is why I expect to see, in the near future, the development of a new type of motor car, American in conception, but designed for the specific need of the great mass of drivers abroad," Erskine stated.

"Exports have assumed a portion of major importance in the American automobile industry during the past few years. Last year more than 500,000 vehicles, including foreign assemblies, were exported from American plants in the United States and Canada—a total closely approaching the entire foreign automotive production for the year. In 1924 foreign countries, including Canada, purchased American motor cars equal in number to the retail sales in 21 states.

"American manufacturers realize today as never before the importance of the export field. It would not surprise me to see, in the near future, the production in an American plant of a motor car designed specifically for foreign consumption and marketed as an export product."

In the opinion of Erskine, American manufacturers have not neglected to take advantage of the demand for their products in foreign fields. But no builders have as yet designed a car specifically for the foreign driver. Successful as American cars have been in competition with those of similar size abroad, none has been produced to meet the requirements of foreign buyers, who want a car of high economy and low horsepower rating, but endowed with the power, speed and stamina that have won worldwide popularity for the American car.

Motor vehicle exports have grown from a little more than 100,000 cars and trucks in 1919 to more than 500,000 in 1925, and now rank third among all United States exports. Valued at $399,914,268, the cars and trucks that went into foreign fields last year closely approached the total output in the United States for 1914.

"I do no imply that American manufacturers will be forced to intensify their efforts in the export field because of any reduction in the demand at home," Erskine said.

"Ninety-three per cent of the world's population outside the United States owns only 19 per cent of the world's motor vehicles. In the last few years the economic value of automotive transportation has been recognized throughout the world. Motor cars and trucks last year were shipped to such widely separated points on the globe as Iceland and the Belgian Congo. Motor vehicles are in operation in 130 countries and colonies of the world.

E. L. Cord Buys Duesenberg Factory at Indianapolis

Will Continue Duesenberg Passenger Car as $18,000 Machine—Fred Duesenberg to Be in Charge of Engineering.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 9.—The plant, equipment and assets of the Duesenberg Motors Co. have been purchased by a new company headed by E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co. The new company is to be known as Duesenberg, Inc., and plans to continue to manufacture the Duesenberg car on a large scale.

Cord says that Duesenberg, Inc., is an entirely separate company, having no connection whatsoever with Auburn and that there will be no intercompany relationship.

Fred S. Duesenberg, internationally famous automobile engineer, will continue as vice president, in charge of engineering and experimental laboratory.

Cord gave his reasons for the purchase of Duesenberg as follows:

"Ever since I have been in the automobile business, like every other member of this industry who has studied it, I realized that there is one outstanding engineering genius and that is Fred S. Duesenberg. The long list of his inventions and mechanical creations and perfections speaks for itself. The undisputed dominance that his creations have maintained on the race tracks of both continents is a matter of record. The purchase of the Duesenberg factory is the culmination of my plans to be able to offer the world an automobile of undisputed rank, in fact, the finest thing on four wheels.

Duesenberg cars will be strictly custom built, the owners selecting their own body styles, their own bodymakers and their own colors. The price will probably be $18,000, no matter what model, from racer to limousine. We will give the buyer 120-mile an hour speed, if desired. Naturally, the production of this type of automobile, which carries a warranty of 15 years, will be limited and we are now taking orders for delivery within six months."

Cord said he had no other announcements now as to changes in personnel. The present organization will continue to function, but will be increased, he said.

At a meeting attended by newspaper and trade paper representatives, Cord reviewed some of the many engineering and racing achievements of Duesenberg.

Duesenberg built the first American car to win the Grand Prix at Le Mans, France, driven by Jimmy Murphy, and establishing a new road record, outdistancing the entire field by 14 minutes, he said. This was in 1921 and it was not only the first American-made car to win, but the first to place in an important foreign event.

"Duesenberg was America's first straight eight, and that phrase belongs to no other company. Likewise, Duesenberg was the first American car with four-wheel brakes.

"Known both in Europe and America as the master gasoline engine designer, Fred Duesenberg's record is a living exposition of Rudyard Kipling's 'They copied all they could follow, but they couldn't copy my mind. And I left 'em sweating and stealing a year and a half behind.' Duesenberg's outstanding leadership is the more pronounced because it has been achieved in an industry remarkable for having developed so many exceptionally successful men. 'Way back, when Elwood Haynes, Elmer Apperson and R. E. Olds were still experimenting, Fred S. Duesenberg in Rockford, Ill., was making with his own hands his first gasoline motor. He has always pioneered. He was scoffed at in 1912 when he entered the Indianapolis race with a motor of 230 cubic inches against 450 cubic inches for the other cars. However, his success caused the present trend to smaller piston displacement engines.

"Duesenberg's engineering supremacy has been equally marked in marine and aeroplane engines. During the war he was responsible for the success of many high-speed submarine chasers.

"From 1919 to 1926 the list of victories of Duesenberg designed racing cars is the greatest ever compiled. Out of the crucible of racing has come commercial excellence.'

OLDSMOBILE CAR SHIPPED 12,000 MILES TO AFRICA

All records of distance from the place of purchase to the home garage of an automobile are believed broken by an Oldsmobile sedan just sold by the Oldsmobile Sales & Service Co., at Ann Arbor, Mich. The car will have traveled nearly 10,000 miles before it is garaged on the veldt outside Bloomfontein, South Africa. In this land the Oldsmobile will be used by a group of scientists during their six-year search for additional data regarding the double stars in the Southern constellations.

The car was purchased by R. A. Rossiter, assistant professor at the University of Michigan. Professor Rossiter is accompanying Professor W. J. Husey, director of the University observatory, to Bloomfontein, where they will set up the largest telescope ever erected on the Southern Hemisphere.

The Oldsmobile was driven to New York and then shipped last week via steamer to Cape Town. From there the party will drive a distance of about 900 miles to Bloomfontein.

BRIDGE ON HIGHWAY 53 OVER BLACK RIVER NEARLY BUILT

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Oct. 9.—The largest vehicle bridge constructed in South Missouri will be completed Dec. 15, according to engineers. The bridge spans Black River, 12 miles south of Poplar Bluff, on Highway No. 53, which is being constructed.

This bridge will be 1367 feet long and the center will be 60 feet above river level.

More than 165 carloads of material will be used in the bridge, the engineers say, and it will cost the State $116,000.

The bridge has 30 concrete spans, and in the center is a steel span 130 feet long.

Contractors on Highway No. 53 are completing the grading of the 18-mile stretch from Poplar Bluff to the Dunklin County line.

NEW HOME FOR JORDAN CARS BEING BUILT IN ST. LOUIS

Work has been started on a new sales and service station at Lindell boulevard and Sarah street for the MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co., distributer of Jordan cars in this territory, which has been at 439 North Euclid avenue for years.

The building will cover and ell-shaped lot, having a frontage on Lindell boulevard of 60 feet, with a 101-foot frontage on Sarah street.

The Lindell boulevard frontage will contain the salesroom and offices, while the large lot on Sarah street will carry the building, which will house the maintenance and parts departments. Entrance to the maintenance department will be on Sarah street, directly at the head of Maryland avenue.

The building will be one of the most up-to-date automobile establishments in the city. It is hoped to have it ready for occupancy about Dec. 1.

Studebaker Officials to Europe.

Studebaker officials sailing to Europe to study the market in Europe and Paris auto show, included Hoffman, vice president of Studebaker sales; Welch, export sales Ralph De Palma.

Unseen Sources of Long Life

The basic sources of automobile value are not always apparent to the eye.

A motor car, like a house, may LOOK a great deal more substantial than it really is.

Because of this difficulty, more and more thousands are turning to Dodge Brothers product for insurance against disappointment.

The years have proved, and each year proves anew, that Dodge Brothers are as deeply concerned with the UNSEEN goodness of their motor car, as with the seen.

The mileage it will deliver, the safety it will provide, the expense and trouble it will save the owner over a period of years, are quite as important to Dodge Brothers as the more obvious details of equipment and style.

Each Day New Proof of Pontiac Six Supremacy

Now rapidly approaching the 75,000 mark, Pontiac Six production incontestably proves that there was a demand for a low-priced six of high quality—and that the Pontiac Six meets that demand like no other car in the world!

In all the thirty-one years of automotive history, the greatest first full year's production ever attained by any new make of automobile did not exceed thirty-three thousand cars. Yet the Pontiac Six, introduced only nine months ago, has already more than doubled that figure.

This impressive achievement is based not only on the brilliant beauty and spacious comfort that the Pontiac Six offers at so low a price, but also on the stamina, ruggedness and thrilling performance which stamp it a triumph of quality car design and construction.

Pontiac Six, Sedan or Coupe, $825, Oakland Six, companion to Pontiac Six—$1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

RULES 51 MPH IS NOT NECESSARILY SPEEDING

Judge Says Dangerous Driving, in Ohio, Depends on Other Factors Than Mere Speed.

URBANA, O., Oct. 9.—More than 20 states have sought copies of a ruling by Common Pleas Judge E. P. Middletown, who decided that dangerous speed from an automobile depends wholly upon other mechanical condition."

Judge Middletown held this:

"A driver may go 45 miles an hour and still not be guilty of speeding, if the pavement is dry, the road clear and his car in good condition."

The ruling was made here in the case of the State of Ohio against E. A. Larrick, driver of a bus operating between Urbana and Lima. Larrick was arrested by two officers, who had been passengers on his bus, and who said he traveled at the rate of 51 miles an hour during part of the trip.

Driver Acquitted.

There was another little known legal fact brought out in the case—that magistrate courts do not have final jurisdiction in speed cases. Magistrate S. M. Pence bound Larrick over to the grand jury.

Larrick was indicted, tried and found not guilty.

Although Larrick traveled in excess of 35 miles an hour and at a rate "greater than is reasonable and proper," it was learned the machine he was driving was in good mechanical repair and that there was a straight stretch of improved road for several miles with no obstruction in view and that the road was from 20 to 27 feet wide, with no traffic to be seen. Although the speed attained was prima facie evidence of violation, it was these conditions which governed the situation and brought forth the ruling from Judge Middletown, which continued:

"The question naturally arises, what speed is reasonable and proper? Obviously, a driver thaveling at the rate of 45 miles an hour along a deserted country highway, with a few cross-roads and dry pavement, would not be guilty of a speed greater than is reasonable and proper. The fact that he has exceeded the 35-mile speed is merely presumptive evidence, according to the statute, that he has violated the law.

Reasonable Doubt.

"Courts have held that presumptive evidence means that evidence which is competent or sufficient to justify a trial court or jury in finding a defendant guilty, providing, of course, the trial court or jury does not entertain a reasonable doubt that the motorist was driving at a rate greater than is reasonable and proper? Presumptively, he has exceeded this speed, but the ordinarily prudent and conscientious judge or jurist would probably not find the defendant guilty under those conditions.

"If the same driver would attempt to pass a country school house during recess, or at a time when school was being dismissed, at a rate of speed below even 15 miles an hour, he might be found guilty of traveling at a rate which was not reasonable and proper, and could quite properly be arrested for exceeding the speed limit."

The NEW FINER CHRYSLER "70"
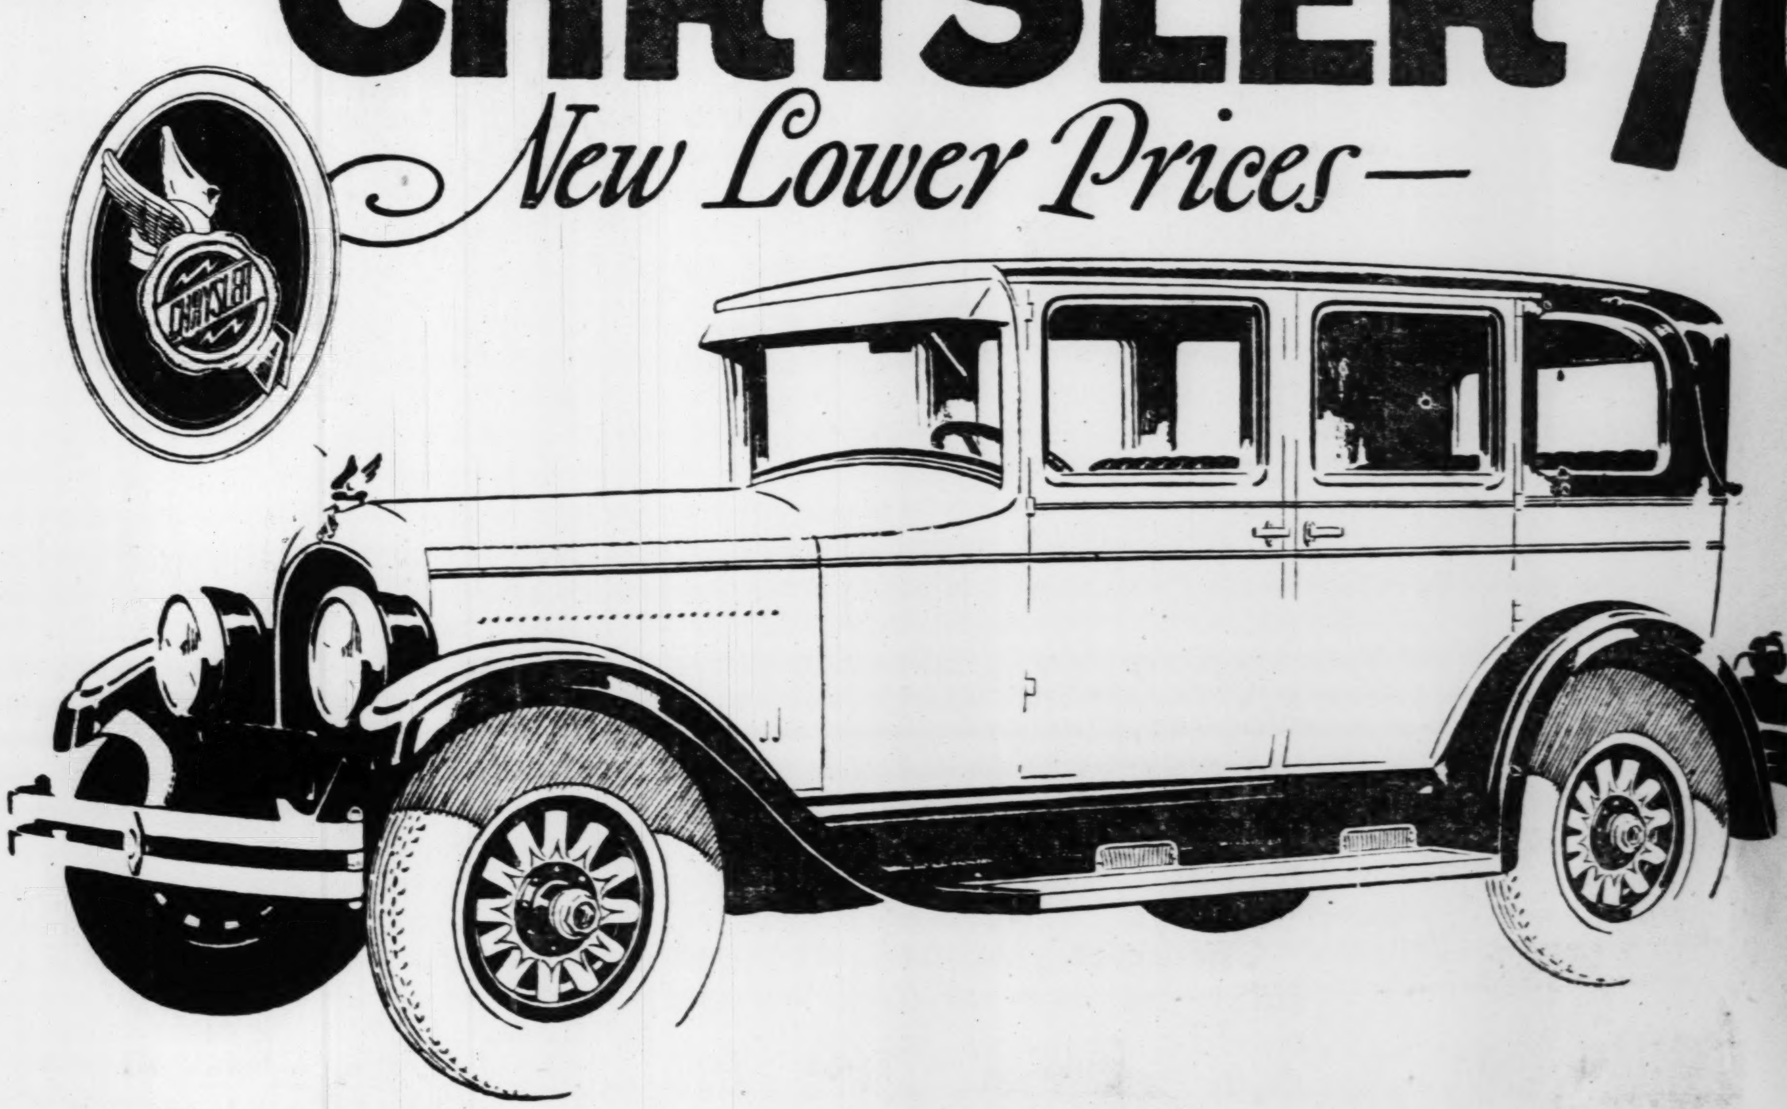
New Lower Prices—



Presenting a New Influence on all Motoring for Years to Come

Newer, more distinctive silhouette giving a general impression of superb elegance and smartness before your eyes catalog its details.

Newer, more exquisitely graceful bodies, accentuated by a newer, exclusive style of military front and cadet visor on enclosed models—

Newer luxury of comfort with deeper and softer cushions—

Newer, greater riding ease, with exclusive no-side-sway vanadium springs, Watson stabilators and extra-size full balloon tires, mounted on newly-designed smaller wheels—

Newer richness of interior upholstery that withstands the closest scrutiny. Finer hardware and fittings with a handsome clock added to the newly beautified instrument panel—

Newer refinements in controls and head lamps, far in advance of current styles—

Newer, more attractive blendings by master colorists in body tones of tans, browns and greens with newer and subtler harmonies in stripings and panelings.

Again, with the new, finer Chrysler "70", Chrysler creates a distinct departure in design and a new measure of value for an industry to follow.

In its fresh new beauty, the new Chrysler "70" once more ignores the accepted and the commonplace, and strikes out into an even more pronounced Chrysler leadership.

With its new flawless artistry of line and coloring and new richness of appointment, joined to characteristically superior Chrysler performance, the new, finer Chrysler "70" even more emphatically upsets all common conceptions of motor car value by its new lower prices.

Not until the coming of the first Chrysler "70" three years ago, did any popular-priced six give 70 miles and more per hour, and pick-up of 5 to 25 miles in 7 seconds, combined with an economy of 20 miles to the gallon.

Three years ago Chrysler "70" was the first with 7-bearing crankshaft, oil-filter, air-cleaner, thermostatic heat control, indirectly-lighted instrument panel, hydraulic four-wheel brakes, balanced wheels and tires, tubular front axle, etc., etc., in this price class.

Three years ago Chrysler "70" initiated roomy compactness and low-hung design.

Three years ago Chrysler "70" led with distinctive individuality in silhouette, with double-beaded body, and an entirely new conception of color harmonies.

Today, while attempts are still made to match the first Chrysler standards of performance and symmetry, the new, finer Chrysler "70" excels the charm and smartness of its older self, just as that older self relegated the earlier conceptions of motor car beauty and performance to oblivion.

With its new vibrant beauty, joined to energetic and vivacious performance, unapproached economy, proved dependability and long life—at prices which register a distinct enhancement of motor car value—the new, finer Chrysler "70" leaves today's trend as far behind as the original "70" advanced the styles of three years ago.

Come in. See this new Chrysler "70" beauty today—experience its new measure of comfort—combined with a performance which an entire industry for three years has failed to approach.

Step inside. Sink into the deep, rich cushions. Comfortable? Why, you've never felt more restfully at ease in all your born days!

Start the motor. Listen to that whispering murmur under the hood. Hardly a sound! A mighty mechanism purring like a kitten!

And power—say, when you tamp your toe on the go-trigger, you get the sensation of waking up all the power in the world.

Reel off the miles at any speed—you'll never feel the slightest vibration. And on hills that make the average car growl up in intermediate gear, give Chandler the gas and whiz up in high!

All models have the great "One Shot" system of centralized chassis lubrication; an air cleaner; an oil purifier; 4-wheel brakes; thermostatic cooling; self-adjusting spring shackles.

The cars themselves reflect the stability of a powerful company with no bonded indebtedness, no mortgages, no bank loans, no notes—and assets 20 to 1 over liabilities—stability that enables Chandler to offer finer cars at lower prices!

How to Match Tubes.

Tubes can be matched by turning down the reheostat until a good tube will barely make the bulb glow. If the next tube to be tested is not so good the light will not brighten at all. If the tube is better than the increased brilliancy is readily noticeable. It is easy to select tubes that have the same characteristics in this manner.

SHORT WAVE SIGNALS FOUND ACTING STRANGELY

Appear to Behave Much Better in One Kind of Weather Than in Another, Scientists Discover.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH DARTMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 9.—Short wave radio signals are temperamental, scientists have discovered. They have pronounced preferences for certain kinds of weather and even for certain times of the day in making their headlong dashes through space. Strange to say, they travel best when a broad rain area includes both sending and receiving stations. Afternoon seems to be the best time for short-distance transmission.

These and other curious phenomena about the relations of radio signals in short-wave transmissions to weather and times of day have been discovered by engineers of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, it was made known today. The experiments are being conducted under the direction of Dr. Vannevar Bush, Prof. Edward L. Bowles and James K. Clapp of the Department of Electrical Engineering, at a new radio research station on the estate of Col. E. H. R. Green at Round Hill, near here. The work has been made possible through the generosity of Col. Green.

Messages to other continents—even Australia—have been dispatched over antennae scarcely more than 20 feet long.

The experimenters also have found that signals are regular when the sky is clear, but weaken or entirely disappear when certain conditions of cloudiness are encountered, although a widespread area of rain which includes both transmitter and receiver generally has been found to give better signals than those obtained in clear weather.

Tests also are being made with many types of antennae for short-wave transmission. These vary from a small antenna mounted entirely within the station to a large exterior structure more than 100 feet in the air. One of the most remarkable facts discovered in the short wave research is that signals may be sent great distances without a large antenna structure.

Communication between 1-XV—the institute's field station—and various stations in Europe, Australia and South America has been carried on regularly on an antenna system consisting of only two wires slightly more than 20 feet long and six feet apart.

NY TO DO WITHOUT NNOUNCER ONE NIGHT

st to Be Made of Listeners' Attitude—Station Call Letters Not to Be Given.

o longer can a DX hunter sit his set and check off station after station as he slowly twists the s from around zero toward the and 100 marks. Old records of to 100 stations in an evening, or odd an hour, are likely to stand some time. The reasons for condition are several, but the f one, besides interference, is use announcements of call letare being made less frequently. ther reason is that longer setions, or groups of three numt are being played in sequence hout interruptions by the anncer.

When a feature program is be broadcast by a chain of sta- ns, it is almost impossible to ntify the one heard, unless it is d for a long time. Announcents give the list of all stations ed up, but some of them oper- on the same channel. With the ral shifting about of stations different wave lengths, it is al- impossible to keep a log book ected to date so that a station be identified by dial readings. , after two or three years of ecution, during which it was declared that the announcer as useless as a phonograph in roadcast station, or that the less d from him the better, the anncer is coming into his own. He now believed indispensible by who like to go traveling on other waves and are desirous of wing at what stations or ports stop, without waiting 15 or 20 utes. They expect radio sta- , like railroad stations, to be ed clearly so they can tell r they are.

an effort to ascertain just how ssary an announcer is, station NY, New York, plans to oper- the whole evening of Oct. 15 out an announcer. It will be esting to hear how the fans that, especially as the call let- will not be given. To be sure, ll be possible to identify the n, since it will transmit its acteristic whistling note occa- lly during the unannounced am.

All Important New Things In Radio to Be Seen at St. Louis Show Oct. 18-23

Leading Manufacturers and Every Wholesaler in St. Louis Territory, Save One, to Have Displays in Exposition.

Virtually every leading manufacturer of radio receiving sets and accessories and every radio wholesaler in this territory except one has promised to exhibit in the St. Louis Radio Show, which will open Monday, Oct. 18, in the Coliseum and will close Saturday, Oct. 23. Indications are that there will be at least 120 booths.

"I cannot recall any receiving set of consequence that will not be exhibited," says Harold Wrape, president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association. All the principal factories will have exhibits, as will the makers of the finest of cabinets and consoles."

To Be "Splendid Show."

Wrape declared that there was no doubt that the coming St. Louis show would rival that at San Francisco for rank as the leading radio exposition in this country, after the New York and Chicago national shows. In fact, he said, there is reason to expect that the displays in St. Louis will be as interesting as those in New York and Chicago.

The St. Louis radio show has changed its character. Last year it was managed by a professional promoter, who was chiefly interested in the gate receipts. "This year," said Wrape, "we have no promoter, so the radio trade has no such narrow interest in the show's success. Our only aim this year is to arouse public interest and the interest of dealers in radio sets and accessories. To that end, we will exhibit everything in radio that we possibly can, to give everyone full chance to compare and estimate the new things in radio. It will be a splendid show; of that everyone may rest assured."

All radio dealers attending the show will be registered, so that visitors may know to whom they are talking. There will be hours when only dealers will be admitted to the show. Dealers will be urged to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the show and to use the booths as headquarters for establishing detail contacts.

Reservations Flood In.

Reservations for exhibit space, hotels and tickets have been flooding in on the Show Committee.

The show will be more than a mere display of radio apparatus. In reality, it is a visible demonstration and exhibit of the endless hours of laboratory research and engineering work done in the last 12 months for development and refinement of radio receivers and accessories, to enable anyone to get full measure of enjoyment from an installation in his home.

These endless refinements and developments have created an interest in the coming show which has never before prevailed, and the magnitude of the St. Louis exhibits this year will rank the show with New York and Chicago's big shows.

To protect the public and trade of the St. Louis territory, the committee says, application for exhibit space have been scrutinized to make certain that the products displayed will be worthy of public favor and that the manufacturers are financially sound.

The pre-show interest results from the public favor being directed to the new accessories that have so simplified radio set operations. Also the new power sets and advanced ideas in radio cabinet furniture have won widespread favorable comment.

The St. Louis radio show is educational, and no selling will be done on the show floor.

Wildey and Sheehan of Orpheum and radio fame, the Six Dancing Radio Venuses, Mitchel Sisters and other entertainers are to appear at the show evenings.

E. C. Dillman, 3053 Cass avenue, has been appointed official decorator for the radio show.

MANY STRIKING FEATURES IN NEW FREED-EISEMANN SETS

Nine types of radio receivers make up the new Freed-Eisemann line, ranging from two five-tube sets with two stages of tuned radio frequency, detector and two stages of transformer coupled audio; four six-tube sets, which are shielded and come in two control or one control types; a seven-tube, one control set, and two models of an eight-tube, single control, loop operated set. Precision of manufacture and of tuning are features of all these new Freed-Eisemanns.

The new eight-tube set has four stages of neutrodyne tuned radio, detector, and a new design of audio. Five variable condensers are simultaneously turned by one control, giving sharpness of tuning said to set a new standard. The loop used is said to have the sharpest directional effect hitherto developed. It is virtually a double loop. A new type of radio frequency amplifying transformer is used. A unique shock proof detector mounting is provided. Both stator and rotor are movable in the new condensers. Shielding is exceptionally thorough, including the tubes. There are five separate, electrically tight copper compartments for radio and detector circuits, with one of steel for the audio circuit, there being a novel double shielding for detector.

The Passing of "By-Pass" condensers

Dubilier Condenser Type 907. Capacities 0.1 to 2.0 mfds. Price, $.60 to $1.75

"BY-PASS" was the name originally given to small paper condensers by Dubilier. This name described their functions—such as shunting radio frequency currents around high resistances, and their use in amplifier circuits.

But now the clumsy old "By-Pass" condenser is out of date. The high voltage used in radio today along with sub-panel construction, demands a condenser of higher electrical efficiency and more compact size.

In the new Type 907, Dubilier has made a compact all-purpose condenser with a *working voltage of 160 volts D.C. With improved soldering lug terminals and mounting feet, Type 907 will give more efficient service in smaller space for every purpose for which the old "By-Pass" type of condenser has been used.

For long life at high voltages insist on Dubilier Paper Condensers.

Working voltage means more than "test voltage." It is the voltage at which a condenser may be safely used in continuous operation.*

NEW ATWATER KENT 7-TUBE SET ESPECIALLY CLEAR TONED

Marked selectivity, distance range and purity of tone are being reported as characteristics of the new seven-tube receiving set which has been added by Atwater Kent as a companion to the five-tube and six-tube Atwater Kents. This set operates on a short inside aerial. It has four stages of radio frequency, detector and two audio stages. An interesting detail of the Model 35 five-tube Atwater Kent is the cabinet, finished in dark brown crystaline effect and devised to shield completely the whole electrical assembly. The noted Model 20 "compact" has the same appearance as last year, its selectivity and volume are said to have been improved.

The Atwater Kent horn speakers are continued in various designs. All are noteworthy for clean-cut design and appearance. A built-in floating speaker, mounted on cubes of sponge rubber, is a feature of the new Pooley cabinets and consoles designed especially for Atwater Kent sets.

Correct Way to Drill Holes.

When drilling or countersinking holes, stand directly above the work. Keep the drill straight up and down and apply only suffiently pressure to insure a good cutting action. Excessive pressure will break out the underside of the material; a block of wood under it will prevent this and insure a clean hole.

WEW WILL BROADCAST FARM SCHOOL LESSONS

Courses of Instruction Include Livestock, Poultry and Dairy Problems.

Station WEW, St. Louis University, 360 meters, has been selected to participate in conducting the United States Farm School, one of the major radio services of the Department of Agriculture to farmers. Farmer students will be given an opportunity to enroll and receive printed material supplementing the lessons over the air.

The text book style of teaching will be taboo. Short words and short sentences will be the new order. Subject matter will be carefully adapted to radio presentation. Usual interest will be injected into the Government school by a local personality—the schoolmaster. Local color and atmosphere will be employed to create and maintain interest. Already thousands have enrolled in the Radio Service of the Department of Agriculture, where it is estimated that the total student body will be 250,000 farmers.

The radio farm school deals with all phases of livestock, poultry and dairy problems in a series of 24 short courses of eight lessons each. The farm will be the students' laboratory. Each farmer enrolled is a student in this "radio classroom," where concise, timely lessons will be presented by agricultural authorities. The livestock class meets at 5 p. m Monday, for 15 minutes, the poultry class Wednesday, and the dairy class Friday. Students will be given a close-up of recent investigations and recommendations which may be applied to their business. Laboratory assignments will necessitate putting into practice the subject matter taught. Each radio short course will be supplemented with printed copies of radio talks and a file of bulletins.

There is a deeper reason. It is history, the manner in which chaos of the air was predicted, and this association can point with proper modesty to the part it played in averting such chaos, as was prophesied. At our annual meeting, we publicly promised not only to continue our so-called 'policing of the air,' but we also guaranteed to the listening public that, as summer static went out and transmitting conditions improved in the fall we would take such steps as were appropriate to insure against interruption of broadcasting service. In other words, we are taking no chances. The function of this association is insurance, and we intend to play our part."

ST. LOUIS-MADE RECEIVER SAID TO BE PHENOMENON

Bristling with unusual features is the Slocumb "Resonator," a four-tube radio receiving set put out by the Nafr Radio Corporation of St. Louis, that is said to rival in distance getting, selectivity and volume any multi-tube set. It has, among other things, radio frequency amplification through iron core transformers. So novel are some of its features that the inventor has had difficulty in finding terms with which to describe them to the patent examiners.

It is said to be a radical departure from any circuit or control method used in any other receiver. It has a unique single control whereby, by the turn of a switch, the receiver becomes a single control set, bringing distance and locals with good selectivity, volume and tone. By using the two main controls, it is said, results that at times are phenomenal can be attained.

Splices Should Be Soldered.

All connections such as splices should be soldered for theb est results. Other kinds of connections give good results for a time, but sooner or later they either become noisy or else obstruct the flow of signals, and when this happens the receiver is not as efficient as formerly. Even though the connection is soldered it does not mean it is a good one, because the soldered connection may be a poor one having a high resistance. Use just enough solder to make a good contact and let the strain be taken up by the wires themselves and not the solder.

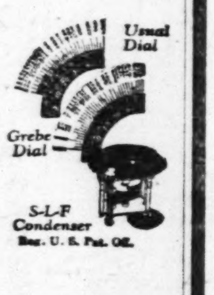
ations are crowded ke Sardines in a Box

How the Grebe Synchrophase does away with this handicap to accurate tuning.

ON the tuning condenser dials of the average set, stations—especially low-wave ones—are so crowded together that it is difficult to separate them for accurate tuning. On the dials of the S-L-F Condensers all stations are spaced at equal intervals. It is thus very easy to pick any station and tune it accurately without "microscopic" adjustment.

Just one of several reasons why the Grebe Synchrophase gives such superior reception and never-ending satisfaction.



Ask a Grebe dealer to explain fully about this and other Grebe exclusive features such as Binocular Coils, Colortone, Low-Wave Extension Circuits, etc.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Receiving Sets for five, six or seven tubes. ONE Dial or three Dials. Mahogany or crystalline finished cabinet. Price range, less tubes and batteries but with battery cable attached, from $60 to $140. Radio Speakers from $16 to $23. Model 32 seven-tube receiver illustrated, with ONE Dial, $140. Radio Speaker, Model H, $21.

Why do 3 out of 4 people who ask for radio by name say "Atwater Kent"?

BECAUSE, with only ONE Dial to turn, it's so simple that anyone can get the same results as a radio engineer.

Because it works from the start—and keeps on working, and doesn't plague the owner with service costs.

Because it meets to-day's demand for power and efficiency in small space.

Because it's good to look at as well as to listen to.

Because its tone—at low or large volume—is clear and true.

Because it's a standard make—not here to-day and gone to-morrow.

Because to see and hear it is to want it.

And because to own it is to be satisfied, as hundreds of thousands of Atwater Kent Radio owners testify.

Let an Atwater Kent dealer show you how the price range is on the lowlands of popular desire, not up on the heights where few care to climb, and that you can't buy better Radio at any price.

EVERY SUNDAY EVENING—The Atwater Kent Radio Hour brings you the stars of opera and concert, in Radio's finest program. Hear it at 9:15 Eastern Time, 8:15 Central Time, through:

BETTY CROCKER WILL TALK ON LUNCH BOXES OVER KSD

School days and lunch boxes constitute the topic for the talk which Betty Crocker, home service specialist, will broadcast from K S D tomorrow morning.

The average housewife's need of a regular vacation will be discussed by Miss Crocker in her talk Wednesday, Oct. 13. In this "Vacation Talk," Miss Crocker dwells particularly upon recipes and suggestions for menus which the busy woman can arrange when she wishes to have a little time the next day for other activities.

The second lesson in Miss Crocker's radio cooking school will go on the air from KSD Friday morning, Oct. 15. The subject will be "Orange Pie." Each Friday morning Miss Crocker devotes her talk to a lesson in the cooking school. This year the school is continuous instead of being divided into sections. Any listener who reports satisfactorily on any 10 of the lessons may qualify for graduation.

The total retail value of radio equipment sold in the United States during 1925 is placed at $450,000,000.

ARMY-NAVY GAME MOST POPULAR, IS RADIO'S VERDICT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Radio's verdict as to which of the big football games commands the widest attention names the Army-Navy game that is to be played this year for the first time in Chicago.

Already a record number of stations haye asked to be included in whatever chain of broadcasters is formed to transmit a play-by-play account of this game.

GREBE SYNCHROPHASE SETS HAVE WIDE RECEIVING RANGE

The new Grebe Synchrophase receivers retain the tested circuit characteristic of this make. The original Grebe tangent wheel vernier controls are used, but are hooked together with a flexible control that permits virtual single control tuning with adjustments after a station has been brought in.

Its condensers permit separating stations evenly so as to avoid crowding on the lower wave lengths. Neutralization in the Grebe is accomplished through use of special binocular coils.

A novel, and practical feature, is an automatic switch whereby a Grebe set can be mad to receive many of the stations which have wave lengths below 200. The switch cuts out half the inductance of the coils and cuts in additional condensers.

The Grebe colortone enables a set owner to adapt the tone quality of his receiver to suit his individual preference. It alters the timbre or depth of voice or instrument, adjustments of the colortone switch bringing out or suppressing excessive high or low frequencies as desired.

CARE OF LOUD SPEAKER CORD

Give some attention to the loud speaker. Each time the cord is kinked, due to moving the instrument from place to place, it wears a little and sometime the strands of wire that enter into its make-up are going to break.

When this happens the reception is going to be badly marred with a loud crackling and scratching that very much resembles static. Broken connections, of course, are the cause and not only may the trouble be located in the cord but it may be the result of other loose connections in the set, such as battery conections and so on.

Denmark has 70,000 receiving sets. There are 48,000 in Copenhagen, nearly half of which are tube sets.

WBZ AND WBZA USE SAME WAVE LENGTH FOR PROGRAMS

No Interference; Both Are Controlled by a Single Quartz Crystal.

WBZ at Springfield, Mass., and WBZA at Boston, two broadcasting stations of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., wave length—333 meters or 900 are now operating on the same Kcs., but as they are controlled by a single quartz crystal they do not interfere with each other.

Both stations, of course, are transmitting the same program, else the scheme could not be followed. The shift was made recently when WBZA gave up its 241.8-meter channel and adopted the same wave length utilized by the older station at Springfield.

This plan is of exceptional interest since it permits two stations, although not at great distances from each other to utilize the same channel wihout interference when the same program is carried.

Five hundred and thirty broadcasting stations in the United States use 89 wave bands by splitting time with others.

OUTSIDE ANTENNAS ARE MOST EFFICIENT

Methods of Building Various Types of Radio Aerials Outlined.

A necessary and important part of every radio receiving set is the aerial or antenna. This usually consists of one or more bare copper wires stretched between insulators for the purpose of gathering the electrical impulses sent out from broadcasting stations. The most efficient antenna is the outside type which should be placed as high as possible where it will not come in contact with trees and other obstructions. The inverted L, the T and the single straight aerials are the commonest types.

The inverted L antenna gets its name from its shape. It is widely used and with good results, though it has one defect, its directional property. This defect sometimes is turned to advantage. It receives loudest when the end to which the lead-in is connected is pointing towards the transmitting station. Most satisfactory aerials of the inverted L type employ two wires when the space between the insulators does not allow a single wire of 50 feet or more. When two wires are used they should be spaced three feet apart.

The T Type Antenna.

The T antenna, as the name implies, is T shaped. It is free from directional properties of the inverted L type. It receives from any direction with equal success. A single wire T type antenna should be 100 feet long. If conditions prevent putting up a single wire antenna of 100 feet in length, then a multiwire construction is used. Four or more wires should be placed at least two feet apart. The lead-in should be taken from the exact middle of the antenna. The lead-in should always have the same area or cross-section of wire as the antenna to avoid cutting down capacity of the aerial.

The straight-line antenna has only a short lead-in, coming as it does, almost direct to the set. Generally one end is higher than the other and is placed above roof and tree top interference. This arrangement is favored by many; it is simple and efficient. The antenna and the lead-in are one piece of wire as a rule and it therefore cuts down any resistance that a joint might cause. Also but one aerial mast is required. Such an antenna should be 100 feet long.

The Cage Antenna.

The cage antenna is built like a cage. Generally six wires are used and are spaced on rings about 12 inches in diameter. The advantage of the cage is its low resistance. It can be made into a T type or L type or a straight line antenna, as desired. Generally it is about 75 feet long and the wires are continuous. The cage has come into prominent use during the past year in cases where record distance was desired and every detail of efficiency was carried out.

Many people have asked what the difference is between a regular outside antenna and an inside loop antenna. It must be acknowledged at the start that as an antenna or radio wave pickup device, a loop's efficiency is usually aboue one per cent of the average outside type. To dispel the illusion of a good many people, a loop can in no way, when substituted for a regular outdoor antenna, equal it for signal strength on nearby or distant stations.

Efficient Antenna Installation.

A highly efficient antenna installation is erected with the following details in mind:

Over-all length not over 125 feet.

No close approach to trees or buildings.

Horizontal part as high as possible.

Lead-in away from building.

Absence of joints (where possible).

As few insulators as possible.

Ground wire to be connected to water pipe.

Set close to window where lead-in enters.

Wire fairly heavy (No. 14) and rigid.

Clean connections throughout.

Straight well-secured steel masts.

Heights is of course the first and important factor. One can use one of the three sizes (20, 40 or 60 feet), of pressed steel Hercules aerial masts.

These aerial masts come in both the earth type and the roof type. A roof adaptor is furnished with the roof type so it can be mounted on either a flat or a peak roof.

Erection of Mast.

The erection of an aerial mast should receive careful consideration. It should be light and strong and easily raised into position.

The Hercules aerial mast is of light steel construction, making it ideal and a most simple mast to erect. When erected it will withstand a pull of 500 pounds at the top. The mast itself weighs but a few pounds. It is lightweight that simplifies erection.

All guy wires should be galvanized and securely fastened to insure proper strength during high wind.

NOT ONE AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ON

Your Automobile's a Roving Home
—Buy One That Lasts!

"The automobile is fast becoming the American family's roving home," says Roy W. Sherman, famous editor of "Motor", and adds significantly, "just as the average family does not trade its fixed home every year, it does not want to trade its automobile."

It's true! Most of us spend more of our leisure hours in our cars than we do in our homes. With the motor car, the workaday world falls back of you in the dust of going away. Never, in all the history of man, have we been lords of space and time as now—masters of moments and miles.

But what of this fleet, roving home? Must we watch it wither and fade just as we begin to understand it? Must we pay and pay for the freedom it gives, with the endless cost of frequent trade-ins? Must we bear the burden of "a short life but a merry one" for motor cars?

Reo Says "No"

Long ago, Reo refused to think so. Reo built cars to last longer—built so well that the years have proved "Not One American Car Lasts As Long As Reo—Not One."

This is the measure of Reo's leadership—a bigger percentage of Reo's past eight years' production is now in use than of the total automobile industry's past five years' production.

A Reo roving home gives three extra years to use or sell that cost you nothing.

A Reo Roving Home Is Different

Reo, the roving home, is long lived, like a good house, because it is well built. Those who realize the use of their automobile as a home buy their car as they would buy a house. They look beneath the handsome coat of paint, the well-turned angles for that certitude of long life which comes only from staunch construction and tested materials.

And in Reo, America's longest lasting car, they find that certainty beneath its handsome exterior.

The best houses are not found in the newest subdivision, opened on the crest of a boom, built up with monotonous row upon monotonous row of boxes—nor will you find in Reo that reasonless groping for another fleeting fad in design which appeals only to those who never see beneath the surface—which lasts but for a season. Reo is always good taste, just as the Colonial house is always good taste.

Reo's long life, its freedom from repair worries and expenses, its sound brawniness throughout long, long years of added miles do not, however, make Reo a costly car. Its moderate price, even with its high quality, is possible because of Reo's manufacturing methods and controlled production.

If You Make Reo Your Roving Home, You Will Enjoy The Roving More

Step in today and ask to drive any of the models that appeal to you. Have someone try the back seat for a long journey—that's where manufacturers have always found it most difficult to build comfort and the difference in Reo riding is best shown by sitting there.

Feel a Reo perform under any test you put it to—then realize that it will keep it up for mile upon mile, that here is a roving home you can move into and stay for years to come.

How Wilson Won His First Election and Woke Up Old Order of Political Bossism

His Wife Made Decision That Led Him to Make Successful Race for New Jersey Governorship.

WON CONVENTION BY FIRST SPEECH

James Kerney Describes Hard Fight for Nomination — Tumulty One of Those Who Opposed It.

FOLLOWING is the second installment of "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson," a book by his friend James Kerney, editor of the Trenton, N. J., Times. Mr. Kerney was intimately acquainted with the public life of the late President from its beginning, served Mr. Wilson in a confidential capacity in the great war and remained his friend to the end of his life.

By James Kerney.

Editor and Publisher of the Trenton (N. J.) Times.

(Copyright, 1926.)

Col. George Harvey.

Woodrow Wilson arriving for inauguration as Governor.

Senator James Smith Jr. of New Jersey.

COLONEL GEORGE HARVEY was no mere chance acquaintance of Wilson's. He was president of Harper & Bros., then publishers of Wilson's books, likewise editor of Harper's Weekly and Harper's Monthly, as well as owner and editor of the North American Review.

For some years the big magazines of the country had been cultivating a demand for men of higher intellectual and social eminence in public life. The Atlantic Monthly, under the editorship of Walter Hines Page, had been something of a pioneer in the field. When Page became editor of World's Work he had followed a like course. The Century, under Richard Watson Gilder, intimate friend of Grover Cleveland and favorably disposed toward Wilson, was spreading the same doctrine Scribner's, with Robert Bridges, who had been a student with Wilson at Princeton, gave encouragement at every opportunity.

To crystalize the sentiment there was needed something of the dynamic punch of Harvey, who energetically specialized in politics.

Harvey and Harry Harper of the publishing firm, were at the inauguration of Wilson as President of Princeton University in October, 1902. Everything about the Wilson environment was calculated to appeal to the business politician. The Wilson inauguration as head of the university was typical of the conservative atmosphere. Grover Cleveland made the speech on behalf of the trustees. The Clevelands and Robert Lincoln dined with the Wilsons, while Harvey, Mark Twain, Richard Watson Gilder and Speaker Thomas Brackett Reed, czar of Congress, all on hand for the event, dined with George Armour. They were the kind of folks that regarded William Jennings Bryan and his associates as lightweight professional agitators without genuine ability or balance and calculated to wipe out the country.

Senator James Smith Gentleman Boss.

Harvey got his training in practical politics in New Jersey and for many years before the Wilson nomination for Governor had been close to Senator James Smith. Smith had begun life as a clerk in his father's grocery store. He was a very handsome man, of charming manner and at the time occupied a commanding position in both the business and political life of New Jersey. He was president of a large banking institution, at the head of several leather manufacturing concerns, the publisher of a morning and an evening newspaper, and one of the recognized Irish-American leaders of the country. He had sent three sons to Princeton and had a slight acquaintance with Wilson.

Smith was one of the successful old-time gentlemen bosses who made a business of playing the political game in a practical way. Likeable and suave, immaculately groomed, standing six feet and with the face of an innocent child, he fascinated both the business men and the common crowd. A generous contributor to civic and charitable movements, he gathered about him a band of loyal adherents in the high-class county of Essex and was soon the acknowledged leader of his party there. He soon became the party boss of New Jersey. He gathered funds from the big railroad and utility corporations and others who found control of politics useful and, in turn, distributed money to various county leaders, most of whom were without means of their own. He was a lavish entertainer, occupying in the summer time what was known as the Garfield cottage at Elberon—the seaside mansion in which the wounded President, James A. Garfield, died after he had been rushed there following the shooting at the Washington railroad station by the crazy Guiteau.

Within 10 years he had become so powerful that he was able in 1892 to switch the New Jersey delegation in the Democratic national convention from David Bennett Hill to Grover Cleveland, which counted very much for the renaming of Cleveland.

Then Smith went after the United States senatorship himself, although the New Jersey Legislature that had been elected was obligated to Gov. Leon Abbet. Senators at that time were picked out in the old-fashioned way, and with a crowd of lobbyists besieging the Capitol Smith was elected by the Legislature.

While nominations were not sold outright, as judicial places were under the old French monarchy and commissions in the army of England were until 1872, the practice was to parcel out United States senatorships to some well financed politician, agreeable to the corporation interests. After the election of John F. Dryden, president of the Prudential Insurance Co., to the United States Senate in 1902 the whole State was stirred. Dryden was an able business man, for the methods used to advance him politically caused such a stench that it was impossible for him to be returned in 1907. This produced a period of political unrest and agitation that contributed largely to the Roosevelt and Wilson waves in New Jersey in 1910 and 1912.

It was the habit of Smith to visit me along the Jersey shore at least once each week during the summer of 1910, so I had a fair knowledge of what was going on. Whatever might be the decision about nominating Wilson for Governor, Smith more than once declared that he had no idea of personally going out and endeavoring to corral the delegates necessary to nominate Wilson for the presidency. It had cost Smith's friends, August Belmont, upward of $250,000 to make the fight for Alton B. Parker in 1904, and Smith had no notion of attempting to raise any such fund for a Wilson enterprise. Smith, with Harvey, had sat in when Whitney named Cleveland, and he knew the enormous cost in money and effort of putting over a candidate for the presidency.

Despite this outward glamor his personal fortunes were actually in a bad way at the time, and his political situation was such that he sorely needed to win. Since 1895 he had been handpicking most of the Democratic candidates for Governor, and none had ever been elected. There was an increasingly large number of young progressives in the New Jersey Democracy who were clamoring for his retirement.

Setting the Stage for Wilson's Debut.

Wilson was known to entertain liberal views in excise matters. He was opposed to the radicals. And he favored party organizations. In an article entitled "The States and the Federal Government" Wilson had argued that a system of popular elections like ours could not be operated successfully unless the selection of candidates were left to a few persons who from one motive or another volunteered to make a business of it.

But it was Harvey who induced Smith to accept Wilson and who arranged the meetings in New York in the summer of 1910, where Smith's lieutenants told Wilson that the New Jersey Democrats were unanimously clamoring for his nomination. There were many things to be ironed out. Smith was State boss, but he must lean on James R. Nugent and Robert Davis for the picking of the delegates in the two great counties of Essex and Hudson. Without them Smith would be helpless. Publicly the Wilson stage was set for any political emergency. Through the fine work of his literary friends the Princeton University head was ready to be vaulted into the White House.

Wilson Wanted to Be President, Not Governor.

Despite the fact that on frequent occasions he had made known his ambitions for a professional political career and despite the further fact that he realized now, after the disastrous fight with West (Andrew F. West, dean of the graduate college at Princeton), and the faculty that his happy days at Princeton soon must end, Wilson did not at once grab the political bait that Harvey finally induced Smith to hold out. "Caution is the confidential agent of selfishness," he had said shortly before in a London speech. His recent savage struggle at Princeton had had its effect.

Wilson wanted to be President of the United States, not Governor of New Jersey.

Before making the decision to run he put the problem before his intimate personal friends in and out of the Board of Trustees of Princeton. They declined to take the responsibility, promising, however, that he could rely on their friendship and substantial support wherever he might venture.

After the preliminary discussions with Harvey and Smith, Wilson held a conference in New York early in July to get a further line on the atmosphere. The meeting was arranged by Harvey after consultation with Smith. It was no group of second-string men that Smith carefully picked to put the finishing touches on the job.

Richard V. Lindabury, the State's foremost lawyer and one of the outstanding leaders of the American bar, headed the delegation. Nugent and Millard F. Ross represented the practical side of the Smith machine. Judge Robert S. Hudspeth, Democratic National Committeeman from New Jersey, and Congressman Eugene F. Kinkead were the spokesmen for the Davis Hudson County machine. Harvey represented himself and the rest of mankind. It would be difficult to find a better combination in any land.

Assertions have been repeatedly published—even in some of the idolatrous effusions that seek to glorify Wilson—that Wilson promised at the New York conference to recognize the party organization and that in his later treatment of Smith and Nugent he had ignored this pledge. To clear up the matter definitely, I asked Lindabury, who always remained on friendly terms with Wilson and Smith, to give me his best recollection of what had taken place, and this is what he wrote in reply:

"I was present throughout the first Woodrow Wilson meeting held in New York to which you refer and have a rather distinct recollection of what took place. The whole effort was to induce Mr. Wilson to consent to run, and no one, I am quite sure, annexed any condition or attempted to exact any promise. You are at liberty to quote me on the subject if you desire."

Mrs. Wilson Made the Final Decision.

The final decision for Wilson to run for Governor of New Jersey was made by his wife, Ellen Axson Wilson, after many anxious days of contemplation at Lyme. At a second conference held in New York on Tuesday, July 12, 1910, Wilson formally declared his readiness to run.

Princeton is in Mercer County, of which Trenton is county seat, and the Trenton Evening Times sent return postal cards to 250 party leaders, requesting them to express their respective preferences for gubernatorial candidates. The reply showed that 245 favored the nomination of Frank S. Katzenbach (now a Justice of the State Supreme Court) who, like Wilson, was a resident of the county. The other five favored Wilson. It hurt the Wilson pride that he could not muster a single delegate from Princeton or from elsewhere in his own county.

The State convention that met Sept. 5, 1910, and finally put Wilson in nomination was very much of a rough-and-tumble one. Smith and Harvey had arrived in Trenton the previous afternoon and from Room 100 of the Trenton House, from time immemorial headquarters of the bosses of both parties, had been operating on the delegates.

Not only did Smith have Nugent actively at work on the firing line, but old-timers like William J. Thompson, "Duke of Gloucester," of race-track notoriety; Thomas Flynn, starter at the Gloucester track, and other handy workers were drafted to round up the hungry patriots for Wilson.

Wilson Made a Hit on First Appearance.

After the wrinkles had been ironed out and the nomination assured, Harvey telephoned to Wilson at Princeton and sent an automobile to bring him to address the convention. Wilson had

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

HOW WILSON WON HIS FIRST ELECTION

been closely allied with railroad corporations, public utility corporations and banking and other business institutions interested in manipulating government. The Republican party was in exactly the same condition save that the corporations usually preferred to carry on with the Republicans as being politically more stable.

Tumulty Opposed Wilson's Nomination.

Recognizing the need of local atmosphere in the meetings Nugent telephoned to Joseph P. Tumulty of Jersey City and invited him to accompany Wilson. Tumulty, who later gave 10 years of devoted service to Wilson as secretary, had been opposed to the Wilson nomination. But he had fallen into line. Nugent felt that with his three years' experience in the Legislature and his unusual gift of oratory Tumulty was just the man to use as runner-up for the candidate.

During the interim Wilson had offered his resignatin as president of the university and the trustees snapped it up with celerity, which did not add to the comfort of the candidate. That was on Oct. 20. The following Sunday evening, Oct. 23, Col. David Flynn, bank president and ardent admirer of Wilson, telephoned from Princeton that Wilson would like to see me Monday morning. I went over to Princeton and spent upward of an hour discussing the situation with the candidate and Flynn. There was considerable frank talk about the speeches as having been too general, and Wilson candidly asked what would be the effect of a direct attack by him on the whole boss system, more particularly the Democratic overlords.

"If you follow that course you should have no further anxiety about what your neighbors in Mercer County will do, nor what will happen in the State," I told Wilson; adding: "You will win hands down, and you won't need to feel under obligations to any of the independent newspapers for supporting you, either."

That ended the campaign and branded Wilson as a genuinely upstanding radical. He won the election by 49,000 majority.

It was the biggest vote he ever received in New Jersey. The heavy commuter vote, mostly Republicans, never supported him in subsequent elections, and he never again got a majority of the votes of the State.

THERE IS A GREAT DIFFERENCE

Says Well-Known St. Louis Man, "In the Way You Feel After You Have Used the Great Herb Extract Remedy, Herb Juice."

"Your Herb Juice has done more for me than I can tell you, and there surely is a vast difference in the way I feel now and before I started taking it. It has relieved me of my various ailments and it gives me pleasure to be able to recommend it," said Mr. Henry Delenne, South Jefferson Ave., St. Louis, Mo., in a recent conversation with the special demonstrator at Walgreen's Drug Store.

In continuation of his statement, Mr. Delenne said: "I believe that two-thirds of the people today are afflicted with constipation, and I was no exception. And, as everyone knows, constipation can cause an awful lot of trouble, and I believe most ailments come from a constipated condition. I had a very poor appetite and what little I did manage to eat always caused me a great deal of trouble because I suffered terribly from gas on the stomach. I have taken quite a bit of your Herb Juice for my ailments and have never found its equal as a system purifier and body builder. I am never bothered with constipation any more and it has completely relieved me of that gassy condition. I now have a wonderful appetite and just feel better in every way. I have gained seven pounds in weight in six months and am gaining every day in weight as well as energy. I am glad to recommend Herb Juice to others because I know it will do all that is claimed for it, and that they will get the same beneficial results as I did. It is a very remarkable remedy for ailments such as mine and I think it is worthy of the highest praise and shall always be glad to speak a good word in its behalf."

Don't fail to see the Herb Juice man direct from the Herb Juice laboratories, who has established headquarters at Walgreen's Drug Store, 514 Washington ave., and learn more of this great medicine that has relieved thousands of people right here in St. Louis. This great Herbal Extract remedy called Herb Juice now selling at the rate of a million bottles yearly.

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART SEVEN. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 10, 1926. PAGES 1—8B

Anita Loos Play Opens Tonight at Shubert-Rialto

THAT highly popular epic, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which in book form was one of the most successful of the year, will hold forth in dramatic vesture at the Shubert-Rialto this week, opening tonight.

The play, taken mostly from the book by its authoress, Miss Anita Loos, and her husband, John Emerson, ran for 22 weeks in Chicago. It is billed as a hilarious comedy, but is rather less than that. Those who read and enjoyed the book will have an opportunity to meet Miss Lorelei Lee and observe her peculiar ethics once more. So closely does the spirit of the play follow the spirit of the book, however, that unless one knows and likes its moronish patter in advance, the piece is apt to be a little puzzling.

A good cast is promised. Miss Iris West, who had some Chicago experience in the leading role, will play Lorelei here. Miss Gladis Moore, another from the Chicago company, is to have the part of Lorelei's friend, Dorothy.

The action is built upon Lorelei's trip abroad at the expense of one Gus Eisman, the button king of Chicago. On the way over Lorelei meets Henry Spoffard, a noted Philadelphian, also Lord and Lady Francis Beekman. Lorelei ensnares Sir Francis and before long has touched him for a diamond tiara. Lorelei likes diamonds—"they last so long"—and after some rather dubious adventures with dear old Beeky she is won to a life of semi-rectitude by noble Henry Spoffard.

JOHN GALSWORTHY has sung his swan song in the theater. The author of "Old English," in which George Arliss will be seen at the Shubert-Rialto again this season, bade farewell to the stage in "The Escape," recently produced in London and which Winthrop Ames, who presented "Old English," "Strife" and "The Pidgeon" to this country is to produce here. As usual Galsworthy has something new to say, and presents a fresh and unhackneyed theme in his newest play. It concerns a youth who is responsible for an accident that results in murder. After serving two years in prison he decides to belt. The reactions to his escape of those men and women he meets while attempting to get away motivate a tense drama which reaches its climax in the perplexity of a minister divided between his duty to the letter of the law and what he believes is his real duty toward the rehabilitation of the youth. Not even Galsworthy solves the problem. The youth gives himself up to the police.

BEGINNING tonight the American Theater, the other home of standard drama in St. Louis, will present a motion picture—the long-expected presentation of "Ben Hur." The production is directed by Fred Niblo, from a scenario by Carey Wilson. Ramon Navarro is the Ben Hur, Francis X. Bushman the Messala. May McAvoy, Carmel Myers and Betty Bronson are important in the cast. The great moment of the picture, of course, is in the chariot racing scene, as it was in the play when that was presented some years ago on the same stage.

FOLLOWING "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" at the Shubert-Rialto, Earl Carroll's "Vanities" come to that theater for the week of Oct. 24. The cast is headed by the iminitable Joe Cook, and in the Carroll contingent of femininity are Ethel Dale and Irene French, the official "Miss Broadway" of 1926. Others of the entertainers are Frances Marchant, principal dancer; Jack Redmond, trick golf expert; Maj. Wallace McCutcheon, who is celebrated as a soldier of fortune; Renee Lowrie, Laura Lee and Clifford Bourke. Music for the "Vanities" is by Clarence Gaskill, the sketches were written and staged by William McGrew and the dances and ensembles by David Bennett.

Hit Hungarian Comedies.

MUSICAL comedies from Austria and Hungary are "spoiling the taste of the Jugo-Slavian public" in the opinion of the art section of the Ministry of Public Instruction. It has circularized all theaters in the Triune Kingdom demanding that such comedies be removed.

Inasmuch as 95 per cent of all operettas staged in Jugo-Slavia originate in Budapest, the managers protested immediate withdrawal would force them to close their houses.

"Second Thoughts — on — First Nights"

By Alexander Woollcott

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

"DEEP RIVER," a native opera which Frank Harling has spun from the nostalgic libretto fashioned by Laurence Stallings one of the legendary days when Creole gentlemen wooed and fought for the quadroon beauties under a Louisiana moon, opened at the Imperial Theater Monday night. Arthur Hopkins is the producer.

The result is a superb production of a hybrid thing—a work now operatic in its form, now a romantic melodrama interspersed with songs and incidental strains from the orchestra pit. Some of it, I think, is clumsy, some of it maddeningly static and made to seem more so by that catalepsy into which the Hopkins baton throws any company that comes under his direction.

But "Deep River" has many moments heavy laden with an unforgettable beauty and its rueful first act is one of the loveliest hours I have ever spent in the theater. I hope to write more of this work in later dispatches but, in the meantime, I reduce my comment to an urgent recommendation that you put it first on the list of things to be seen when you come to New York.

MORE and more, now, is place being made in the theater in New York for the great riches the American Negro can bring to it. His music ran ahead of him, as a troupe of trumpeters herald a coming. In the choirs invisible of "Deep River" many colored folk sing and in several arias, Julius Bledsoe has a chance to enchain a hushed house with the ineffable sweetness of his voice.

For Paul Robeson, that magnificent, ebon giant whose concerts here and throughout the country last season were so crowded and so happy, came back on Wednesday in a play written to make some use of the sure gift as an actor which he had revealed in the revivals of "The Emperor Jones." And somewhere a dramatization is being made of De Bose Heyward's "Porgy." Finally, out on the coast, the vagrant Hugh Wiley is tossing in his sleep over a stage vesion of his blessed Wildcat. But this, I hear, is not intended for the use of any Robeson. Wiley has none other than Jolson, in mind, suspecting, I fancy, that because Jolson is so successful as the master minstrel of his time, he must be secretly yearning to stop singing and just act and act and act.

IN the third act of "Deep River," when, for a moment, the vast stage was emptied and one heard only the murmur of unseen choruses, saw only the lazy tracery of the tree shadows upon the gray green jalousies of the old New Orleans house, the door opened on the high balcony and down the winding stone steps came an aging mulatto actress who played, in black taffeta and diamonds, the procuress of the quadroon ball. She stood there for a moment, serene, silent, queenly and I could think only of the lost loveliness that was Duse. The noble head, carved with pain, was Duse's.

When "Deep River" was having its trial flight in Philadelphia, Ethel Barrymore slipped in to snatch what moments she could of it. "Stay till the last act if you can," Arthur Hopkins whispered to her, "and watch Rose McClendon come down those stairs. She can teach some of our most holty-toity actresses distinction."

It was Miss Barrymore who

Heavy Imports of Foreign Plays.

THE import of English drama in exchange for American musical comedy and jazz will be greater than ever during the current theatrical season.

American managers—Al Woods, Archie Selwyn, Lee Shubert, Morris Gest, and several others—left London with pockets bulging with manuscripts. Twenty-five per cent of the plays on Broadway this season will be from European pens. The proportion of American plays in London will be even greater.

Not one English musical comedy was bought by the Americans, yet American musical and dancing shows continue to fill English theaters.

English plays to be seen in New York and their authors, include: "The Ghost Train," by Arnold Ridley; "Wet Paint," by Lord Lath-

AT the Cecil B. De Menile studio two photoplays are in the making in which clipper ships and weather-beaten schooners are used. One of these, "The Yankee Clipper," stars William Boyd and Elinor Fair, with Rupert Julian directing; the other, "The Cruise of the Jasper B," is the latest starring vehicle for Rod La Rocque.

Other studios are busily engaged in making pictures that have to do with the romance of the sea, and a new era of prosperity has dawned for the "old salts" who had been driven to dry land by the mechanical perfection of the modern ships.

A new production peak was reached at Warner Bros.' west coast studio the day following Labor day, when three new pictures got under way. This maintains the production schedule as originally mapped by Jack L. Warner last spring. The new pictures that went into work are the Syd Chaplin starring vehicle, "The Missing Link," Rin-Tin-Tin, the dog star in "While London Sleeps," and "The Third Degree," with Dolores Costello. A fourth production, "Mama

"Camille" Again.

TWO major film stars, Norma Talmadge and Pola Negri, have announced intentions to appear in modernized versions of "Camille" this season — announcements which should, I regret to say, be greeted with general apathy.

There is no story that has had more extensive treatment on the screen than this aged throbber. When the son of Alexander Dumas wrote it, he all unconsciously composed the perfect ham movie plot. Had he waited a matter of some 75 years, he would have made an incalculable fortune from the films.

It is impossible to say just how many slight variations of "Camille" have appeared on the screens. There must have been thousands of them. I can remember several instances in recent years, including Pola Negri in "The Red Peacock" (made in Germany under Lubitsch's direction), Barbara La Mar in "The Heart of a Siren" and Nazimova in one that was actually called "Camille," with Rudolph Valentino as Armand.

Indeed, repetitions of this theme have been almost as frequent as repetitions of the pun (originated by Oliver Hereford) about walking a mile for a Camille.

The desire of any emotional actress to play Camille is a pretty sure sign of senility. It means that she has run out of new emotions and is compelled to retreat to the old ones.

Personally, I hope that Miss Talmadge and Miss Negri will change their minds.

Foreign Importations.

Next week Emil Jannings arrives on these shores to add one stalwart figure to the already tremendous foreign population of Hollywood.

This is another evidence of the encouraging fact that our movie producers—manifold as their stupidities may be—are hospitable to foreign talent. Those abroad, and particularly in England, who object so strenuously to American films, should recognize this hospitality; we are at least open to new ideas, ready to reflect new points of view.

As a matter of fact, our so-called 100 per cent American motion pictures are prepared largely by people who are not Americans at all—nor do I say this in a spirit of complaint. The introduction of new blood into the arteries of Hollywood makes for greater healthiness.

From Central Europe we have imported Ernst Lubitsch, Erich von Stroheim, Pola Negri, F. W. Murnau, E. A. Dupont, Lya de Putti, Conrad Veidt, Dimitri Buchowetzki and Vilma Banky.

From the Scandinavian countries Victor Seastrom, Svend Gade, Lars Hanson, Greta Garbo, Anna Q. Nilsson, Greta Nissen, Sigrid Holmquist, Benjamin Christiansen and Einar Hanson.

From Italy, Rudolph Valentino and, it need hardly be added, Bull Montana.

From France, Maurice Tourneur, Arlette Marchal, Renee Adoree and Jetta Goudal.

From Mexico, Ramon Novarro and Dolores del Rio.

From Canada, Mary Pickford and Norma Shearer.

From Australia, Dorothy Mackaill and Enid Bennett.

Great Britain, whence come most of the vehement protests against American propaganda on the screen, has furnished us with an incredible large number of directors and stars, including Charlie Chaplin, Ronald Colman, Donald Crisp, Ernest Torrence, Victor MacLaglen, Rex Ingram, Conway Tearle Percy Marmont, Reginald Denny and H. B. Warner, among many others.

When Samuel Goldwyn came to produce that strictly American epic "The Winning of Barbara Worth," he selected an Englishman (Ronald Colman) to play the young American engineer, and an Austrian (Vilma Banky) as the pure American heroine. When Herbert Brenon was casting about for a perfect type of American private soldier for "Beau Geste," he picked Victor MacLaglen, formerly a major in His Majesty's Imperial forces.

Hollywood, in itself, is almost a fulfillment of the ideals that inspired the League of Nations. Hollywood knows no frontiers. It is a hybrid community, in which all varieties of races and creeds may successfully be merged into one strange but cohesive mass.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Clara Bow is engaged to Victor Fleming. . . Richard Barthelmess is very attentive to his former wife, Mary Hay. . . Constance Talmadge affirms stoutly that her recent marriage has turned out beautifully. . . Lew Cody and Mabel Normand are honeymooning. . . Romance is flourishing. . . But whatever became of the Bebe Daniels-Charles Paddock engagement?

Olga Nethersole Returns After 25 Years and Finds Her Sapho Would Be Prudish Now

Actress Was Denounced and Arrested in New York in the Nice Nineties for Part in Play That Would Be Tame Today.

By ALICE HUGHES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

THE vampire roles of Alla Nazimova, Florence Reed and Lenore Ulric are as "pink trying to be purple" compared to the world-famous courtesan parts Olga Nethersole has portrayed in her twenty-five years of acting, both here in America, and in England, her native country. She has recently come to New York, en route for Washington, as a delegate of the British League of Health, to the conference of the International Union Against Tuberculosis. This work, with which Miss Nethersole has busied herself exclusively since the World War, is many, many steps removed from the roles of "The Classical Sinner," "Mary Magdalene," "Frou Frou," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "Sapho," "Zaza," "Carmen," "Magda," "La Dame Aux Camelias," and others which Miss Nethersole created or acted in, during a period in America when a kiss on the mouth was considered an indecency, and the outline of a lady's bloomers, visible through the diaphanous tissue of her skirts, a flagrant offense against pure womanhood.

Comstockian Critics Raged at "Sapho."

A Comstockian era flourished during the mauve and moral nineties. The "Sapho" arrest and trial occupied front page space and disturbed the sedate make-up of the newspapers for months and months. Critics raged and attacked the play artistically, dramatically and morally. Some of the same critics have since written and produced sex plays that make the "up-the-stairs" scene in "Sapho" look like a dramatized episode from the Elsie Dinsmore series by comparison. Every one in the play was slandered and villified, from Olga Nethersole and her leading man, Hamilton Revelle, to the most minor character, whose child was discharged from a school for girls up along the Hudson, because mothers of other students had seen the play in which he had a line or two, and considered his daughter an unfit companion for their children.

Throughout it all, Miss Nethersole pioneered for the ethical and emotional value of Daudet's play. With a great deal of patience, toleration and dignity, she stood trial and insults, threats and epithets spewed up by the muck-mongers of the era, and was finally acquitted. Thomas Beer's account of the "Sapho" affair is admirably told and condensed in "The Mauve Decade," and follows:

Clothes Too Thin, Plaint of Reviewer.

"On Feb. 5, 1900, a version of "Sapho" was produced at Wallack's Theater, New York. Clyde Fitch had softened the tale carefully. Fanny Legrand was no longer a woman on the edge of age, hunting a lover, but a goddess, applauded as she came down a staircase, to music, by the guests of the masked ball. Miss Olga Nethersole, the English actress who appeared as Fanny, had already pained William Winter by kissing actors on the mouth in 'Carmen,' and now there rose a scandal when she permitted her leading man, an excellent amateur photographer, to lug her bodily up winding stairs to a theoretic bedroom at the end of the first act. The curtain fell for a minute, and then Jean Gaussin was shown descending in the light of dawn to a twitter of zinc birds in the wings. Horrible noises ensued. Miss Nethersole was bullied by the press and arraigned in court for indecency. A committee of gentlewomen gathered at the house of Mrs. William Sonntag and hastily wrote a petition to the Mayor of New York alleging that 'the version of this drama is in no respect obscene, and is, in fact, milder than the novel itself, which has had free circulation in the United States. Miss Nethersole's performance is entirely proper and restrained. . . . It is derogatory of the public intelligence that a celebrated work of art should be altered or expurgated. . . . Since this prosecution has been asked in the name of American women, we find it necessary to protest.' The petition was circulated for two days and signed by suffragists, writers and women of the smart world. The prosecution had already become silly. Miss Nethersole was acquitted; the play went on. Ladies stormed the theater. William Winter was horribly upset." . . .

A few excerpts from reviews of the play in 1900 follow: "Olga Nethersole acted her part with feline grace, but the play itself is disappointing and valueless. Miss Nethersole's clothes are too diaphanous, and she makes herself too physically attractive."

William Winter, critic of the New York Tribune, wrote the following review, quoted from Mark Sullivan's Our Times: "It is not necessary to soil the columns of this paper with a particular account of the sickly sentimentality of Mr. Daudet's book or the reeking compost of filth and folly that the crude and frivolous Mr. Clyde Fitch has dug out of it, with which to mire the stage. It is enough to say that this heavy and foul rigmarole of lust, sap-headed sentiment and putrid nonsense tells a vulgar, commonplace and tiresome story about a harlot and a fool, showing how, in a carnal way, they fascinated each other; how the fool clove to his folly, and how the harlot, having bamboozled the fool, went away with a criminal rogue just out of prison. Into details of the relations between these cattle those commentators may enter who have a taste for muck and who can deliver expert opinions upon it."

Of particular interest is the report of Alan Dale, dramatic critic for the New York American, who wrote in his review of "Sapho": "It is a cold-blooded bid for the sensual approval of foolish people, and is merely put together to cause a few spasms of disgust." Since then, in 1918, this same Alan Dale wrote a play called "The Madonna of the Future," a sexy play cited as "a gratuitous insult to millions of citizens." It lasted a few weeks in New York, and was then removed by order of the court, as being "fit for the stable, not the stage."

Savage Cartoons Appeared in the World.

The New York World ran two cartoons depicting the grossness and lewdness of "Sapho," in the form of a bestial-appearing chimpanzee seated in the front row of the theater viewing a performance of the play. He holds a pair of opera glasses in one paw, and is saying, "Who Said It Was Immoral?" Another cartoon has merely the three titles, "Camille," "Zaza" and "Sapho," emblazoned on a billboard, and under each name, respectively, are "Bad!" "Worse!" and "Worst!"

At New Haven the theater managers were not unwilling to let the play proceed (box office receipts were so good) if only Miss Nethersole would consent to walk, instead of being carried up those degrading, sin-inciting stairs. Particularly at the point where they reach the top, and poor, sick Fanny Legrand breathes, "so soon?" and Jean Gaussin, her lover replies, "At last!" the blood of the nineties curdled and leaped and demanded that these revolting lines be cut out of the play.

Among those who were fervid in urging the suppression of "Sapho" were Arthur Brisbane, Dr. W. T. Ettinger, president of the Board of Education; Samuel Untermeyer, Harriet Hubbard Ayer and others. The World virtually started and fostered the fight against "Sapho," and Miss Nethersole has not forgotten that.

It is amusing to contemplate the growth in toleration, from the timid times of 1900, when every one urged pure and passionless drama, to the sex-fraught stage of 1926. Would there have been all that needless energy consumed in halting "Sapho," could the city fathers then have forseen the advent of "Rain," "Fata Morgana," "Lulu Belle," "Desire Under the Elms," "Sex," "They Knew What They Wanted?"

What would William Winter have said of "White Cargo," and "The Shanghai Gesture," if "Sapho" invoked the following invective from him: "It seems incredible! Here are contemptible persons, gross proceedings, foul suggestions, impure pictures and through all, a purulent stream of mawkish cant about the moral lesson which it is alleged can be derived from the inspection of its garbage. . . These tainted plays emanate largely from weak sisters of the male sex, or of no sex at all, emasculated puppies, suckling collegians and the like, trying to cut the eye-teeth of knowledge on the coral of irresponsible newspaper criticism."

Still a Fighter for Her Standards.

Olga Nethersole is now not a vastly different person from the valiant young actress who championed the cause of the woman sinner. She is 26 years older, but she has lost none of the rugged fervor with which she faces life. She has survived success and failure with a courage that surmounts defeat. She knows that yesterday's achievements belong to yesterday and that the things that count are of today and tomorrow. Her standards are high and ever changeful, allowing for experience and growth.

There is nothing superficial about her. Her literary diet has been a rugged one, including devoted study of Locke, Hume, Spencer, Reid, Kant, Berkeley, Plato, Socrates and Aristotle. The Michael Arlens of her day and this, do not interest her. She was never a wondrous beauty. Her light brown hair, almost auburn, seems untouched with gray, and she has never thought of bobbing it.

LACE CURTAINS FOR PALACE

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Queen Mary has fitted all the rooms of Sandringham Palace with Nottingham lace curtains and also has provided many of the beds in the famous palace with Nottingham lace spreads. This has come as something of a shock to decorators.

In doing over the old home of the late Queen Alexandra, a free sweep to her own taste has been taken by Queen Mary. The palace was somewhat gloomy with dark hangings and furniture. The Queen has banished this gloom entirely and given a very bright, homey appearance to the palace. It was filled with many gifts and trophies of most sentimental value to the late Queen, but most of these were removed from the living rooms if they failed to conform with the simpler style of decoration Queen Mary selected.

Kiss Papa," is now well advanced, having been started Aug. 13.

June Mathis, First National producer and scenarist, has completed the initial adaptation-script of "Here Y'Are, Brother," the Dixie Wilsson story which she will produce at the Burbank studios starting early next month, with Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes in the leading roles.

Fox Films has purchased the screen rights of Elliott Lester's play, "The Mud Turtle," which ran last season in New York, according to an announcement by Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president of the company.

Billy Butts, juvenile actor, who has been playing with Thomas Meighan in his current production, "The Canadian," is en route home to Hollywood, following a six weeks' engagement with the star. Master Butts has traveled more than 10,000 miles to and from "locations" during this period and has visited cities from Calgary, Canada, to New York.

Dorothy Gish, who has just finished "Tip-Toes" in London, for release by Paramount, has arrived back home for a flying visit to her mother and sister, Lillian, in California, before starting on the lavish picturization of "Madame Pompadour," which will be filmed in London immediately after her return. The latter picture also will be distributed by Paramount.

Estelle Taylor has been engaged to play in "New York," a Paramount picture to be directed by Luther Reed at the Long Island studio. Work is to be started soon. "New York" is a story by Barbara Chambers and Forrest Halsey. The screen adaptation was done by Mr. Halsey.

The other featured players are Ricardo Cortez, Lois Wilson, Mary Alden an William Powell.

Emil Jannings will sail from Germany October 8, to work in America under his contract with Paramount.

Christy Cabanne—of the St. Louis Cabannes—will direct "Frisco Sal," a comedy-drama, for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which features Pauline Starke and Owen Moore.

William Fox Productions will offer one of the season's biggest pictures in "Three Bad Men," a story of the winning of the West, produced on a scale comparable to "The Covered Wagon" and "The Iron Horse." Featured in it are George O'Brien, Olive Borden, Thomas Santschi, G. Farrell MacDonald, Frank Cambeau, Lou Tellegen and Phyllis Haver.

Quaint carriages, brought from Vienna and Berlin, are giving traffic congestion in Hollywood a new twist. The carriages, with European coats-of-arms and drawn by dashing horses with silver-trimmed harness figure in the Central European street scenes of Henry Sudermann's story, "The Undying Past," which Clarence Brown is filming under the title of "The Flesh and the Devil." John Gilbert and Greta Garbo star in it.

HEAVY IMPORTS OF FOREIGN PLAYS FOR AMERICAN STAGE

am; "All Our Yesterdays," by C. K. Munroe; "What Fun Frenchman Have," by Michael Arlen; "The Constant Nymph," by Basil Dean; "Scotch Mist," by Sir Patrick Hastings; "The Letter," by Somerset Maughan. There will be a dozen others.

Reform Berlin Revues.

THE German capital which next to Paris and Vienna has a reputation for daring revues, has decided to reform. The reform was started by producers themselves.

Erik Charell, whose new follies is "From Mouth to Mouth," said that Erika Glaessner, famous for posing in the nude, talked him into the idea of putting clothes on all the girls "just for once." But Charell thinks the fad is not going to last out the season. Two Americans, Alma Barnes and Louis Douglas, are among the headliners.

Hauptmann Leads.

GERHART HAUPTMANN holds the limelight among modern German playwrights on the stage this season with three plays, one of which "The Rats" has started a run in Berlin. "Dorothea Angermann," a tragedy which aroused interest several months ago because five producers bought the rights without having read the manuscript, will have simultaneous premieres in 10 cities the end of October. The music for "And Pippa Dances," a fairy tale, was written by Bruno Hartl, musical director of the Frankfort Municipal Opera.

Protect Dancing Girls.

FIVE pounds sterling per week and a return ticket from Berlin to London is the minimum required of a German theatrical producer for engaging an English dancing girl for his revue. The British Government insists that a British girl may have a passport to Germany only if she can show a contract for £5 or more weekly, and if the equivalent of a return ticket has been deposited with a London bank.

Public School Patrons' Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the St. Louis Public School Patrons' Allance will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening in the assembly room of the Board of Education Building. L. W. Shackleford, head of the Community Relations Department of the Board of Education, will tell of the operation of his department which is newly organized.

hunted HIM up after the performance to say "she can teach them ALL distinction."

DESPITE a dozen new productions during the past week, the estate of the American drama remains about as it was at the time of my last communication. To be sure, there is progress to report in one odd phenomenon of the new freedom, and I trust that in reporting it, I shall not, by the faintest flicker of an eyelash, betray whether this progress fills me with chagrin and disapprobation or with a deep, unregenerate satisfaction.

One fine old English word, long banned from the newspapers and never heard in what used to be easily classifiable as polite conversation, has suddenly made its reappearance on the stage. I hesitate to reproduce it in so far-flung a dispatch as this one, a hesitation which cramps me fearfully every time one of our little side-street theaters proposes a revival of that classic comedy which Master John Ford wrote for Drury Lane 300 years ago when our English speech was less prissy than it later became.

HERE the interest for the onlooking naturalist lies in the fact that this word (which I had never heard spoken on the stage except under the conditions of sanctuary which prevail only if some heroic company undertakes to produce Shakspeare hook, line and sinker) when finally it did raise its ugly head in the modern drama, broke out like an epidemic.

In three plays produced here in Gomorrah within the space of five nights, it was fairly roared at the audience. We heard it Thursday in "Red Blinds," a cheap and faintly scandalous drama written by young Lord Lathom, whose title was flourished in the program here in somewhat the same fashion that the Hope diamond used to be dangled before gaping American vaudeville audiences a score of years ago. It was then suffered to reverberate through the plush poetry of Mr. Hampden's premiere two evenings later. Then on Monday of this week one heard it over and above the sob of the violins at "Deep River."

Now it is preposterous to suggest that Brother Hampden had stationed a spy in the auditorium of Maxine Elliott's pretty theater on the first night of "Red Blinds," a scout, who, on noting that the long forbidden word split the local welkin, not once but several times, without so much as a single old lady in the audience swooning away or a single busybody summoning the police, hurried to the telephone, rang up Mr. Hampden and cried "Boss, it's all right. Go as far as you like."

Indeed, I relate the circumstance only to suggest how mutable is taste, how imperceptible its workings, how swift its tide. If you would measure that tide, consider for contrast, if you will, the flurry caused in this very town less than 10 crowded years ago when, in the climax and crisis of Maugham's magnificent "Our Betters," a ruffianly fellow in that bitter comedy glared at the central feminine figure of the play and, with some heat and no little accuracy, hissed, as the slow curtain fell, "You slut." At that comparatively mild monosyllable whole rows of drama-lovers went white and there was worried speculation between the acts as to whether the producer would be hanged next day at sunrise or merely clapped into a dungeon. But that was way back in 1917.

WHEN, shortly after the war, the present flow of the tide set in, that sagacious oldtimer among the first-nighters, Kelcey Allen, who writes critiques on the drama for the enchanted readers of "Women's Wear," solemnly drew up a list of three unprintable epithets and announced to his friends that when these were spoken from a New York stage he, personally, was going to retire.

At the time this seemed to leave undisturbed the pleasant prospect of Mr. Allen's dying during a premiere (of old age, I hasten to add) and being buried direct from the theater. Of late he has been looking a trifle worried, as though haunted by the vision of having to begin, ere long, a pastoral retirement.

IN "The Immortal Thief," a pretentious piece of claptrap which has just launched the season at Hampden's Theater, Walter Hampden has, I suspect, come something resembling a cropper. The play's best chance is with that vast audience which simply adored "The Sign of the Cross" and which, for so many seasons, clasped "Ben Hur" to its ample bosom. It is possible that this audience, if now not too infirm to go out at nights, will rally to the support of "The Immortal Thief." As a play for his own repertory, fit company for "Hamlet" and "Cyrano de Bergerac," the piece is beneath contempt.

"The Immortal Thief" is a tragedy in seven scenes, of which the last is, in the program, designated merely as "A Hilltop." That hill is Golgotha. For this play, starting in an underground thieves' den in old Jerusalem, fabricates a history to fit that nameless vagabond now remembered across the centuries because, in his last agony, it was pledged to him that he would be that night in Paradise.

The final scene, effectively, simply mounted, reveals, in those moments when the ominous lightning flares up on the storm-mantled hilltop, the cross on which the thief is nailed. From the wings an actor (shaking in his boots, I fancy) tries to send forth a voice that would suggest the voice of the crucified Messiah, but, as so often on these disastrous occasions, the voice comes out fairly reeking with the accents of professional benevolence. In the title role Mr. Hampden leaves something to be desired. I am not sure what. John Barrymore, perhaps.

GERMAN DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY TURNS TO MOVIES AS CARER

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—From doctor of philosophy with her major thesis the history of art, to a movie star, is the career of Anneliese Ullhorn, of Wiesbaden. Her screen name is Christa Tordy.

Christa's cousin, Mady Christians, is a popular film actress. Christa acted as Mady's secretary when she was a student at Berlin. Christa, after leaving Berlin University, attended Breslau University, where she passed her doctor's degree three months ago at the age of 22.

When she returned to Berlin, Christa, through the efforts of Mady, was starred in "His Big Case," a detective story, the film of which was released with the International Police exposition now going on in Berlin. Christa's father is a wealthy manufacturer of chemicals. Her late uncle, Rudolf Christians, was one of the leading actors in former Emperor Williams' court theater.

LOSES 100,000 GOLDFISH

Dealer Believes Rival Caused Them to Be Poisoned.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Henry Gay is mourning the loss of his goldfish—not one, but 100,000. Gay deals in goldfish. A consignment of 125,000, all in good health, was received by him. Two men who asserted they were interested in goldfish called to see them. After they had gone, Gay went to dinner. Returning some time afterward he found the fish were dying by thousands. Although the water was changed, very few recovered. Gay says he believes one of the men acting for a competitor in trade put poison into the tanks.

MARKET STREET AT

In order that the readers of Post-Dispatch may know the tails regarding this $4,000,000 ture epic, we are printing column of facts:

"Ben Hur," in all mighty gorgeousness, open a limited engage at the AMERICAN THEA TER tonight with matinees thereafter — matinees will be at 2:30 the evening performance will be at 8:30.

This novel, written General Lew Wallace 1880, has been a best for forty-five years.

Translated into ten ferent languages and first novel to be translated into Arabic.

Dramatized and first produced November 29th, 18

Played largest cities twenty - two consecutive years.

Screen version has been three years in the making.

One year and a half in Rome on historical and another year and a half filming scenes at Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer Studios, Culver City, Cal.

Film premier December 30th, 1925, at the George M. Cohan Theater, New York— now twelve companies playing principal cities in United States.

150,000 people employed in picture—100,000 in Antioch Chariot Race alone.

One hundred ships built and launched for the sea fights between the Roman and pirate navies.

Jerusalem restored for important sequences in story—Procession of Roman Power—Triumph of Arrius —Grove of Palms—The Court of Pilate.

Reverent picturization of history's mightiest events.

1,900,000 feet of negative exposed and 850,000 feet of positive printed.

Forty cameras were used to film the scenes in the arena, which is 1500 feet long. This was the biggest set ever erected on any studio "lot" in the history of filmdom.

BEN HUR is a picture of superlatives—a picture for big words and bold words— extravagant words and words with meaning, words with some power to convey on paper the immensity of the whole thing—the dash of the chariot races; the poignancy of the love story, the eloquence of the outstretched hands of Jesus of Nazareth; the gentleness of the strong, virile and dashing "Ben Hur"; the majestic beauty of the Three Wise Men. These are the things and many more which make "BEN HUR" a piece of fiction which has its basis in truth; its theme in religion and its plot filled with a sequence of dramatic incidents such as no story before or after has equaled. In all frankness and honesty it can be announced as the finest film ever made, the finest in the sense that it will reach the greatest audience. Catholic, Jew, Methodist, Episcopalian, Syrian, Quaker, Agnostic, Atheist— all will flock to this superfilm.

For some it will be a religious pilgrimage; for others it will be a magnificent spectacle: for others it will be an exhibition of the magic of picturedom.

Bewildered eyes will blink as [illegible] impressive scene is flashed [illegible] them—the gleam of thousands of [illegible] in the market place; [illegible] the three wise men over the [illegible] desert; galley slaves [illegible] perspiring; warriors [illegible] crippled triremes into a sea [illegible] black with human bodies; [illegible] maidens showering petals [illegible] favorite athlete; the tent of the [illegible] Ilderim, shimmering with [illegible] the beauty of the technicolor [illegible] tations; the crumbling of the [illegible] Justice onto milling thousands [illegible] loose-robe figures below and the [illegible] cast lepers in the Vale of [illegible] To record them all would be like [illegible] count the grains inside a [illegible] but of all the scenes—the most [illegible] and intense, the most ambitious [illegible] electrifying is the Chariot Race of Antioch which will go down in [illegible] picture history as one of its [illegible] markable achievements.

The cast is a faultless [illegible] by Ramon Navarro in the title [illegible] Francis X. MORE GERMANS EARNTING LIVING THAN BEFORE WAR

2,000,000 Now Employed; Inflation of Mark Wiped Out Class That Had Incomes.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—The German people are working today as never before. Approximately 2,000,000 more persons are earning their living than before the war, notwithstanding the fact that 1,600,000 unemployed are supported by doles, and despite the tremendous reduction in the standing army.

Where 50 per cent of the entire population was employed in gainful pursuits in 1913, Government reports show more than 72 per cent so employed today. Yet the per capita income is only $200 a year.

The great middle class, whose income from investments enabled it to live comfortably without working before the war, was virtually wiped out by the inflation of the mark. Daughters and sons of army officers, owners of landed estates and others who thought it beneath their dignity to work, have now been forced to help support their families. But even now there there are 647 men for every new job open to men, and 424 women for every job in which women are wanted.

City-County Merger Debate.

Henry S. Caulfield and Arthur V. Lashly will debate the city-county merger proposal at an open meeting of Red Cross Lodge, Knights of Pythias, at the Triple Link Building, 3765 Lindell boulevard, at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday. Caulfield, who is chairman of the Board of Freeholders, will take the affirmative and Lashly, who was a county member of theb oard, the negative. Lashly will speak on the "County Side of the Consolidation Controversy" at a meeting of the St. Louis Traffic Club at the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow noon.

WABASH SPENT $17,000,000 ON IMPROVEMENTS THIS YEAR

Re-ballasted 267 Miles of Roadbed and Laid 20,000 Tons of New Steels Rails.

Approximately 267 miles of road bed was re-ballasted, 20,000 tons of new steel rails laid and 1,000,000 ties replaced on the lines of the Wabahs railroad between Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City this summer, by a crew of 1000 men, according to J. E. Taussig of the system. .. ..

The rails, each 39 fet long and weighing 110 pounds, replace the 33-foot rails. The ties were creosoted and heavy rock replaced light rock in re-ballasting. Orders have been placed for an additional 20,000 tons of 110-pound rails to be laid next summer.

New locomotives and freight and passenger cars have been purchased to care for increasing business. The total cost of the improvements was $17,000,000.

CHOKES ACTRESS, SAVES SHOW

Leading Man Uses Wits When Revolver Fails to Discharge.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Michael Hogan had to do some very quick thinking recently to keep a performance of Dostoevski's "The Idiot," at the Little Theater, from going to pieces when the revolver with which he was supposed to kill the heroine failed to go off. Improvising the line, "I can't do it," he threw the weapon away and choked the heroine to death so realistically that persons in the audience who were not familiar with the play did not realize there was a hitch in action.

Stella Arbenina, who was acting the role of the murdered heroine, was frightened. "Before I knew what was going on I found myself on my knees screaming and Hogan was clutching at my throat in a way that made me think he was mad. My throat is still sore, but it is wonderful that he was able to save the scene," she said.

FRANCE DOMINANT NATION OF EUROPE IN AVIATION GAINS

Vast Aerial Service Run at Loss, but Subsidized by Government as War Auxiliary.

NINE BIG LINES NOW ARE IN OPERATION

Companies Can Muster 200 Planes, Fewer Than Germans, but They Are Larger and Faster.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1926.)

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Just as in military affairs, France in respect to international aviation is the dominant country in Europe.

Of the great network of international airlines most are French or French controlled. Of the 112,000 passengers carried in airplanes in Europe last year more than 70,000, according to reliable statistics, rode in French machines. It is true that France, so far as international services are concerned, is considerably behind Germany. But in air communication between various countries she stands first.

There are nine French lines in operation. The most important of them are:

1. The Air Union. This is the company which operates the cross-channel Paris-London service. It is the busiest line in Europe. On some days this summer it sent out as many as 14 planes, carrying a total of about 200 passengers. The Air Union also operates a fast, cheap service to Brussels.

2. The Compagnie Internationale de Navigation Aerienne. This is the service to the Balkans and Constantinople via Strassburg, Zurich, Vienna and Budapest—the great trunk line between Paris and Eastern Europe. It owns about 20 planes, most of them large, multi-motored machines of new type. The Eastern service is triweekly. The connection with Constantinople, one must add, has several times been interrupted this summer.

3. Lignes Aeriennes Latecoere. This is the service linking up Paris with her North African colonies. The planes leave from Toulouse and serve Casablanca, Malaga, Alcante, Oran, Algiers, Tangier, with a byweekly passenger and mail service. Once a week a plane continues to Dakar in Seengal.

4. The Farman lines. This is the regular Paris-Brussels-Amsterdam route, and also the service Paris-Cologne-Berlin.

Minor French Services.

In addition there are minor French services, from Antibes to Corsica and Tunis, from Paris to Basel, from Lyon to Zurich and from Toulouse to Perpignan and Marseilles. All told, the French companies, according to available statistics, muster more than 200 planes. There are more German commercial planes at present operating, but the French planes are in general bigger and faster.

It is said that the French companies carried over a million kilograms of freight in 1925, about 70,000 passengers and 900,000 sacks of mail, but accurate statistics are not available. The foregoing figures are probably exaggerated. All of the lines, of course, are subsidized and run at a loss. The cost to the French treasury last year is put by Dr Earl, aviation expert, in his recent articles, at 77,000,000 francs.

FRANCE DOMINANT NATION OF EUROPE IN AVIATION GAINS

In England commercial aviation also is subsidized and in general is directed pretty largely toward eventual service as means of communication for the British empire. There are no lines between English cities. The only regular commercial service in England is that between London, Paris and Brussels, operated by the Imperial Airways.

This organization is a government supervised company which took over the several competing British civil air services several years ago. It is capitalized at £1,000,000 sterling, and is in receipt of a subsidy from the government which averages £100,000 sterling per year. Its cross-channel services are efficient and popular, operated by new multiengined Handley-Page or Vickers machines.

But the operation of this single company is far from expressing the interest of the present British government in aviation. As a matter of fact, the cross-channel service is something of a toy—albeit a healthy and growing toy—and the main part of British money and British brains invested in aviation is directed toward much bigger game.

One Object, Communication.

Commercial aviation in England may be said, roughly, to have only one real object—as a means of intercommunication, whether in peace or war, for the whole of the Birtish empire. And it is in connection with this immense project or series of projects, that most of the real activity takes place.

Most of that activity is concealed. It is occurring not at the joystick of a plane but in offices in Whitehall. There experts of air ministry and admirality have been engaged steadily, unceasingly, studying air currents and posts of supply and weather charts, plotting routes, analyzing courses, weighing men and money and machines, preparing for that great day when the first London-Egypt service goes into effect, and then the London-Calcutta-Bombay service, and then, finally, that service which, as an ultimate dream, will link up London and Australia.

Of course, these plans take manifest form, every once in a while. There have been three recently. Each was a very remarkable flight by a British aviator in a British machine—a romantic flight over unpathed deserts, angry seas, through hurricanes and monsoons—a flight for a single purpose, to wit, to chart the British empire by air. One of the three flights was from London to Rangoon and back, via Karachi. The second was from London to the Cape of Good Hope and back, via Cairo. The third was a round trip flight, by seaplane, to Australia. The aviator in each case is the same—a sunburned, modest youngster, Sir Alan Cobham, surely one of the most remarkable of modern adventurers.

According to information assembled by Constantine Brown, London correspondent of The Chicago Daily News, the air ministry has decided despite the success of Cobham's flights, that dirigibles rather than airplanes are more practicable for long-distance empire flying. At any rate, two enormous dirigibles, each twice as big as the ill-fated American Shenandoah, will be built next year.

EXPOSITION OF WORK OF BLIND PERSONS

Household Articles Also to Be Sold for Their Benefit During Display.

What a blind person can do under proper training to earn a livelihood and to make something of use to others will be shown at an exposition this week under the auspices of the Missouri Commission for the Blind.

The Famous & Barr department store has given counter space on its third floor for the exposition. There will be displayed and offered for sale the handiwork of blind persons, the proceeds to go to the blind. The show will be from Oct. 11 to 19, inclusive.

Most Difficult Problem.

"Our most difficult problem is the education of the public to the belief that the blind are capable of producing," Miss Audrey M. Hayden, executive secretary of the Missouri Commission for the Blind, said. "Many of our citizens would rather put money into the tin cup of a beggar than encourage the self-respecting, ambitious blind who want to help themselves more than anything else in the world."

The commission is trying to sell products of the blind on their merits, whether a 10-cent dish towel or a $100 set of porch furniture. It concentrates on the manufacture of household supplies such as brooms, brushes, mops, dusters, dish cloths, aprons, tea towels, glass towels. All articles at the exposition were made by the blind and practically all the workers have been taught by the blind teachers of the commission.

An example of the trained blind worker is John S. Miller of 1356A Semple avenue, who will give demonstrations in reed work at the exposition Friday and Saturday. Miller, now 62 years old, was a stationary engineer until he lost his sight eight years ago. Then he took up reed work as a vocation and specialized in fibre furniture making. He now is instructor in that work for the Missouri School for the Blind.

Sales at Exposition.

Sales at the exposition will be under the supervision of Miss Adeline Ruenzi, assistant executive secretary and head home teacher of the Missouri Commission, and Mrs. Harry Haas, State director of home work for the blind, with the following organizations in charge: Junior League, Monday; Woman's Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday; Catholic Women's Alumnae, Wednesday to Thursday noon; Council of Jewish Women, Thursday afternoon and Friday; Phi Mu Sorority of Washington University, Saturday.

MORRIS PLAN BANKERS FROM WEST TO VISIT CITY FRIDAY

Chief executives of western Morris Plan banks will be visitors in St. Louis Friday. While here they will inspect the new quarters of the Industrial Savings Trust Co. and Industrial Loan Co. The party will leave the following morning on a special car for Asheville, N. C., to attend the annual convention of the Morris Plan Bankers' Association, Oct. 18, 19, 20. A. A. Blumeyer, president of the Industrial Savings Trust Co., and R. O. Bonnell, first vice president, will join the party as St. Louis delegates.

Blumeyer is a member of the Program Committee and Bonnell is chairman of the Sectional Associations Committee. Bonnell will address the convention on "Sectional Associations." Morris Plan banks are operating in 115 cities.

Mexico's New Law for Visitors.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 9.—No foreigner will be allowed to enter Mexico after Nov. 1, unless he is provided with a personal identification card. This order makes effective Article 15 of the recently passed immigration law. The personal identification cards will be issued by migration agents on the payment of a small fee and the production of four passport photographs by the applicant. Foreigners intending to visit Mexico will be able to obtain cards from Mexican consuls abroad.

FUND DRIVE FOR NEW HOSPITAL TO CLOSE TOMORROW

Permanent Committee Will Continue Until Total Set for Deaconess Structure Is Reached.

HALF EXPECTED BY END OF CAMPAIGN

Many Volunteer to Keep at Task; Kiel Again Outlines Necessity of New Building.

The Deaconess Hospital Building Fund campaign will close at noon tomorrow, when workers will meet at luncheon at the City Club to make final reports. It is expected that subscriptions will exceed $350,000, or more than half of the $700,000 required for the proposed new building at Oakland and Clayton avenues.

A permanent Building Fund Committee will be selected to carry on the work of soliciting pledges to the building fund until the total is subscribed. They propose to canvass new prospects and keep in touch with business concerns and individuals that have promised to sign pledges later in the year.

Many of the workers, particularly of the women's divisions, have volunteered to continue the work.

Hospital Needs Outlined.

Former Mayor Kiel, general campaign chairman, in a final appeal issued yesterday, gave as the four most important reasons for the new hospital that the present hospital at 4125 West Belle place is not large enough; that the obsolete style of construction does not lend itself to the building of additions; that the deaconesses must have better, roomier living quarters, and that the patients require more congenial surroundings and better service than the present institution offers.

He continued in part:

"The Deaconess hospital has been serving the community for 37 years. In that time more than 48,000 patients have been cared for through its facilities. Its doors have been open to all people in distress, regardless of religious affiliation. During 1925, for example, of a total of 2791 patients, only 736, or about 26.4 per cent, were of the Evangelical faith. The remainder represented more than a dozen other Protestant denominations, and also included 568 of the Catholic, and 61 of the Jewish faiths.

Justifies Its Existence.

"Thus it justified its existence in a large sense, as a community hospital, doing its full share in the conservation of the health of the entire city.

"This effort has the indorsement of the St. Louis Medical Society, the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, the Metropolitan Church Federation of St. Louis, 39 Evangelical churches in St. Louis and St. Louis County, the Associated Retailers of St. Louis, the city administration, A. L. Shapleigh, president, the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association; the Evangelical Pastors' Circle, the Federation of Evangelical Women's Organizations; the Evangelical Brotherhood and the Rev. J. Baltzer, president of the Evangelical Synod of North America.

"The amount sought, $700,000, is very modest when it is considered that it means less than $1 per capita in St. Louis alone—and payable over a period of three years at that. Of course, it is impossible to reach every man, woman and child in St. Louis; and there are many who will not contribute. But there are enough civic-minded people in the city, if they could only be reached, who can afford the few cents a day it would mean, to create this fund, and more."

BRITISH MOVIE ANSWERS 'BIG PARADE'S' PEACE PLEA

Army Council Co-operates in Preparing "Mons," an Epic of the Great Retreat.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—British movie producers are putting more effort into their work and film fans throughout Britain are jubilant over the announcement that several British-made films of real merit are soon to be released.

"Mons" is the most notable of these. It is the British answer to "The Big Parade" and was prepared with the co-operation of the Army Council. It is an epic of the great retreat. It is the work of Walter Summers, who produced "Nelson," a story of the great naval hero, in which Gertrude McCoy plays the role of Lady Hamilton and Eric Hardwicke is Nelson. The admiralty assisted in the production.

"Mademoiselle From Armentieres" is the work of Maurice Elvey and Estelle Brody plays the role of a little French girl who is in love with a British "Tommy." The film is somewhat like "The Big Parade" but the British critics say it contains less exaggeration. "The Big Parade" is still running in London, however, in spite of the battering of critics.

An English company is filming "The Flag Lieutenant," one of Cyril Maude's great stage successes. The admiralty also is co-operating in this work, in spite of the criticism which the British press has heaped on the American army and navy for participating in popular film dramas.

RETAILERS PLAN FREE SEATING AT FALL HORSE SHOW

All of Second Balcony at Coliseum Taken Over for Public for Nov. 8 to 13 Event.

TROPHIES WILL BE NAMED FOR GIVERS

Committee Suggests Business Houses Charge Expense of This to Advertising.

Free seats for the public in all of the second balcony of the Coliseum at the autumn horse show of the St. Louis Horse Show Association, Nov. 8 to 13, will be provided by the Associated Retailers.

This organization, comprising downtown merchants, has taken over the second balcony for all performances, for a cash consideration, and will distribute the tickets in order to popularize the enterprise.

Numerous fine horses are expected to be entered for the show, which is designed not only as an amusement and a gratification to the lovers of equine beauty, but as a civic asset and a social accomplishment. The business men promoting the entertainment believe it to be of general benefit to the city.

An innovation for the St. Louis horse shows will be the naming of trophies this time in honor of firms and individuals providing them. This will connect prominent names in St. Louis with the publicity given the events. The committee in charge suggests this expense could be charged to advertising by business houses.

Among trophies already provided in this way are one named for a well known attorney, one for a large automobile agency and one for a brand of children's shoes. Entry fees and certain other funds of the show association will make up part of the trophies, so that donors will not have to provide the full sum, in each instance.

Chief classes and stakes in the show will be as follows: $1000 championship for roadsters, four prizes from $15 to $60 for gig horses, $2000 heavy harness stake, $1500 for three-gaited saddle horses, challenge cup for amateur owner's five-gaited saddle horses, to be won twice for permanent retention; $500 junior saddle stake, $250 Shetland pony championship, $1000 harness pony stake, $1500 for hunters.

In addition, there will be a large group of miscellaneous prizes, ranging from $10 to $100 and 14 miscellaneous trophy cups, for which donors may subscribe $35 each.

The manager of the show association is W. Rufus Jackson, 1508 Federal Commerce Trust Building.

EXPORTS REDUCING FRENCH OAK AND WALNUT SUPPLIES

Situation Becoming Such That Furniture Makers Have Asked Government to Take Action.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—So great is the demand foreign manufacturers have for French oak and walnut that the domestic supply is being rapidly depleted through exports. The French furniture makers' guild has asked the Government to do something to remedy the situation.

Exports of oak and walnut have risen this year to tremendous figures, the guild declares, and French manufacturers, unable to get supplies within France, have been forced to buy outside the country at foreign prices. This has resulted in increased cost of production and considerable export of capital.

Another danger, it is pointed out, is in the rapid deforestation of estates, which are being denuded of trees to swell the total of exports. Furniture manufacturers are not the only ones protesting, for walnut is used in the manufacture of stocks for guns and arms makers are feeling the shortage.

QUEEN MARIE UNABLE TO BRING HER JEWELS TO U. S.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Queen Marie of Rumania must travel to the United States without the $1,400,000 worth of jewelry, her personal property, which she had hoped to display during her sojourn in America.

The jewelry is in Moscow, where it was deposited for safekeeping during the war, when the German armies overran Rumania. It forms part of a treasure estimated to be worth about $64,000,000.

When Marshal von Mackensen entered Bucharest and the Rumanian royal family took refuge at Jassy, the Rumanian treasure was sent to Moscow, then the capital of an allied state. Negotiations for the return of the property have been going on for several years, but recently the soviet government proposed that they retain it for another 10 years.

2000 MERIT BADGES FOR ST. LOUIS SCOUTS

Presentation Will Be Made at Scottish Rite Cathedral Tuesday Night.

Approximately 2000 merit badges or awards to First-Class Boy Scouts for proficiency in various scout subjects, will be presented at the fall meeting of the St. Louis Boy Scout Court of Honor, Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, 3627 Lindell boulevard. A correspondingly large, but as yet unknown, number of Eagle, Life and Star badges, given for earning specified merit badges, also will be awarded. These badges, earned by the Scouts during the summer, either at Camp Irondale or here, constitute one of the largest totals ever awarded in St. Louis.

All scouts, parents and friends of scouts have ben invited to the ceremony, which will climax a program of entertainment given by the troops of the city. Talks on scouting, a boys' chorus, and an orchestra will appear on the program, but the most impressive event, apart from the presentation, will be an Indian dance, symbolic of the admission of a brave into a tribe, and the overcoming of the black, or evil, spirit by the white spirit.

Two Special Features.

The dancers will be some of the scouts who took part in the Indian dances at the Scout Circus last February, for which they were trained by Ralph Hubbard, son of Elbert Hubbard, and an authority on Indian dances and music. Hub-Hubbard has again loaned part of his collection of Indian costumes to the council for this dance.

The theme leading up to the dance was written by Jack Wright, North district field executive, who will also have charge of the production.

Two other special features will be the assembling of all Eagle Scouts on the platform with the court, and the presentation of certificates to scoutmasters who completed the Scoutmasters' Training School last winter.

Suggested Changes.

Because of the ever-increasing number of badges to be awarded at each succeeding Court of Honor, a change in the proceedings of the court has been proposed by local headquarters. It is suggested that the council hold but two general courts a year, one in the spring and one in the fall, and award only Eagle, Life and Star badges at these. The merit badges would be presented every month at district courts, one to a district, and under its direct charge, rather than under that of the council.

These courts would then be able to function properly as examining bodies, rather than as a group merely passing out badges as long lines of scouts file by. The awarding of the higher Eagle, Life and Star badges would be made more formal, at the general, or higher, court.

A meeting of all scoutmasters of the city and county has been called for tomorrow night at the American Annex Hotel, to discuss this proposed change, and also to complete plans for the Merit Badge Exhibit Oct. 28 to 30, and the scoutmasters' training course, starting Oct. 26.

TROOP ACTIVITIES

NORTH DISTRICT.

The third annual North District rally, barbecue and campfire, the largest event held by the district each year, will be held at Kenwood Springs Oct. 23, according to Field Executive Jack Wright. The rally, consisting of competitive contests between troops, will start at 2 o'clock, and continue until evening, when it will be succeeded by the campfire and barbecue. The contests will include tent pitching, signaling by Morse and semaphore, firemaking by flint and steel and by friction, water boiling and a "surprise" event. The troop winning the greatest number of events will be given possession for one year of the Schultz trophy, a cup which must be won three times before it may be retained permanently. Troop 33 has won the cup for two successive years.

Games and stunts around the campfire will conclude the program.

Every scoutmaster present at a meeting of the North District scoutmasters at the Sherman Park Community Center last Monday evening pledged himself to increase his troop membership by four or five scouts prior to the Merit Badge Exhibit Oct. 28, in order that all troops in the district should be brought to their full strength of 32. Scoutmasters who were not present have been urged to make the same pledge.

Troop 72 has adopted a point system for patrol accomplishment, the results of which are incorporated in a "transcontinental race." A map 15 feet long, representing a road from New York to San Francisco, divided into 30-mile stretches, has been hung in their headquarters, and each patrol has been given a racing automobile. For every 100 points won by a patrol their auto advances one mile. The first to cross will receive a prize. The Beaver patrol is leading at present, with the Eagles second and the Cobras third. The Eagle patrol won a poster contest running from Sept. 29 to Oct. 6, as sistant Patrol Leader Cozmo Cantanzoro making the best, an invitation to join the troop. The Eagles received 15 points for winning. The Cobra patrol won a "Capture the Flag" game, taught to the troop by Assistant Scoutmaster DuClos.

Thirty-one scouts, five visitors, and the scoutmaster were present at a special patrol-reorganization meeting of Troop 92 last Wednesday evening. Competitive drill and inspection followed the reorganization, the Racoon patrol winning both events, and receiving a camera as a prize from Scoutmaster Custer. Indian ball was also played, and plans formulated for an overnight hike to the Lion's Den. A vote to participate in the North District Rally Oct. 23 was passed.

Troop 162, of the Bethel Evangelical Church, held a Parents' meeting last Thursday evening, the feature of which was a number of games between the scouts and their fathers, under the supervision of L. L. Hotchkiss, Activities Director of the St. Louis Council.

West District.

Twenty-five scoutmasters of the West District attended the first fall meeting of the Diamond W troop last Monday evening at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. Dr. C. H. Westermann spoke and gave a practical demonstration of first aid, with special emphasis on its use by scouts. A committee consisting of C. H. Williams, Brent Williams and B. M. Goldsmith was appointed to provide programs for future meetings.

Plans for a West District officials' overnight hike to the Lions' Den Reservation are being made, the hike to start next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the end of the Bellefontaine car line. A bulletin with the final arrangements will be mailed to all West District scoutmasters some time this week.

An outstanding good turn was rendered by the Miami, Fla., Boy Scout headquarters to Scoutmaster M. B. Smith after the recent hurricane. At his request, the scouts located his mother, who was in the storm area, and from whom he had received no word, and looked after her welfare during the unsettled period. The local Scout Executive, John C. Norsk, wrote that she "had escaped unhurt, and in true scout fashion was helping the injured in one of the hospitals."

The two patrols of Troop 20 are specializing in certain subjects, the Flying Eagles receiving instruction in first aid, and the Bears working on drilling and camping. It is planned to make Flying Eagles into an emergency first aid squad so throughly trained that they may be called upon by headquarters whenever a first aid unit is needed. Each boy has definite duties, apart from the general patrol work. The patrol leader is the signalman; the others are divided into two stretcher-bearers, two red cross men, a cook, a campsman and a woodsman. The patrol as a whole is receiving instructions in handling crowds, in fire prevention and safety first, and in general first aid. The Bears are practicing tent-pitching and hygiene.

Forty-five boys of Troop 54, of the Temple Israel, held a Council Fire and wiener roast last Thursday evening. A program of songs, stories and stunts was given, and a hike for next Saturday planned. The Troop intends to hold a hike every week hereafter.

Scoutmaster Kemp of Troop 132, of the Fountain Park Congregation Church, has started a series of handicraft projects in the troop, the first to be started next Thursday. This troop will attend the Court of Honor in a body next Tuesday evening.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

Troop 67, of the Madison School, is attempting to re-register 100 per cent of its membership. This troop is sponsored by the Downtown Lions' Club.

Troop 104 attended church services in a body last Sunday, and at their last meeting were addressed by the pastor, the Rev. Morehead.

Troop 143, of the Hancock High School, has a new scoutmaster, George A. Bauer, and a new assistant scoutmaster, Eugene Jones. The latter will receive his Eagle Scout badge at the Court of Honor, Tuesday.

The Troop Committee of Troop 180, of the Rose Fanning School, attended the last meeting of the troop, and aided in the program.

Troop 200, of the Rose Fanning School, is working on re-registration after a suspension of activities during the summer.

Troop 100, of the Peabody School, is on an all-day hike to the Lions' Den Reservation today.

Charles Kaufmann will be the new scoutmaster of Troop 198. This troop will be in charge of the Stalking merit badge booth at the Merit Badge Exhibit, Oct. 28, at the Coliseum.

Carl Beachcamp has succeeded James Story as Scoutmaster of Troop 229, of the Lafayette Park Baptist Church. Wilbur Hodge will be the Assistant Scoutmaster.

SUBURBAN DISTRICT.

Fire-by-friction was practiced by Troop 3, Webster, of the Hagerty Memorial M. E. Church, a week ago last Friday night, the boys using fire-making sets designed and constructed by themselves. After two new games were played, "hot dog" sandwiches were eaten. The scouts were then invited nustairs in the church to attend a party given by the young peoples' classes.

Senior Patrol Leader Royal Paulette and Scout Albert Kraft of Troop 11, Webster, will receive Star badges at the Court of Honor next Tuesday evening.

Scouts at Church Service Tonight.

Church services tonight at the Sydney Street Presbyterian Church, 2611 Minnesota avenue, will be in charge of scouts of Troop 34, meeting at that church. The scouts will open the services with a flag ceremony, followed by examples of the practice of the scout law and oath. Dr. Charles Boving, pastor, will preach a special scout sermon. All scoutmasters and scouts have been invited to attend.

TELLS HOW HE FOUND RELIEF FOR INDIGESTION

"I used to have trouble with my stomach," says Mr. J. L. Russell, of Sewanee, Tenn. "For several years I suffered continuously with spells of indigestion. Everything I ate disagreed with me, and I was in a bad way.

"I worried a lot about myself. Nothing did me any good until I found Black-Draught. One day a man in a store where we traded told me to try Black-Draught. He said he knew of it relieving indigestion, so I decided to give it a trial.

"In my case it seemed to go right to the very root of my trouble. It straightened me out, and ever since that time, over thirty years ago, I have used Black-Draught as an aid to keeping my system straight.

"When I have a spell of indigestion coming on, I begin on Black-Draught. I take several small doses, in a regular course, and I find it will usually have me well in less than no time. Now I never suffer—I take Black-Draught first.

"I also found it fine to break up a bad cold. In the winter time, I always keep a box handy, so when I sneeze, or feel chilly down my spine, I take a few doses of Black-Draught, and that wards off the cold. We would not be without Black-Draught in our house. It is essential."

Thousands of others would not want to be without this well-known remedy.

Thedford's Black-Draught is a purely vegetable cathartic or laxative medicine, composed of selected medicinal roots and herbs. Its use has brought relief in many cases similar to that described above. Try it. JA-43

Hair Curled This Way Looks Naturally Wavy

Tonight, after you have brushed out your hair, dip a clean tooth brush into some plain liquid silmerine and draw it through the hair, strand by strand. This is by far the best thing you can use if you want your hair to appear naturally wavy and curly, glossy and beautiful.

When you behold yourself in the mirror tomorrow morning, you will vow never to go back to the drying, devitalizing curling iron. Liquid silmerine is neither sticky nor greasy, and will not discolor the hair, spot the scalp, or produce any harmful effect whatever. A few ounces, which of course can be had at any drug store, will last for weeks.

It Started Something

"Your medicine is the talk of the town since pulling me from the grave. I have told dozens about it, and I know of at least ten who are now taking MAYR'S, all with good results. I never saw anything like it. One man who had been operated on for gall stones and had them come back, took it and says his symptoms are all gone now and he swears he is cured." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. September contracts in the 37 tates east of the Rocky Mounins amounted to $562,371,400, acrding to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was only 6 per cent der the total for the preceding nth, and the decrease from Sepber of last year was less than per cent. These 37 States inde about 91 per cent of the al construction volume of the untry.

The most important items in the ptember contract record were: 25,516,300, or 40 per cent of construction, for residential ildings; $98,166,800, or 17 per nt, for public works and utili; $97,378,300, or 17 per cent, commercial buildings; $49,112,-0, or 9 per cent, for industrial nstruction; and $34,531,600, or per cent, for educational build-

New construction started in the Eastern States during the past months has amounted to 109,779,800, being an 8 per increase over the correspondperiod of 1925. The showing de by the contract records this ar has, for several reasons, been ther than the showing of the lding permit records for larger s of the country. The prinl reason for this apparent difnce is that the contract recs include public works and utils projects, which have had a increase this year. This class of rk is not included in the permit ords.

Contemplated new work was reted in September to the amount $621,285,500. While this was per cent more than the unt reported in August of this r, it was 9 per cent less the amount reported in Sepber of last year. The small me of contemplated work in rtion to work actually started indication that construction and is declining somewhat at nt.

The Central West.

Construction started during Septber in the Central West (Illi-Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, igan, Missouri, Kansas, Oklaand Nebraska) amounted to ,974,700. The above figure was tically the same as that for ember of last year. However, e was a decline of 18 per cent August, 1926. Included in September building and engiing record were: $58,521,500, 7 per cent of all construction, residential buildings; $32,642,-, or 20 per cent, for commerbuildings; $25,600,500, or 16 cent, for public works and ies; $12,469,400, or 8 per cent, cial and recreational projects; 00,600, or 8 per cent, for inal buildings; $11,894,600, or r cent, for educational buildand $3,575,100, or 2 per cent, eligious and memorial build-w building and engineering started in the district during first nine months of 1926 hed a total of $1,216,523,500, compared with $1,131,538,500 in first nine months of last year, a gain of 8 per cent.

ntemplated construction projwere reported for the Central in September to the amount $173,100,400. This was 7 per in excess of August, 1926, but cent below September of last uilding and engineering cons were awarded last month in outheast States (the Carolinas, a, Florida, Tennessee, Ala-, Mississippi, Arkansas and ana) to the amount of $56,-00. This was 23 per cent in of August, 1926. However, was a decline of 33 per cent September of last year. of the construction record this territory showed the folcases of importance: $18,-0, or 32 per cent of all conion, for residential buildings; ,300, or 28 per cent, for pubrks and utilities; $8,622,900, per cent, for commercial ; $4,982,800, or 9 per cent, ndustrial buildings; $3,609,800, per cent, for educational ; $2,400,800, or 4 per cent, eligious and memorial buildand $1,978,500, or 3 per cent, cial and recreational projects. ring the first nine months of year there was $590,559,900 of new construction started se states, which was 2 per in excess of the amount ,218,300), for the correspondmonths of 1925. mplated new work reported for the Southeastern States last month amounted to $80,998,000. The company will take possession Nov. 1. Martin & Breitt arranged the lease.

The building is now occupied by the Smith-Reis Piano Co. Extensive alterations will be made. The first floor will be divided into separate show rooms. The basement will be used for kitchen cabinets, stoves and sundries pertaining to the kitchen. The second, third and fourth floors will be used for the display of upholstered furniture.

DELUGACH & SON OPEN NEW GRAVOIS SUBDIVISION

Lots in Gravois View Put on Sale for $590 Each—$3 Down and $3 a Week.

De Lugach & Son have purchased a tract at Gravois and McKenzie roads, about a mile west of the city limits, which they are placing on the market in subdivision form as Gravois View.

The new addition has an attractive layout of lots which are offered for the uniform price of $590 a lot, with 1926-27 taxes paid. Terms of sale are extraordinary —$3 down and $3 a week.

The company drove a bargain in the purchase of this tract, with its cash resources, enabling it to place the lots on sale at a relatively low price on unprecedented terms and on virtually cash basis to the purchaser.

Water, telephone, electricity, train and bus service, churches, schools and stores are advertised as constituting a part of the new addition. Westbound macadam streets are contemplated in the subdivision plans.

The tract is advertised as being two miles west of Kingshighway, with the distance annihilated by automobiles and busses, and is in the vicinity of the Sunset Hill Country Club.

Cost of examination of title by the Title Guaranty Trust Co., and a security box for the deed free of cost to the purchaser, are among the sale features. The company also is providing free taxicabs to the property for prospective purchasers.

The tract was purchased from August Berry.

De Lugach & Son has operated on an extensive scale in Chicago, Memphis, Cincinnati and other large cities. The firm recently marketed a large tract in lots on Manchester road.

St. Louis apparently is in the initial stages of its growth, according to De Lugach, and has a great future before it. Dominated by this idea, his company is launching subdivision enterprises in the suburban field, which promise to be a factor in the growth of the city.

The Secret of Distinctive Homes
The secret, if there is one, is the careful planning of every detail. In the rare cases where this planning has been applied to the whole community, distinctiveness takes on a broader significance. Not only distinctive homes, but distinctive surroundings, and these lead to distinctive owners for these homes. This all applies to where you can still make your selection from several homes still available. The furnished display home is at 7545 Cornell Av.

Its control is strengthened by high tariff duties on imported crude and semi-finished aluminum. On Oct. 6, 1924, the commission made a unanimous report showing that there was monopoly and price control in the aluminum utensil industry. This report was submitted to Attorney General Stone, who said in a brief summary to the press:

"It is apparent, therefore, that during the time covered by your report, the Aluminum Company of America violated several provisions of the decree. That, with respect to some of the practices complained of, they were so frequent and long continued, the inference is the company was either indifferent to the provisions of the decree or knowingly intended that its provisions should be disregarded with a view to suppressing competition in the industry.

TENNESSEEANS STORM JAIL AND LYNCH NEGRO

Sheriff Overpowered and Alleged Slayer Is Seized by Unmasked and Armed Mob.

By the Associated Press.

DOVER, Tenn. Oct. 9—Local authorities plan to request Gov. Peay to use his state offices to aid in the investigation of the lynching of Herbert Bell, Negro, last night, near Parkertown, 10 miles from here.

This announcement was made by Sheriff Ellis, who said, in addition, that he would consult Circuit Judge Morton at Gallatin and District Attorney General J. Bowman to advise with him on what procedure he should follow in effecting arrests.

Bell was taken from the jail here by several unmasked and armed men who overpowered the sheriff. He estimated there were 75 men in the band which, entering the jail, seized him and the Negro at the point of shotguns and forced them to cross the Cumberland River, 300 yards away, while the Negro constantly prayed.

There, the mob permitted the Sheriff to return and took the Negro to the vicinity of Parkertown, where his body was found this morning riddled with bullets, hanging to a tree limb by a grass rope.

Bell was bound over to the action of the grand jury here last Tuesday on a charge of first degree murder for the killing of Rufus Joyner, farmer, of Parkertown, two days before.

"We want either you or the Negro," Sheriff Ellis said he was told when he urged the mob to "listen to reason."

A Coroner's jury today returned a verdict that the prisoner met his death at the hands of "unknown parties."

BARONESS D'ERLANGER WED FOR FIFTH TIME

Became Secret Bride of G. W. C. McCarter, New Jersey Lawyer, on Aug. 17.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The former Baroness Robert d'Erlanger was secretly married Aug. 17 to George W. Childs McCarter, son of Robert H. McCarter, former Attorney-General of New Jersey, and at present chief of defense counsel in the Hall-Mills murder case, it was learned yesterday at the office of City Clerk Michael J. Cruise, who performed the ceremony.

The marriage evidently came as a surprise to McCarter's parents, as his first wife, Dorothy Parker McCarter of New Brunswick, N. J., only recently obtained a Paris divorce on ground of desertion.

The former Baroness d'Erlanger's marital experiences have covered many columns in newspapers and have extended from Reno to Paris since 1902. McCarter is her fifth husband.

In 1902, as Miss Marion Andrews, daughter of T. L. Andrews of Virginia, she was married to Pedar Brugiere, a millionaire. Seven years later she divorced him in Reno. Before a year had passed she was married to Stewart Deming of New York. A few months later Mrs. Deming made another trip to Reno and was divorced.

She then remained unattached until 1918, when she was married to Peter Cooper Hewitt. Hewitt died in 1921, bequeathing her two-thirds of his fortune. A proviso in the will stated that the bequest would be cut to one-third if she remarried.

A year later she was married to the Baron Robert d'Erlanger in St. Roch's Church, Paris.

Two years later the pair came into prominence when they conducted an acrimonious advertising campaign in the personal column of a leading London newspaper. The Baron in one advertisement said he would not be responsible for his wife's debt. She retorted by advertising that he never had contributed to her support and that instead she had been supporting him at the rate of $50,000 a year. In 1925 the Baroness astounded Paris by obtaining an annulment of the marriaged.

Shortly after the annulment the former Baroness returned to America to appear as defendant in several lawsuits. These actions forced her into bankruptcy.

According to the application for the marriage license here, the former Baroness said she was 39 years old. McCarter also gave his age as 39, and said he lived in Rumson, N. J. He is a lawyer, with offices in Newark.

Several dozen boys rode their hobbies at the Carondelet Y. M. C. A. yesterday evening, and several hundreds of parents, relatives and friends came to see them do it. The occasion was the first "hobby show" of the branch association.

The exhibition, the winners of which will be announced later, opened a series of bi-weekly programs for boys and parents to be held at the new Carondelet department building, 600 Loughborough avenue.

Collections of Indian relics, bullets picked up on Civil War battlefields, stamps, photographs, perfumes, drawings, botany specimens and human bones competed with boy-made radios, bird houses, airplanes, basket work, models of battleships and windmills and a complete miniature church.

GERMANY MAY REVIVE MONARCHY, E. M. HOUSE SAYS

Lack of Domestic Stability or Severe Pressure by Allies Can Cause Change, Wilson Adviser Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Edward M. House, close adviser of President Wilson during the World War, thinks it is possible Germany may revert to a monarchical form of government, because of inefficiency in the present Government methods or unwise action of the allies.

Writing in the current issue of McCall's Magazine, House says:

"Many competent observers believe that the present republic will finally merge itself into a monarchy with something more of power to the Emperor than the King of England holds, and somewhat less than the former Kaiser had.

"If Germany should revert to monarchy, it will come about from the need of stability in domestic affairs, and the need of continuity in foreign affairs. It might also come through unwise and inconsiderate treatment by France and the other allies."

Discussing who might become Emperor, House says one of the difficulties the royalists would find in bringing back a monarchy would be in reaching an agreement on a candidate for the office.

"The only one of the Hohenzollerns who would seem to have any chance," he writes, "would be the son (Prince Wilhelm) of the former Crown Prince. He might be a possibility, but the one chosen would more likely be a Prince of one of the smaller states. However, the recent referendum in Germany to determine whether the property of the royal families should be confiscated without compensation is a fair indication that the sentiment of the people is against the royal families."

The multiple system of parliamentary government as practiced now by most continental European countries, House thinks, is proving itself "inefficient and unsatisfactory."

NOTHING KNOWN OF ETERNAL PUNISHMENT, SAYS DEAN INGE

Adds Christians No Longer Believe in It and Calls Change Almost Religious Revolt.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Dean Inge, the "gloomy dean," has contributed an article to the Sunday Express, in which he supports the recent declaration of the Bishop of Liverpool at the church congress at Southport, that Christians no longer believe, as their grandfathers did, in eternal punishment.

Dean Inge says this is obviously true andis one of the greatest changes that Christianity has ever undergone. In the last 75 years, the tradition of 18 centuries had been broken; Christianity had been secularized as it never was before, and was becoming a worldly religion.

Among the many reasons for the change amounting almost to a revolution, Dean Inge believes the first is that "we are shocked by the crudity of the old pictures of bliss and torment." He thinks that the ideas of terrible eternal punishment and torment "were encouraged by morbid visions of monks, which were supposed to be revelations, but are nowadays not only unbelievable, but incomprehensible."

"We shall almost all agree," he says, "that we are well rid of this teaching. It is indeed strange that for so many centuries the belief should have lasted."

The dean is of the opinion that astronomy and general scientific discoveries also are responsible in a measure for the abandonment of the old ideas of eternal punishment, and he takes the ground that on the actual question of eternal punishment, we know nothing.

Several Creditors Intervene, Following Suit by Stockholder in $192,000 Concern.

Ben Philipson, attorney, was appointed by Circuit Judge Calhoun yesterday as temporary receiver of the Union Candy Co., 309 Valentine street, incorporated in 1920 and having an authorized capital of $192,000. The appointment was made on a petition filed Friday by Harry J. Hesley of East St. Louis, who owns $2000 worth of the company's stock. He complained that because of discord among the board of directors the business of the company, formerly prosperous, had been practically at a standstill for four months. Several creditors intervened yesterday and also asked for a receiver.

COOLIDGE NAMES BOARD TO SOLVE COTTON PROBLEM

Body to Join Other Federal and State Agencies in Directing Orderly Disposal of Large Stock.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—President Coolidge today came to the aid of the cotton farmer by appointing a special governmental board to assist him in solving the problem brought about by a slump in cotton prices.

The board will join with other agencies of both the Federal and State Governments already at work, and will devote special attention to devising orderly methods of disposing of the large cotton stock on hand.

The President acted in the belief that the situation could be met by a proper co-ordination of all agencies endeavoring to assist in the work, as he has been informed by his official advisers that the situation presented no occasion for "panicky" views.

Meyer Heads Committee.

Eugene Meyer, managing director of the War Finance Corporation, was named chairman of the President's committee, while Secretaries Mellon, Jardine and Hoover are the other members.

The committee was directed by Mr. Coolidge "to co-operate with those engaged in the production, marketing and use of cotton; to investigate the present market-condition of cotton, and render such desirable assistance as can be given by the Government to the efforts already being made in the South through the financial institutions, co-operative organizations and Federal intermediate credit banks and otherwise."

Mr. Meyer and the other members of the committee refrained from making any statement as to the plans, but an indication of steps they will take were noted in the advice Mr. Hoover gave to Stuart W. Cramer, of Charlotte, N. C., chairman of a textile group who had written the Commerce Secretary about the situation.

Advice to Cotton Mills.

In a letter to Cramer, the Secretary said that cotton mills should take advantage of the present prices to acquire ample stocks, thereby placing themselves in a favorable condiiton to meet competition from manufacturers and putting the cotton grower in a better position to obtain improved prices in the export trade.

The committee was named by the President after he had consulted on the situation with his Cabinet advisers and members of the Senate from Southern states. The action was deemed advisable in furtherance of the Government's policy of rendering aid, which had recently been marked by making available $30,000,000 credit to the cotton industry through the intermediate credit banks.

The first meeting of the committee will be held Monday at which a line of action is expected to be decided upon.

SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE OF MOSES SHOENBERG APPROVED

Executive Disbursed $1,711,647 in Property; $40,019 Inheritance Tax Paid to State.

Final settlement of the estate of the late Moses Shoenberg, vice president of the May Department Stores Co., was made in Probate Court yesterday by his son, Sydney M. Shoenberg, as executor, and the settlement was approved by Judge Holtcamp. It shows that the executor disbursed property inventoried at $1,711,647 belonging to his father. A joint fee of $40,000 was paid to Attorneys Nathan Frank and Louis B. Sher for legal services rendered the executor and the estate paid $44,019.85 inheritance tax to the State of Missouri.

Mr. Shoenberg died July 19, 1925. In his will he bequeathed $100,000 to his widow, Mrs. Dolly Shoenberg, stating that previously he had made substantial payments to her. He left a total of $25,000 to be distributed among such eleemosynary institutions as his widow and son should select, created an annuity of $2000 for his brother, Leopold E. Beaumont, and gave the residue of his property to his son.

WALSH QUITS SHIPPING BOARD TO RETURN TO PRIVATE AFFAIRS

Successor to Be Named Soon; New Orleans Man Mentioned for Post Visits Coolidge.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Commissioner Walsh of the Shipping Board has submitted his resignation to President Coolidge.

Walsh, who is a Democrat from New Orleans, tendered his resignation to return to private business. It has not yet been accepted, but will be as soon as a successor is determined upon. Several names already are under consideration by Mr. Coolidge from the Gulf States for the post, and a selection is expected to be made shortly. R. K. Smith of New Orleans, one of those suggested, was received at the White House today, but left without any definite word being given concerning his call.

Walsh, a former naval officer, succeeded Frederick I. Thompson of Mobile, Ala., who resigned.

ANNUAL DAHLIA SHOW AT SHAW'S GARDEN

Rare and Some New Varieties Displayed—Exhibition Closes Tonight.

Color at its best glows and darkens in never-ending variety, pales to purest white, deepens to midnight red and flaunts a sunburst of yellow at the third annual Dahlia Show which opened yesterday in the Display House at Shaw's Garden and will close tonight.

Every color but blue is shown in cut flowers three feet tall. That height is little, however, to the dahlias George H. Pring, Shaw's Garden horticulturist, found on his orchid hunt in Columbia. They were trees, 25 or 30 feet high, with light mauve blossoms four or five inches across. The flower was first cultivated in Madrid from specimens found in Mexico.

Soft yellows shading down to bronze glorify one basket. Beside it another presents a melange of yellow, bronze, lavender, pink and scarlet. There are huge crysanthemum-like blossoms in gleaming white or flaming yellow, in form suggesting a very tousled head of quite extraordinary hair.

Gold Medal Variety Stands Out.

Among the show variety stands out the "Gold Medal," modest in size but with impressive symmetry of rounded petals, resembling the ears of a sculptured fawn in soft yellow with orange-red tips. Another of identical shape exactly reverses the color scheme.

The "Jersey Beauty," great pink blossoms with traces of orange or salmon, stands beside the magnificent cream-tipped orange "Jersey Beacon." Below them is the "Carmencita" in bright yellow with striking flecks and narrow stripes of crimson. That exhibit won a silver medal of the American Dahlia Society for the Missouri Dahlia Farm.

Beside it, F. M. Davis of the dahlia farm exhibits a new hybrid, probably the largest blossom in the show, of a spectacular yellow which intangibly distinguishes it from other yellows exhibited. It has not yet been named.

More Awards This Year.

The American Dahlia Society this year extended its awards to two silver medals and two bronze medals, instead of one medal each for the amateur and commercial section. Davis had won the silver medal at each of the two previous shows here, and he won both medals in the commercial class this year. E. H. Johanning of 3826 Utah place, who won this year's silver medal in the amateur class, likewise winning the highest award for the third time.

Harold Hartman of 5206 Louisiana avenue, a bookkeeper, who has been winning blue ribbons with products of his back yard and window-box garden since he was 16, won the bronze medal for amateurs. He drew public attention three years ago when, as a 17-year-old high school student, he won seven blue ribbons in the big Flower Show in the First Regiment Armory.

Quality Rather Than Quantity.

Quality rather than quantity distinguishes the show, but that local growers still are dahlia "fans" was evinced by no less than 25 new hybrids shown by amateurs and 26 by professionals. Bees had done most of the heavy work for Richard Kramske of Jefferson Barracks, who exhibited 23 of the amateur creations, including the "Miss Lena Schaeffer," which took the blue ribbon.

Kramske's business products are honey and queens—queen bees. He has about 100 stands of bees and a garden of dahlias. He does some pollenation by hand, but his real adventures in hybridization are in waiting to see what new flower will arise as the result of cross-pollenation by the bees.

Tex Rickard Weds New York Girl.

By the Associated Press.

LEWISBURG, W. Va., Oct. 9.—George L. (Tex) Rickard, sports promoter, was married to Miss Maxine Hodges of New York here Thursday, according to the Rev. L. McF. Courtney, who tonight said he had officiated at the wedding. The minister's statement was made after Rickard had denied that the ceremony had been performed. The Rev. Mr. Courtney, pastor of the "Old Stone" Presbyterian Church, said he performed the ceremony at his home Thursday. Records of the county clerk disclosed that a marriage license had been issued to Rickard and Miss Hodges on the same day. They gave their ages as 54 and 24 years, respectively.

GIRL BRIDE PROPOSED, BROWNING DECLARES

54-Year-Old Husband Tells Story of Courtship and Adds He Will Take Wife Back.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Edward Browning, melancholy because his school girl bride has left him, today told the story of their courtship, during which he asserted that it was "Peaches" who did the proposing.

"When I first met 'Peaches,'" he said, "she said was was 23. I didn't propose to her. She proposed to me. She wanted me to run off with her and get married. Later, I heard she was 21. I sent a representative to investigate and learned that she was 16."

Soon after she met Browning last spring, the girl suffered burns on the face, caused by acid thrown by an unknown person who invaded her bedroom, according to the story of the girl and her mother, Mrs. Katherine Heenan. Browning told of going to the Neenan apartment, when he learned of the incident.

"I hurried there in a taxicab and ran up six flights of stairs," he said. "When I entered the room, she put her arms out to me. Who wouldn't have pitied a person in that position?"

A short time later, the 51-year-old wealthy real estate man was married to the then 15-year-old girl.

After their marriage, Browning said, he used subways and even walked so his wife could go out in his automobile. A reported assertion by "Peaches," that he never spent any money on her for doctors, prompted Browning to exhibit doctors' bills which he said he had paid, and which totaled $1000.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I have had between 12 and 15 doctors for her."

Browning said he bought golf and tennis outfits for his wife, and sat by while she was taking golf lessons.

After telling in detail of how he had played the role of "Cinderella man" to please his young wife, Browning said he was willing to take her back.

Asked if he would take back Mrs. Heenan, he answered:

"I will take my wife back."

Meanwhile, Browning does not know the whereabouts of the girl and her mother.

DOCTORS DENY STATEMENT IN DE KRUIF'S 'MICROBE HUNTERS'

Declare Dr. Christy Did Not Quit Sleeping Sickness Expedition to Look for Rubber.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Assertions in Paul de Kruif's book, "Microbe Hunters," regarding the expedition into Africa, 1900 to 1903, to study sleeping sickness, were declared "erroneous, misleading and libelous," in a statement today by four of the world's leading authorities on tropical diseases.

The statement, sent to the Journal of the American Medical Association, was signed by Drs. Aldo Castellani, professor of Tropical Diseases at Tulane University; George C. Low, head of the London School of Tropical Medicine; David Nabarro, pathologist of the Children's Hospital, London, and Ronald Ross, Nobel prize winner in medicine; all members of the expedition.

The statement objected to was "the third member (of the expedition) became disgusted with the ignorance and failures of his two colleagues and went off prospecting for rubber."

Dr. Cuthbert Christy, to whom the passage was taken to refer, previously had issued a statement denying its truth.

SALE OF CEMETERY TRACTS IS AUTHORIZED BY COURT

St. Paul's Evangelical Church Trustees to Dispose of Two on Gravois Avenue.

Circuit Judge Calhoun yesterday authorized the trustees of St. Paul's Evangelical Church to sell the old cemetery ground, located on both sides of Gravois avenue, near Kingshighway.

Since incorporation of the cemetery 56 years ago there have been about 8500 burials in the two plots covering 20 acres. Most of the bodies have been removed to a new cemetery site acquired by the corporation on Watson road, near Rock Hill road, on the old White Haven farm, where Gen. Grant's cabin first stood. It is planned to remove the remainder of the bodies to new burial grounds, the Court was informed.

Records show that the old property was acquired for about $25,000 and it is expected to obtain enough from the sale of lots to pay for the new cemetery, which was about $75,000, and have a balance for a trust fund.

The BILLIONAREA
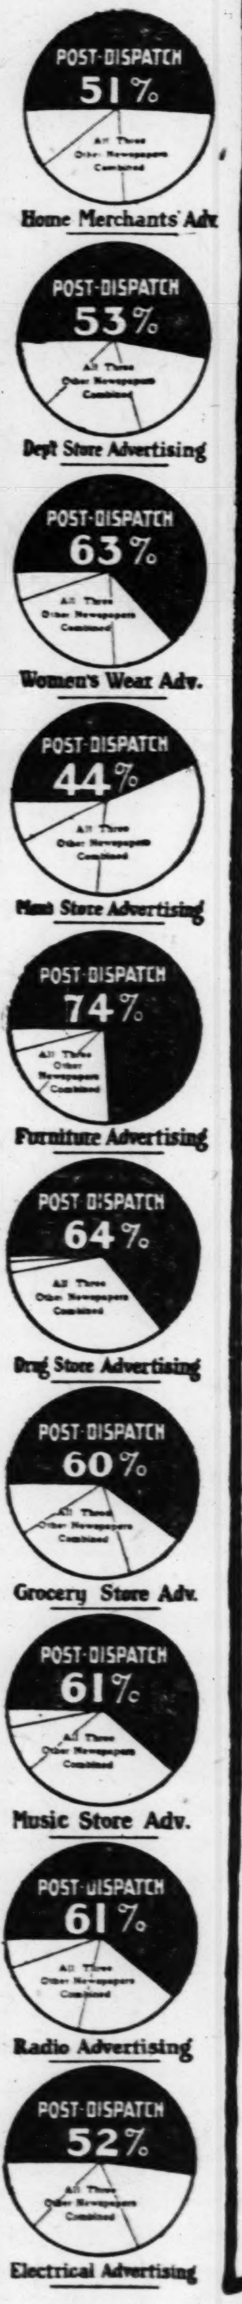
– the GREATER ST. LOUIS MARKET

St. Louis Retailers give their verdict

Not only the St. Louis Retailers as a whole, but all the important separate classifications of retailers, consistently placed the bulk of their advertising in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch during the first six months of 1926 as shown by the following charts.



P+D+C Study Will Show You

"P" stands for people or population; "D" for dollars, wealth, purchasing power; and "C" for newspaper circulation coverage. When you make a study of these three factors in regard to The Billionarea, the Greater St. Louis Market, you find:

1. The Billionarea is the true, natural market of Greater St. Louis, not a mythical zone arbitrarily drawn on the map to include thinly scattered circulation in distant small towns and rural communities.

2. The Billionarea contains a million people spending a billion dollars annually—a huge market in a remarkable state of prosperity right now.

3. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has by far the greatest circulation coverage in The Billionarea, reaching 40,000 more families—160,000 more persons—than the second St. Louis daily newspaper.

4. This extra circulation [equaling the total population of a city like Dallas or Dayton] costs you nothing since the advertising rate of the Post-Dispatch is no greater than that of the second daily newspaper.

5. The Post-Dispatch alone reaches three out of four families in the entire Billionarea—practically every family of purchasing consequence.

THE BILLIONAREA

is more than a market name. It is a market condition. In addition to its unusual prosperity and growth, Greater St. Louis offers advertisers an annual purchasing power of over a BILLION dollars—one of the highest average purchasing powers per family of any city in America.

Has this happened in your office?

Sales Manager---

"Why should we sit here and try to guess right on our newspaper selection in St. Louis, when the retailers there KNOW from experience which is the most productive medium?"

Advertising Manager---

"That's the solution—let's get the retailer's viewpoint, because in the final analysis our advertising is designed to develop retail sales."

Stop Guessing!

Retailers know which Newspaper sells the most for the manufacturer

When a manufacturer advertises his product to create retail sales, his choice of a newspaper is, of necessity, a long-distance one. There is, however, an infallible guide to the most productive medium. That is: What newspaper do the retailers themselves prefer year after year?

The retail advertiser knows how to get results. He must know. His advertising must sell merchandise. He has, therefore, the closest possible check at all times upon the pulling power of the newspapers in his city.

The manufacturer who advertises in newspapers has exactly the same objective as the retailer—he aims to increase the volume of his sales. As a matter of fact, the manufacturer is in reality a retailer. Until his goods are sold, to the ultimate consumer, his sale is not completed. Therefore, the same newspaper that brings greatest results to the retail advertiser brings greatest results to the manufacturer.

The retailers of The Billionarea—Greater St. Louis—have consistently, year after year, placed twice as much advertising in the Post-Dispatch as in any other St. Louis newspaper.

For five consecutive years they have used almost as much space in the Post-Dispatch as in all three other St. Louis newspapers combined. And in the first six months of 1926 they actually placed more advertising in the Post-Dispatch alone than in all three others combined.

This record of overwhelming choice of the Post-Dispatch by St. Louis retailers is based solely on results. The manufacturer who intends to advertise in St. Louis has this record to guide him. Profitable results are just as certain for the manufacturer as they are for the retailer. P+D+C analysis reveals the fundamental reasons:

1. The Post-Dispatch circulation is largely concentrated in The Billionarea—the Greater St. Louis Market. Within that area, it reaches practically every family of purchasing consequence. Within that area, it reaches 40,000 more families [160,000 more people] than is reached by the second daily newspaper.

2. Within that area, the average purchasing power per family is three and one-half times greater than the purchasing power in the small town and rural communities outside of The Billionarea.

Even a casual P+D+C study of St. Louis will show that this concentrated circulation within The Billionarea, where the people have the most dollars to spend, offers an unmatched marketing opportunity which warrants any manufacturer in devoting a special appropriation and special effort in St. Louis through the Post-Dispatch.

The P+D+C Manual and The Book of Information About The Billionarea—The Greater St. Louis Market, will be mailed free to anyone interested in the advertising and sales opportunity of this market. Address St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

KRESGE DIVORCE SUIT ENJOINED BY WIFE

New York Court Restrains Trial in Detroit on Ground He Is Resident of Former City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The long-drawn-out litigation between Sebastian S. Kresge, head of the S. S. Kresge Co. Five and Ten-cent stores, and his wife, Mrs. Doris Mercer Kresage, took a new turn today, when Mrs. Krege obtained a Supreme Court order restraining her husband from prosecuting his action for divorce in Detroit.

Immediately after the order had been signed by Justice Levy, a messenger was sent to Detroit with certified copies to be served on Kresge.

Mrs. Kresge, in seeking to enjoin the Michigan suit, maintains that Kresge is a resident of New York City and that the Michigan courts have no jurisdiction in the premises.

Last March, Mrs. Kresge, who is the second wife of Kresge, sued her husband for 17,500 shares of stock in the Kresge corporation, valued at $7,000,000. She later reduced her claim to $1,000,000. A settlement was effected through Justice Robert F. Wagner, under which Mrs. Kresge was reported to have received a "substantial amount." Kresge later instituted divorce proceedings in Detroit.

U. S. SEEKS TO AID NONCOMBATANTS IN WUCHANG SIEGE

Secretary Kellogg Orders Envoy at Pekin to Get Relief for Those in Town —Truce Urged.

ALL AMERICANS REPORTED SAFE

Consul-General at Hankow Says Accounts of Deaths From Starvation Are Greatly Exaggerated.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—American Minister MacMurray, at Pekin, was instructed today by Secretary of State Kellogg to use his utmost efforts to bring about relief for the noncombatant population of Wucnang, as a result of the siege of that city by the Cantonese army.

Kellogg's attention was drawn to the situation by receipt of official reports reciting the misery which has prevailed in Wuchang since the siege began. His cabled instructions left the Minister full discretionary powers regarding relief measures.

Expected to Seek Truce.

It is expected that MacMurray will appeal to his diplomatic colleagues in Pekin and through them to the foreign consuls in Wuchang with a view of having the consular body unite in a request to the opposing army commanders for an armistice during which noncombatants in Wuchang may be evacuated.

The reports received by Kellogg said American naval officers and other relief workers were utilizing to the fullest possible extent the limited transportation facilities in the vicinity of OsmWuchang and Hankow to bring out as many of the population as was possible.

Americans Reported Safe.

Americans in Wuchang were reported safe and well in a telegram to the State Department today from Consul General Lockhart at Hankow.

The Consul General said there had been "great exaggerations" in reports of conditions at Wuchang, although visitors to the city Oct. 7 had confirmed the fact there had been considerable loss of life among women and children, most of them being trampled at the gate of the city. There had been no deaths from starvation, the message said.

Many Trampled to Death in Rush for Boats.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Oct. 9.—A dispatch received today from Hankow from an authoritative source states that previous accounts of conditions in Wuchang were greatly exaggerated. It confirms reports that many women and children were trampled to death in the rush for boats to take them to Hankow, but says that there has been practically no starvation in Wuchang as a result of the 40-day siege by Cantonese armies.

The dispatch says that since it is generally understood that an agreement between northerners and southerners regarding Wuchang's fate is imminent, the evacuation of civilians virtually has ceased.

Customs Parley In China Futile for Present, U. S. Member Says.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Silas Strawn, American representative to the extra-territoriality and customs conferences in China, declared on his return home today that further negotiations are impossible for the present because of the difficulty of knowing who and what the Chinese government is and where it has its seat.

The customs conference petered out, he said. Eleven nations were expected to be represented; eight arrived in Pekin, but left immediately; only three actually met but they adjourned without accomplishing anything, he explained.

Strawn will report to the President at Washington shortly, on the extra-territoriality conference.

Steamer Leaves Scene of Accident.

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 9.—The steamer that leaves the scene of accident is the latest. Coast guard officials were searching today for a vessel of the character which ran down the four-masted schooner Wm. E. Litchfield in Hampton Roads in the dark of night and then disappeared. The schooner, which hails from Boston, had her jib carried away and her bow was damaged so that it was necessary for her to be towed to port here.

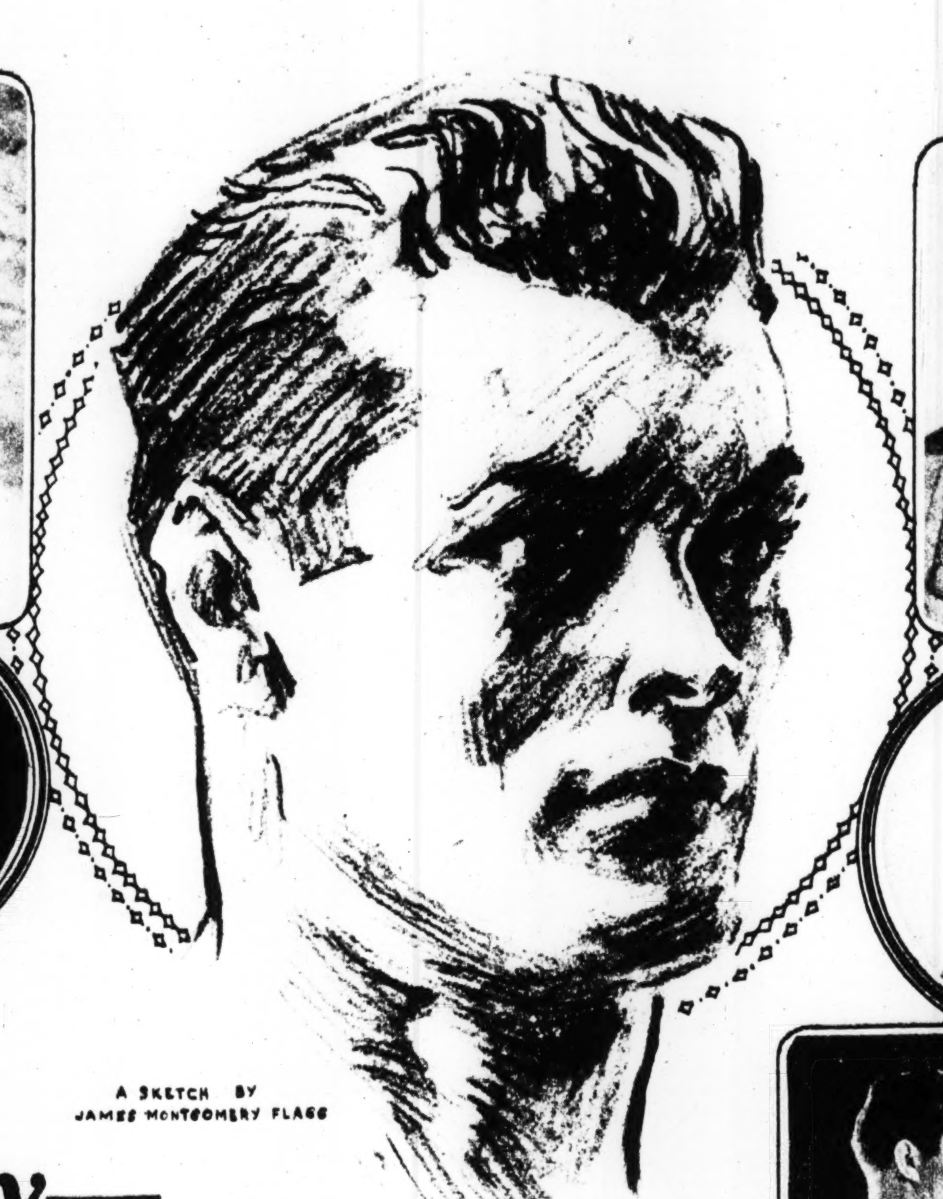
GENE TUNNEY

Heavyweight Boxing Champion of the World

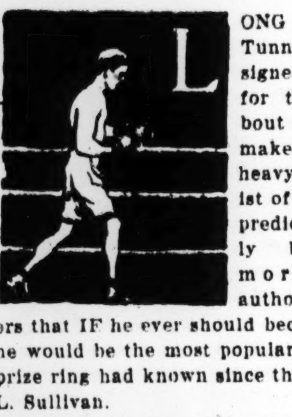


A SKETCH BY JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG

Gene Tunney—the Champion Who Is Different

New King of the Prize Ring Might Have Come Out of a Story Book: Soldier, Student, Fighter and Gentleman—His Boyhood Chums in Greenwich Village Used to Think He Was a Sissy "Because He Read Books and That Sort of Stuff and Never Took a Drink or Gave a Skirt a Tumble."

By GUY FORSHEY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff



LONG before Gene Tunney had even signed a contract for the memorable bout which was to make him champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, the prediction was freely broadcast by more than one authority on fighters that IF he ever should become champion he would be the most popular champion the prize ring had known since the days of John L. Sullivan.

Already he has made good on the "if" part of that prediction. In that dramatic encounter at Philadelphia fought in a driving rain, before one of the largest gatherings that ever assembled in the history of sports to watch a contest or game, the "fighting Marine" came through. He came through with as much decisiveness as did his buddies at Chateau-Thierry. From Jack Dempsey, probably the most formidable, but at the same time the most unpopular champion the country has ever had, he wrested a crown worn without much dispute for seven years. Now, with as little ostentation as that which marked his ascent to the heights, he appears to have taken up a steady march toward realization of the rest of that forecast.

The technical phases of his triumph in the ring, his victory punch by punch as it was gained, are matters with which the boxing experts have already made the public familiar. Now, what sort of a fellow is this Gene Tunney personally, and why is he a champion different from others? Why is it that he enters into his reign with more real popularity than Dempsey could achieve in seven years of undisputed ring leadership?

The reasons multiply as the examination progresses, but consider first a few fundamentals. The sporting public likes perseverance. It likes a self-made man and a gentleman. It likes good looks and a clean record. Just now, it likes men who have shown they could fight somewhere besides in the prize ring. It likes drama. Tunney has these qualities in such abundance as to make the others seem flat by comparison.

IN THE first place, Tunney wasn't what is commonly called a natural fighter, as Dempsey was. He lacked the killer instinct. He lacked the instinctive yearning to wade in, tear his rival limb from limb and chuck the remains into the garbage can. He is what might be called a synthetic fighter. His skill, his fighting sense, even his powerful physique, he built up by long and persistent effort. Naturally, he was a student, and had to cultivate the other qualities that eventually turned him out a champion. It was not only a matter of actual ring encounters now and then, but a constant fight all the way up the grade. He had to accomplish a decided improvement of form and technique between each battle and the next or else drop out of the running. He has had to do that through some 60 fights. Often the odds were heavily against him.

Take the Dempsey fight, for instance. Was ever a young fighter faced with a greater psychological handicap than that he had to face and overcome in the Sesquicentennial stadium? There were 132,000 howling fans, many of them pulling for him, but most of them confident that Dempsey would put him to sleep. He had never had the crowd factor to deal with in such a way before. He had never faced before a man with such repute and punching power, let alone a man who had skill and experience with it and had mowed down all comers, even though they were few, for seven years. There was a certain inferiority complex he had to get rid of before he even entered the ring. Then, after he got there, he had to do what he was going to do in a pouring rain that half-blinded him and made his footing uncertain when footing was most necessary. That probably hampered him more than it would have hampered a man of less delicate mental structure. Psychologists point out that material dangers always weigh more heavily upon trained than upon untrained minds, because they are better able to realize and appreciate them. Imagine a man facing a human tornado like Jack Dempsey, with footing already uncertain and visibility impaired from the start. Dempsey, of course, had to labor under the same material difficulties, but for him there was not the same mental handicap.

WAS it any wonder, then, that the decisive beating administered to the heavy favorite by the underdog, in the face of such obstacles, appealed immensely to the drama-loving public? Even though the fight did lack the spectacular knockout and knockdowns of other famous tilts for the championship, it lacked nothing in drama, and it seemed fitting, somehow, that the persevering "leatherneck" should win his greatest glory in such a setting.

The boxing experts of the country almost unanimously selected Dempsey to win. Ahead of any big fight they always, quite honestly, are for the champion. Then, when the champion is beaten, it is customary for them to say, as in the present instance, that the champion was but a shell of his former self.

Before the Dempsey-Firpo fight one well-known boxing authority ventured to declare that Firpo would not be able to lay a glove on Dempsey. It was a shame, he said, for the promoters to allow an unskilled dub like Firpo to meet a perfect boxing machine like Dempsey. Firpo would simply be massacred. Before the fight had gone far Dempsey had been knocked out of the ring and into the lap of this same critic, and the critic was helping him up. Just before this last fight he was deploring Tunney's fate.

They say now that Dempsey was but a shell of the Dempsey who beat Willard at Toledo; that his punch and fast footwork were all gone. What made him a shell? A blow to the jaw in the first round had something to do with it. Dempsey did not make a shell of himself. Tunney's fist brought about the transformation. The facts in this case, as in most other cases, seem to be that the champion met a better man, all things considered, and simply got licked.

THERE are many tales told of how Tunney learned the fundamentals of fighting as a member of the Marine Corps, in which he served as a private during the war. These are mostly myths, although it was while he was wearing the gray-green of the sea soldiers that he first gained wide notice, by winning the light-heavyweight championship of the interallied armies. Before he enlisted in the Marines he had already engaged in at least five professional battles and had definitely cast his lot as a fighter. His earlier bouts were not very important. They are scarcely recorded in the archives. But neither are the two nonprofessional bouts which old acquaintances remember and which changed his career from that of a freight clerk to one of a prize fighter.

Tunney was born in Greenwich Village, in New York City, on May 25, 1898, the son of Irish parents. His father was a longshoreman. He was christened not Gene at all but James Joseph. With Corbett and Jeffries ahead of him, there may have been something significant in that James J. cognomen, but he was destined not to gain fame under such a resounding name. A younger sister was responsible for that. She couldn't say "Jim." Her efforts sounded more like "Gene," so "Gene" he was from then on. The first 16 years of his life were little different from those of the other urchins of the village. He was of a little more studious turn of mind, perhaps, and made better records at school, but he played in the streets, swam from the wharves, threw rocks and fought his boyish battles as the others did. It was such an encounter that started him on the road to the prize ring.

Once he chanced to engage in a bare-fist argument with one "Goo-Goo" Delaney, and won it. Later he had to take on "Goo-Goo's" big brother, and lost. He decided then and there to learn the art of self-defense in a scientific way. He boxed almost daily in the Greenwich Gymnasium, and was a regular observer of bouts at the old National Sporting Club on Forty-fourth street. In the daytime he worked for the Ocean Steamship Company at a salary of $12 a week. By the time he was 18 he had gained such neighborhood prestige as a boxer that he was taken to the Fairmount Athletic Club and sent into his first professional bout. He was then a stripling of 155 pounds. Billy Gibson, who is now Tunney's manager, was the matchmaker. Gene had emerged successfully from this and three or four other fights of minor importance when there developed a fight of real importance overseas. It took Tunney just five minutes to decide to get into it. He enlisted in the Marines, and was among the early Americans to arrive in France. He was also one of the last to come back and while Dempsey was wielding a hammer in a shipyard, he was carrying a rifle through the rain in France, although he did not take part in any engagements. He kept up his boxing and won the light-heavyweight championship of the A. E. F.

James Joseph (Gene) Tunney.

Returning to this country with considerably more strength and prestige than he had when he went overseas, Tunney soon saw that only a long building process would ever give him a chance at the title he coveted most. He was only a light-heavyweight, in which class there was little fame and less remuneration. He was shy about 20 pounds in weight and his hands were so brittle that injuries made his progress discouragingly slow. What did he do? He set about the business of growing systematically. Long after he had passed the age when men normally attain their full growth he increased not only his weight but also his height and reach. He did it by hard work and scientific methods, just as he has developed his boxing skill. While he lacked the advantage that the instinctive, born fighter has, he had another quality that made up for the loss. This was his ability to take punishment and the courage to face heavy odds and still carry on. That is expected of Marines.

In all, Tunney has had more than 60 fights in his career, and has won over half of them by knockouts, without ever being knocked down himself, but it was chiefly through his victories in three great battles that he climbed into a position as contender for the heavyweight title. These were his triumph over Tom Gibbons, whom he knocked out in the twelfth round, after Dempsey had failed to stop the St. Paul battler in 15; his victory, also by a knockout, over Georges Carpentier in a dramatic 15-round fight, and his knockout of Bartley Madden. Among his other notable victories were those over Johnny Risko, Erminio Spalla, Charlie Weinert and Harry Greb. Three times he defeated Greb after Greb had beaten him. Incidentally, that first encounter with Greb told more about Tunney's brand of courage than any other battle, including even the title bout with Dempsey.

GENE was raw and inexperienced then, and Greb, holder of the light-heavyweight title, was one of the hardest men in the world to beat. Early in the clash the ex-Marine collided with Greb's bobbing head and got a deep cut over one eye. By the end of the third round he had lost much blood. He was badly weakened and almost blinded. It seemed he could not possibly survive Greb's flying fists. He caught enough blows to knock down a house, but he stuck through 15 rounds, to the final gong, and then, beaten as he was, issued another challenge to Greb the next day. They fought three times after that, and Tun won every fight, each one by a wider gin than before.

Now he is the king of heavyweights, to that realm he brings a character and sonality almost unique among battlers of prize ring. "Gentleman Jim" Corbett probably the only one in the history of game who approached his status as a of culture. Except for the fact that he large and has a powerful physique, his pearance suggests anything but a figh His eyes seem too kindly, his face too pl ant. A Famous Sea Mystery Solved

Half a Century Ago the "Mary Celeste" Was Found Sailing in Mid-Ocean, Shipshape and Trim, but With Never a Soul Aboard. Ten Persons Had Disappeared From a Sound Ship. Now the Son of Her Captain Tells His Story and Clears Up the Most Fascinating of the Riddles of the Sea

NEW BEDFORD, Massachusetts.

OUT of the mists and silences of half a century comes a new story—probably the true story—of the mystery of the "Mary Celeste"; that fascinating secret of the sea.

A Jonah ship from the st, she was pursued by Fate, for all that was built by hard-headed "blue-noses" Parrsboro, Nova Scotia, in 1862—a stout rmaphrodite brig, 282 tons burden. He was bound t, now, from the Port New York, for Genoa, Italy, and the Mary Celeste had a cargo rd of 1700 barrels of alcohol. And n Captain Briggs went down to the sea his ship he took along his charming ng wife and their baby daughter.

Ten souls, all told, were aboard the Mary ste. The master, his wife, their child, mates, a cook, four seamen. She put proudly, on November 7, 1872. For days she was not spoken by a passing l. Nothing unusual in that. The Mary te was not the safest of sailors. She have been driven out of the ocean to avoid a storm.

Then, on December 4, the British brig Gratia, Boyce her master, sighted the y Celeste as she yawed along before a wind about 300 miles west of Gibraltar.

THE MARY CELESTE MYSTERY.

It was just as h, at the next minute, master, mates seamen would appear and go about their . Everything was shipshape. Every- —almost—was in order. Her sun- ed decks were scrubbed. Her ropes coiled. yawl was missing from the stern, the davits swung out idly with dan- ropes.

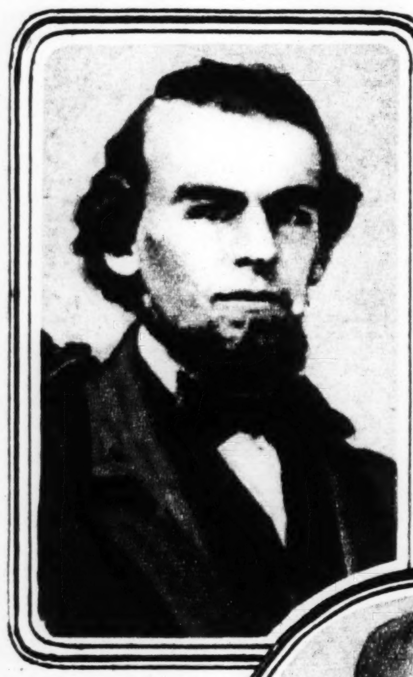
The long-boat's cradle on the forward house was empty.

In the cabin was an old-fashioned melodeon. And a sewing machine, and—showing that the derelict ship had encountered no foul weather—on the plate of the sewing machine an oil can stood.

On the floor of the cabin one of the Dei Gratia's able seamen found an old-fashioned cutlass. There were streaks of red along its blade—streaks that chemical analysis, later at Gibraltar, proved to be rust.

Her log, strangely enough, was properly aboard. The last entry was dated eight days before, as of November 28. "Weather fine," it said. "Wind light. St. Mary's Island six miles distant. Latitude 37, Longitude 25.2." In those eight days the Mary Celeste had made 600 miles.

Though the log remained, the captain's navigating instruments were gone, and yet again, by curious contradiction, his money was found in his strongbox, intact.



Captain Benjamin Briggs, the New England skipper.

Mrs. Briggs, wife of the captain, and a "good sailor."

In the captain's stateroom a pillow plainly showed the imprint of his little daughter's head. Above that pillow, hanging from a bracket, was the captain's watch.

In the stateroom of Mate Richardson, Captain Boyce discovered a letter just begun. "Fanny, my dear wife," it read, and the rest was silence.

Not a berth in the whole vessel but was made up, undisturbed.

In the galley everything was shipshape, like the spotless kitchen of a New England housewife.

Provisions in the ship's storeroom were plentiful, excellent, and all in proper shape—save that one drawer which had contained canned goods had been hurriedly ransacked. There was a plentitude of water on board.

On deck, Captain Boyce found the forward hatch uncovered. It was thrown upside down. That wasn't sailor-like. Just like the log that was left behind, the sails that were partly furled. It would puzzle any seaman.

In the hold was no sign of man. And none of water. There was the cargo of alcohol intact. Except that perhaps a few barrels had been stove in. But that is not certain. The record is doubtful on the point.

Returning to the deck Captain Boyce noted athwart the forward hatch some reddish stains. They may, or they may not, have been blood.

The Dei Gratia put aboard a crew and worked the Mary Celeste to Gibraltar. Captain J. H. Winchester, who owned the other seven-eighths of the Yankee vessel, attended proceedings in the admiralty courts there. Only one significant fact was revealed. The Mary Celeste had no long-boat when she sailed. It had been smashed when two barrels of alcohol slipped from the sling as she was being loaded in New York. Captain Briggs had written his associate he must replace it. He had somehow failed to do so.

SUGGESTED EXPLANATIONS.

THOSE are the facts. Somewhere within them may be the key to the secret of the sea. Here are ten persons vanished without a trace. What mystery has engulfed them? Piracy? Murder? Rapine? Plague? Disaster? A maniacal fury? Or a sudden threat? A thousand clever minds have tried to answer. These are some of the ways the riddle was unriddled:

1. Pirates.

The theory of Moroccan pirates was first advanced at the time but was exploded by the absence of signs of a fight, and by the fact that money and cargo were untouched.

2. Sherlock Holmes Tries.

Ten years after the Mary Celeste was found, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, then plain Conan Doyle, put his mind to the mystery. He failed to solve it, save by pure fiction. His story, "J. Habakuk Jephson's Statement," was published in 1884. It suggests that the Marie Celeste, as he calls her, had a "checkerboard"—that is, a black and white — crew, and that the Negroes killed the master, his wife and child and their white shipmates, and, after sailing to Africa to found an empire of their own, turned the ship adrift. That was the best the creator of "Sherlock Holmes" could do.

3. Authors Band Together.

Four famous British authors — Morley Roberts, writer of stori [illegible] of the sea; Arthur Morrison, writer of d [illegible] ctive tales; Horace Annesley Vachell, [illegible] morist, and Barry Pain, short-story writer [illegible] d a critic of that art—attempted to solve [illegible] mystery in the Strand Magazine for Ju [illegible] 1912. The humorist probably won the d [illegible] The story ran that the captain, in a fi [illegible] f dementia, challenged the crew to swim [illegible] nd the vessel. And that all had been se [illegible] by cramps and drowned. A big wave, [illegible] eping the vessel as they sank, had carried away the mother and her babe.

4. Fosdyk and the Baby's Quarter-Deck.

That gave rise to the announcement by one Abel Fosdyk that he had been a member of the Mary Celeste's crew. Captain Briggs, he said, had directed the ship's carpenter to construct a platform out of two old doors with railings at the sides and end, and this was attached to the bow-sprit for the "7-year-old" baby to play on. Captain Briggs, he said, became demented and jumped into the sea to swim. A shark was seen ahead. Mrs. Briggs and every hand on board rushed out to the "baby's quarter-deck" in their anxiety for the skipper. It gave way and Fosdyk, who clung to the floating platform as a raft, was the only one to survive.

5. Bo's'n Triggs and Pirate Gold.

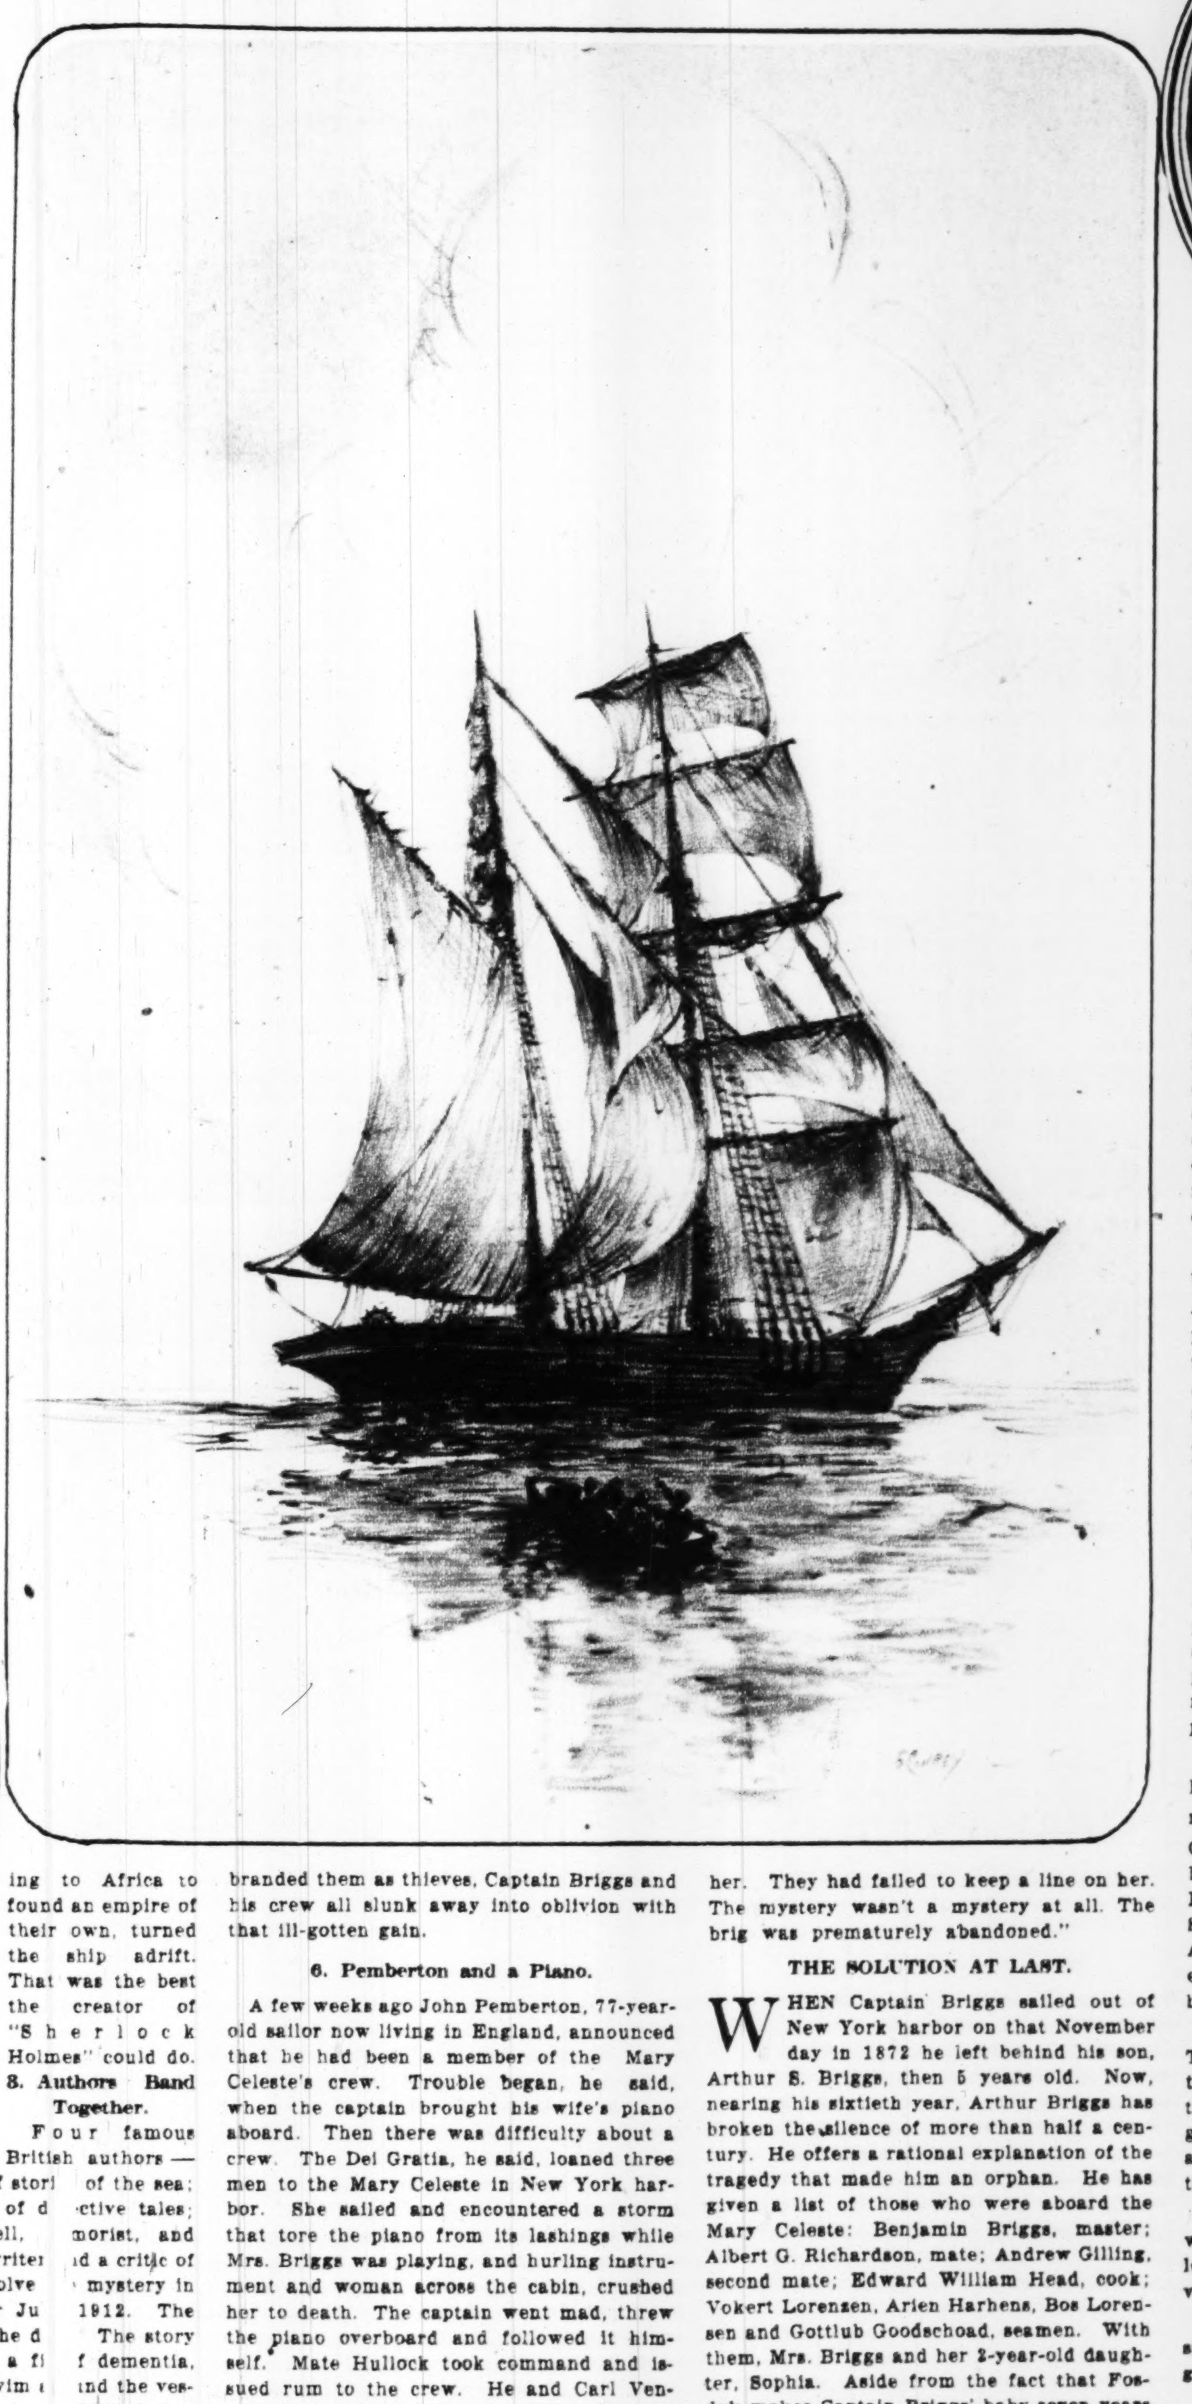
Other "survivors" followed in his train. One was "Triggs" according to Captain H. Lucy, who spun the yarn after his return from the Yellow Sea. Somewhere east of Suez he'd met Triggs. The latter claimed to have been bo's'n of the Marie Celeste. She was within 24 hours of the coast of Spain, he said, when the brigantine sighted a derelict. Captain Briggs went aboard and found $18,000 in silver and gold. The derelict was sunk by opening her seacocks. That money was divided—according to a circumstantial story—among the crew, the master getting $6000. And, since conscience branded them as thieves, Captain Briggs and his crew all slunk away into oblivion with that ill-gotten gain.

6. Pemberton and a Piano.

A few weeks ago John Pemberton, 77-year-old sailor now living in England, announced that he had been a member of the Mary Celeste's crew. Trouble began, he said, when the captain brought his wife's piano aboard. Then there was difficulty about a crew. The Dei Gratia, he said, loaned three men to the Mary Celeste in New York harbor. She sailed and encountered a storm that tore the piano from its lashings while Mrs. Briggs was playing, and hurling instrument and woman across the cabin, crushed her to death. The captain went mad, threw the piano overboard and followed it himself. Mate Hullock took command and issued rum to the crew. He and Carl Venholt, a shanghaied farmer, quarreled and Venholdt in the scuffle went overboard. Then Hullock, drunk, took the two remaining American seamen and deserted his ship, declaring he never wanted to see it again. The Dei Gratia men stood to the brigantine for all that they were drunk, until the Dei Gratia was sighted. The latter's captain took command then of the second vessel, leaving his three aboard to work her, and brought her into port as a "derelict," because, as salvage, she was worth much more as an abandoned vessel than as one which, with even part of a crew aboard, was in need of aid.

7. Captain Boyce's Story.

After these fantastic tales it is a relief to come upon Captain C. B. Parsons, master of the schooner Charles Marford, who offers an explanation of the mystery as it was given him by Captain Boyce of the Dei Gratia in Havana harbor. The Mary Celeste, according to Boyce's story to the American skipper, was six miles from St. Mary's Island as recorded in her log. The weather was fine. The wind light. St. Mary's has a dangerous coast. It rises abruptly on the northerly side, several hundred feet above the sea. The current sets in strong. "I believe the Mary Celeste in a calm drifted near that island," said Captain Boyce. "The captain took fright and decided to abandon her long enough to see if she was going ashore. No sooner were all in the yawl than a puff of wind filled out her sails and though they rowed like mad they never overtook her. They had failed to keep a line on her. The mystery wasn't a mystery at all. The brig was prematurely abandoned."



THE SOLUTION AT LAST.

WHEN Captain Briggs sailed out of New York harbor on that November day in 1872 he left behind his son, Arthur S. Briggs, then 5 years old. Now, nearing his sixtieth year, Arthur Briggs has broken the silence of more than half a century. He offers a rational explanation of the tragedy that made him an orphan. He has given a list of those who were aboard the Mary Celeste: Benjamin Briggs, master; Albert G. Richardson, mate; Andrew Gilling, second mate; Edward William Head, cook; Vokert Lorenzen, Arien Harhens, Bos Lorensen and Gottlub Goodschoad, seamen. With them, Mrs. Briggs and her 2-year-old daughter, Sophia. Aside from the fact that Fosdyk makes Captain Briggs' baby seven years old, that Triggs takes no account of Mrs. Briggs or the baby, and that Pemberton doesn't bother to mention the baby at all and makes a piano of the melodeon, it is quite evident from the ship and family records that not one of those three men was aboard the Mary Celeste.

The Dei Gratia couldn't have loaned the Mary Celeste three sailors, for she was in Liverpool while the Mary Celeste was in New York harbor. The mate and the others couldn't have gotten drunk, for Captain Briggs was a teetotaler who wouldn't stand a drinking man about him. And it doesn't stand to reason that an eighth owner, and master, of a profitable ship would abandon her and her cargo for a $6000 share of spoil he gained by piracy, and would steal away into exile and obscurity, abandoning the son he had left ashore.

Captain Briggs was quite a different type. A stern, God-fearing skipper, who read each day a chapter from his Bible. And the presence of his wife—"a good sailor" he had called her—only reinforced his rock-ribbed character. She was the daughter of a pioneer missionary in the West. And the melodeon she took upon her journey was one her father used to play in those far missions. His son was only left behind because he was big enough not to require an infant's care and, as the spartan mother said, two children would probably be a burden to the ship.

Arthur S. Briggs, 5 years old when his father, mother and sister sailed, who breaks silence now as he nears 60.

So far the facts are clear. In the salvage court, there was testimony that some barrels of alcohol had been stove in. That testimony was not clear. But it gives a clew.

A cargo of alcohol sometimes explodes. Alcohol evaporates at a low temperature. It is quickly susceptible to heat, in which it passes off as gas. Nor is the constant movement of a vessel likely to reduce the possible volatilization. The Mary Celeste's cargo had been loaded in chill New York weather. Now as she neared the Azores and the temperature increased as it would increase in the neighborhood of the Azores and opposite the southern coast of Spain the alcoholic gases, confined in the air-tight barrels, began to rumble.

Sailors know that warning sound and fear it. Marine underwriters, who assert that possibility of explosion must be considered in insuring a cargo of alcohol, are cognizant of that warning. Sometimes the explosion does not occur. Sometimes it is light—only a portion of the cargo is damaged. The explosion of one barrel, or even more, does not necessarily mean the explosion of the entire cargo.

That such an explosion impended and threatened gravest danger is the belief of Arthur Briggs, who had advanced that solution after his years of silence and whose theory was approved by Captain J. H. Winchester, the major owner of the vessel; Captain J. H. Briggs, a brother of Captain Benjamin Briggs of the fated vessel; Dr. Oliver W. Cobb of Easthampton, Massachusetts, a cousin, and Frederick K. Sheppherd of Buffalo, New York, who for years has sought solution of the mystery.

"A cargo of alcohol sometimes explodes and usually rumbles before exploding," explained Dr. Cobb to John Lafitte, who persuaded the family to break its silence and published the result recently in a copyrighted story in the Boston Post. That explanation runs as follows:

"It may have been well after breakfast had been cleared away in the cabin on the morning after the last entry in the Mary Celeste's log, when the vessel would have been about 100 miles from St. Mary's. Probably the temperature was rising; for St. Mary's is the most southerly of the Azores. The cargo heated in the hold. Gas, escaping from the alcohol, began to rumble.

"Captain Briggs knew the danger well. The crew knew. Seamen may be brave, but they do not forget their fears. The lives of the seven men, the fate of his craft and cargo and, more than all, the lives of his wife and daughter were threatened by that gutteral rumble in the bowels of the ship.

"Captain Briggs," says Dr. Cox, speaking with family endorsement, "ordered the yawl lowered, for it was the only boat on the vessel.

"Yawl alongside, the work of taking in sail was begun. Someone lowered the topgallant yard, and someone the gaff top-sail.

"At this point there was, I think, an explosion that blew the forward hatch into the air and it fell on deck upside down.

"Possibly someone of the crew was struck, and injured, and that those were bloodstains found by the forward hatch, on a deck that was otherwise spotless.

"Expecting the destruction of the vessel at any minute everybody rushed to the yawl. Captain Briggs remembered his navigating instruments but forgot his log. He failed to lash the wheel. Someone must have rushed to the ship's stores for food and ransacked that drawer.

"They were intent only on one thing—to reach a safe distance before the great explosion they expected—the blast, the burst of flame that would engulf the ship and them. And they forgot to attach a line to the Mary Celeste by which they might be towed.

"The cargo did not explode. The gaseous air rushed up through the open hatch. The wind suddenly freshened and the brig sailed away from the tiny yawl—leaving ten persons in an overladen boat, 100 miles from land. The rest is a common tragedy of the sea."

And that, by every evidence of seamanship, is probably what happened. Yet at best it is only an explanation, not a solution of the mystery. The Mary Celeste, despite her woman's name, has kept her secret for a half a century. It is not to be wondered at. The Jonah followed her. On her next trip out she was lost in a storm at sea.

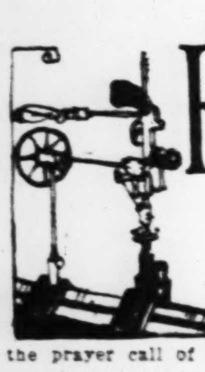
Science and a Blind Man Were the Witnesses When the French-Canadian Clubman Was Found Dead at His Desk. How Blind Mulhullin Identified the Man Who Bought His Revolver and How Science Proved the Bullet That Killed Beaudry Was Fired From That Same Gun.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch



MONTREAL, Canada.

FROM Saturday until Monday Death kept a vigil in the offices of "Le Prix Courant"—"The Current Price"—a market publication down on Notre Dame street, Montreal. Across the street the bells of the little, gray cathedral sounded the prayer call of the Angelus, and when morning came summoned the faithful to mass. And from early Saturday afternoon until late Monday morning Joseph Beaudry, publisher of Le Prix Courant, was huddled over the desk in his private office, a bullet hole in the back of his head. Another through his spine.

Shortly after noon, Saturday, Henri Bertrand, treasurer of the publishing company, had just stopped in to see the boss.

"Isn't it time to go?" he asked.

"But I've an appointment in a few minutes," answered the other. "Don't lock the door as you go out."

That was all, until, alarmed by his seeming absence Monday morning, employes of the paper broke in the locked door and found their chief lifeless at his desk.

They had done so at the request of Mme. Beaudry. She had tried to 'phone her husband earlier, upon her return from a week-end at Ile Ferret. Beaudry, himself, was to have spent the over-Sunday period golfing at Laval-sur-Lac. When she could not reach him by telephone, and learned that his motor car was parked in the areaway outside the office, the wife asked them to break in the door.

THIS the police could see: That the murderer had fired from behind, and unsuspected, as Beaudry sat at his desk. There seemed to be no other clew. Beaudry was well known. He was a social leader. He was president of the exclusive St. Denis Club. Only one secret could they discover in his life—and that is still unriddled. For 26 years he had carried a revolver. Not long before he had hired a private detective as a bodyguard. But, seemingly, he had been reassured. The detective, killed in a railroad accident, had not been replaced. The Chief who had assigned him to the work—and to whom Beaudry probably had confided his secret—had died.

Aside from that mystery—still unsolved—the police had this to work upon: Beaudry had been slain from behind by someone who shot with a .32-caliber revolver and who locked the door after the assassination. And Henri Bertrand was the last man to have seen him alive, so far as they knew. They questioned the employes of the publication.

Among the things that Henri Bertrand said was that he had never owned a revolver.

Then science and a blind man offered such evidence as they might have, and after hearing those curious witnesses a Coroner's jury in Montreal found Henri Bertrand criminally responsible in the death of his employer and associate.

The blind man is James Mulhullin, once a well-to-do piano manufacturer, but a man today so pressed by poverty that not long ago he advertised in the Montreal papers an old violin for sale—and a revolver.

Bertrand bought the revolver from him.

Granted that Mulhullin sold a .32-caliber revolver to a man he believed to be Bertrand. Granted that Beaudry was killed with a .32-caliber revolver. How were police to prove that Bertrand did buy the weapon and that the weapon was the lethal one?

ASIDE from his connection with Le Prix Courant, Bertrand did some "outside work" as an accountant. In 1923, while Mulhullin was still prosperous, Bertrand had done some work for him. Did Bertrand know it was the blind man who offered to sell that revolver? Mulhullin doubts it. He had moved to a meager street in the interim. But the fact remains the blind man recognized his visitor when Bertrand came to buy the pistol, and named the man before Bertrand named himself.

Reticent police have failed to designate a motive for the crime. But the Coroner's jury which returned a verdict accusing Henri Bertrand heard the evidence of Noel E. Lanoix, a former employe, who had put some money into the Beaudry publishing business.

"Bertrand established the fact that Beaudry took from $12,000 to $18,000 a year out of the business, which was needing money," he said. "He told me if there was no Mr. Beaudry getting such sums the business would be excellent.

"Since the murder he asked me if there was any possibility of my being able to return and aid him."

If Beaudry was not getting such sums . . . the blind man had a pistol he would sell . . . those are established facts.

And police established that Bertrand bought the pistol. They haven't told just how. Everybody was talking about the murder. It is not impossible that Mulhullin said: "Why, to be sure, Bertrand did have a pistol. I sold it to him myself."

"I did not mean to get Bertrand into this trouble," says Mulhullin, "but the police, some way or other, just found out."

To them the blind man told his story: "I recognized Mr. Bertrand when he entered the room and said: 'Where are the revolver and violin you advertised?'

"I recognized his voice because he spoke so familiarly. I said: 'Is that you, Bertrand? Come in.' 'Hello, Brother Mulhullin,' he said. I found the gun in a drawer and passed it to him, and I went to look for the violin. He asked if I had any cartridges—I think he called them 'things.' Mine didn't fit very well. 'Then I'll get some,' he said. I told him the price was $10. He hesitated for a minute, and then said: 'Sold.'

"After he got the revolver he didn't talk much and seemed to be in a hurry. He remarked about wanting a violin for his little boy, and then he said: 'I am somewhat in a hurry. I've a taxi waiting.' He promised to telephone about the violin.

"I had met Bertrand on several occasions and took particular notice of his voice. It is a voice that blind people will remember. And I know he is a big man. I think he is bigger than I am. I have dined with him. I have a pretty good idea of him. I sized him up in the God-given way blind people have. We have a particular way of weighing people. It is a kind of secret among the blind. It is a gift—our way of knowing folks. It very seldom fails us.

"After the murder, police, by following up little links, found Bertrand had bought my gun. I don't know how. But I had mentioned the fact, once, to my lawyer."

Mulhullin, later, to reinforce his identification, had no difficulty whatever in picking Bertrand out of a group of several people, by hearing the man's voice.

Of so much, then, did the police have knowledge: that the assassin who could lock the door of Beaudry's office after him, and who, entering, could fire upon the man from behind, might well have been some trusted one whose step, or voice, would reassure the victim he approached. That Bertrand was not satisfied with the conduct of the publishing company's business. That he had bought a .32-caliber revolver from a blind man. That he had denied ever owning a revolver.

But they did not have the revolver that killed Joseph Antonio Beaudry. And they did not have the revolver which Bertrand had bought when he visited the blind man on the third floor back in a mean street.

How to connect that revolver with the killing? That was their problem. The blind man, without knowing it, had pointed out the way.

"Before Bertrand bought my revolver," he said, "I let Charles Hockley try it out. He was thinking about buying the gun.

"He and Lee Barnes took the weapon and tried it out in Hockley's back yard. They fired several bullets into a post."

The police of Montreal got those bullets, after the post had been identified by Hockley and his friend. They cut away the wood and extracted the leaden pellets.

Then science became a witness for the Government.

Everybody knows that human fingerprints were established by right of law as proof of identity in the United States some 20 years ago. But few, indeed, are the experts who know that every firearm leaves its mark, as individual as a fingerprint and as impossible of duplication, upon the ball it speeds. Gunprints! Science says they are as sure as fingerprints.

THERE are marks on the cartridge, the shell, left by the breech of the weapon, against which the cartridge is forced by a tremendous pressure when it is exploded. These are striations—straight marks—left by the minute ridges of the file with which the breech is always hand-finished. The firing-pin also leaves an individual mark—a craterlike depression—upon the cap—the primer—which it explodes to touch off the charge of powder. This, too, cannot be duplicated. But the shells that held the bullets that killed Beaudry, like the pistol, had not been found.

So that only the gunprints on the bullets were available for measurement, for examination—for proof that the gun the blind man once had owned had killed Joseph Beaudry.

Such marks there were. The grooves of the rifling of any firearm are never exactly duplicated, even in two weapons of the same make and model. If a gun be rifled with grooves 85-1000ths of an inch wide there will be in every weapon a permissible variation of a few thousandths of an inch from groove to groove around the bore. That variation is never exactly alike in two weapons.

Science, with its delicate measuring instruments, places the revolver in a helixometer, a miniature periscope. The investigator looks into the muzzle of the gun. The width of the rifle groove exactly below the front sight is measured. Clockwise, the investigator measures the next and then the next, and on around the cylinder. Perhaps the first groove is exactly 85-1000ths of an inch. The second may be 2-1000ths wider, the third 3-1000ths narrower. But the very next barrel by the very same maker may show the second groove narrower than the first, the third groove wider. Those grooves leave their pattern on the bullet shot from each weapon. And the pattern will differ, to correspond exactly with the barrel from which it was fired.

Regardless of how carefully a gun is made there will result in the process of manufacture slight imperfections in its bore. They are unavoidable. Mechanical perfection, like human perfection, does not exist. These irregularities of bore are visible to the eye than is the saw-edge razor blade. As the weapon is used velops more and grosser irregularities barrel. "Pits," they are called—due spots and particles of fouling metal. of these also leaves its mark—a fine, wise striation on the bullet. Those lines, visible on any bullet, are unmis clear beneath a microscope.

So the police of Montreal took the in their possession—the lethal pellets the body of Joseph Beaudry and the bits they had dug from the post in ley's yard. They examined them under microscope. The marks were identical.

They were photographed under a ing lens. So exactly did the striation cide that the fatal bullets and the could not be told apart in photographs.

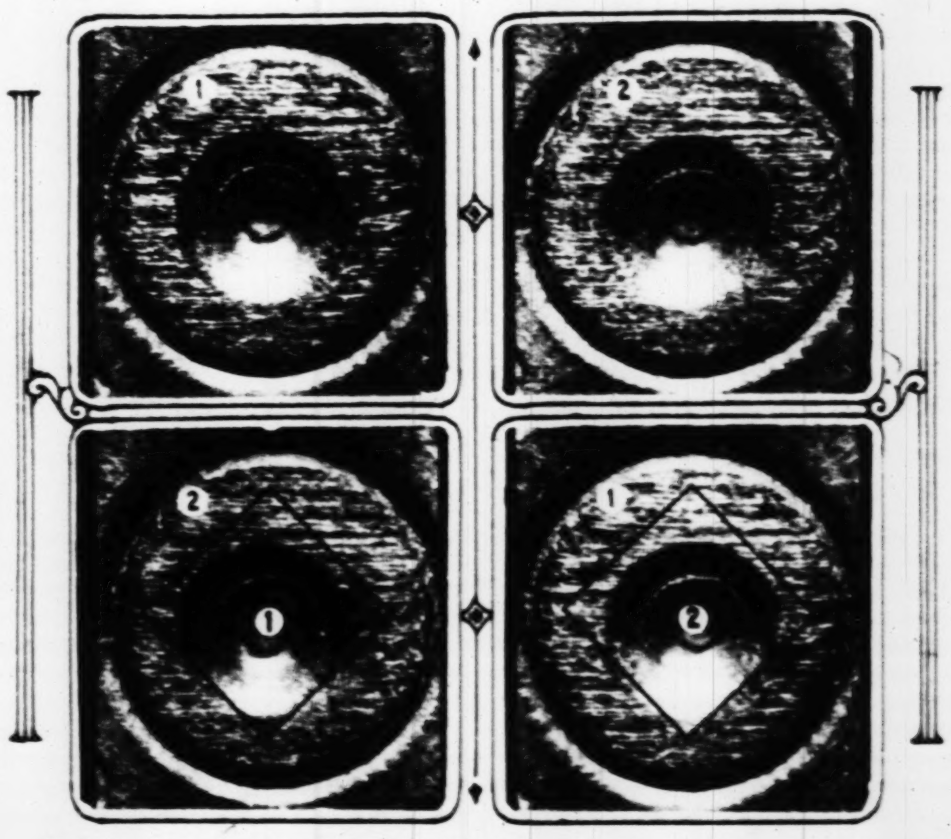
Then the pictures were beheaded. top of a guiltless bullet was moved over the right, the butt of another to the and superimposed upon the photograph the one that killed. So that—as is photograph reproduced herewith—pho graphs of different parts of three were to make a photograph of one bullet. marks fitted exactly, as can be seen.

EXPERTS measured and noted. Wilfred Derome of the Morgue testified: "I have comparison, studied the different mark normal and unique. And I think I that the bullets were fired from the revolver."

And Dr. Rosario Fontaine, upon the ness stand, told the Coroner's jury the bullets secured from the two there were not less than 16 identical characteristic markings.

Was Henri Bertrand fearful lest dry's expensive ways would wreck the ing business which Beaudry headed which he was the treasurer? Did he his chief out of the way because "I were no Beaudry getting such business would be excellent?" Did he deliberately to purchase his revolver blind man, in the hope that his could never be known? And, his chieftain, did he slay the man? A jury in the Dominion's have to say. But the eight men who up the Coroner's jury were quick about verdict. It took them about five to agree. And this is what they said:

"We, the undersigned jurors, heard the proof, declare that J. A. Beaudry died at Montreal on Au 1926, from wounds made by two bullets, one of which was fired into and the other into his head, by rand, whom we hold to be crim sponsible."



Shell No. 1 contained a bullet with which a man was killed. Shell No. 2 was fired from a suspect's gun. Squares are cut from the photographs and interchanged. The gunprints fit. Both were fired from the suspect's gun.

THE GIRL ROBBER'S STRANGE CONFESSION

After Getting Off With Five Years on a Holdup Charge, Ruby Ray Mystifies Georgia Officials By Taking Blame for a Murder Which They Don't Believe She Committed. Her Story Won't Save the Man Condemned for the Murder And It May Be Used Against Her in a New Trial.

Mell Gore, whose execution has been delayed by Ruby Ray's confession.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

ATLANTA, Georgia.

WHEN Ruby Ray was queen of the gang she was an I-don't-care girl and hard. She went along on most of the robbing forays and held up her end. Far from having any compassion for the victims, she taunted them. Always, there was the taunting girl, and by that the police knew that the different jobs were done by the same gang.

When, one night last December, William H. Cheek, who kept a grocery on the Peachtree road, was killed in a holdup, there was no woman along, or if there was she was disguised as a man, but the police believed it was the same gang, and hunted down the queen. She turned State's evidence and two men were convicted. One was given a life term in prison and the other was sentenced to die.

Ruby Ray, it appeared, was not along when the grocer was killed, but she had helped rob a drugstore, a little while before, and she was sent to prison for five years for that.

Life at the Milledgeville Prison Farm has had a strange effect upon the girl. It has made her capable of a great sacrifice. She has made a confession which may or may not be true. Officials fully acquainted with the case say it is false. However that may be, it has resulted in a reprieve of one man who was standing at the portal of the death-room and has exposed the girl to the peril of a trial for her own life. All this, seemingly, for the benefit of a man who has not been caught and may never be caught. But he was good to her, and she wants to do that much for him.

It is inexplicable, for Ruby Ray is not at all the sort of person one would expect to do anything heroic. She is not a heroic figure. Just a bob-haired girl, 19 years old, with a background of evil precocity, loose living and crime. If she has a redeeming quality it is her devotion to Jack Wilson. He was her "man," and, according to her standards, he was good to her. It is the belief, bolstered by good proof, that he fired the shot that killed Cheek, but he has never been caught. The nearest that anybody can come to solving the girl's motive is that she wants to protect him, in case he is caught, and that in timing her confession to obtain a reprieve for Mell Gore she merely purposed to give it a dramatic effect that would make it most useful in Wilson's behalf if he is caught.

ALTHOUGH the reprieve has been granted to Gore, to enable an investigation of the girl's story, it is unlikely to save him from the electric chair. It does not place him in a more favorable light. It was not charged that he fired the shot. His conviction was on the ground that he was present, assisting in the robbery which cost the grocer's life. Whether the shot was fired by Wilson or by Ruby Ray makes no difference. The ground of Gore's conviction remains the same. So Jack Wilson is the only one who stands to benefit by the girl's confession. Any benefit that he may derive will be at the cost of the girl, who, by her confession, has exposed herself to prosecution and probable conviction.

The gang, at the time of the killing, was composed of Wilson, Gore, Theo Berry and the girl. There is an intimation that others may have assisted in some jobs, but if so they have not been identified. In the holdup of the West End Drug Store, the day before Cheek was killed, Gore, Berry and the girl participated, and, if Ruby Ray can be believed, she played the principal part. She says she entered the store with a pistol in her hand, followed by Berry, while Gore sat in an automobile outside, ready for the getaway, and she held up the proprietor and Berry got $45 from the cash register.

They got away and in the car Berry handed her the money in his cap. She counted it and handed it back to him. It was not enough to mean much to them. They had plans for a big haul the next day. Wilson, pretending a love for work, had obtained employment with a furniture company. His ulterior purpose was to get a line on the payroll. The next day they were to make a try for it, but the next morning it was rainy and the conditions were not propitious, so they postponed it.

THAT night Cheek had his store open for such patronage as might come from the neighborhood or from the traffic that drifted along Peachtree road. It was nearly 9 o'clock when a car stopped in front of the store and two men entered. That is, they were dressed like men and looked like men, though if Ruby Ray is to be believed one of them was a woman. Cheek and his wife were there. He may have noticed that the two were suspicious looking, but if he did he made no sign. He asked them what they would have, and one of them asked for candy. He went behind the counter, picked up a "poke," opened the showcase and was reaching inside when one of the patrons flipped a pistol from a hip pocket and pointed it at him and ordered him to "hold them up."

Cheek did not obey as quickly as the occasion seemed to call for. Maybe it was because his hands were in the case and he had to shift his position before he could hold them up. Or maybe he made a maneuver to get his own weapon. Either way, the delay was fatal. The robber fired and the storekeeper fell dead. The two ran out and leaped into the machine and were driven away by the man who had sat at the wheel with the engine running.

There was nothing, at first, to indicate that the crime had been committed by the gang with a woman in it that had been committing numerous robberies, but when detectives, in inquiring at the hotels, learned that a man and woman, suspicious characters, had stayed at the Edgewood Hotel the night of the murder, and that they had left the next morning, they had their suspicions.

They searched the room, and on the dresser they found newspaper clippings about the Cheek murder, wrapped in a woman's handkerchief. The woman had left the hotel in a taxi. The driver was found. He said he had taken her to an address on Rawson street. They found Ruby Ray there and arrested her.

FOR several days the girl sulked in silence, then she broke down and said the crime was committed by Jack Wilson, Mell Gore and Theo Berry. The latter, a boy of 19 living at Buckhead, was arrested, and from him information was obtained that led to the arrest of Gore. Wilson, said to be a Chicago gunman, was not caught.

Ruby Ray's testimony went far toward convicting Gore and Berry. She said that Wilson left the hotel that night to meet Gore and Berry. He returned about 10:30 or 11 o'clock, limping and muddy, and told her he had shot a man on Peachtree road and that when they were getting away the engine "died," and then when he was cranking it the engine backfired, hurting his left knee and throwing him down in the mud. The next morning Wilson said he would have to leave town. She helped him clean the mud off of his shoes and overcoat. She went with him to Marietta, where he boarded a train for Chattanooga. Since that time she had not heard from him.

There was other proof against Gore and Berry, and their only hope was to make it appear that they were less guilty than the one who fired the shot. Gore, however, was given the death sentence. Berry, because of his youth, and because he did not enter the store, but stayed in the machine, escaped with a life sentence.

Ruby Ray might have been charged with complicity, but they had a good case against her on the West End Drug Store robbery, and they convicted her on that and sent her up for five years.

September 14 was the date set for Gore's execution. The day before that Ruby Ray, at the State Prison Farm at Milledgeville, told Warden Dunnaway that it was she and not Jack Wilson who killed Cheek. It was by no means certain that she was telling the truth, but her statement introduced a complication and a reprieve of 60 days was granted to permit an investigation.

Solicitor-General Boykin, who had handled the case, was frankly incredulous. Gore and Berry contradicted the girl. Gore said Jack Wilson killed Cheek and Ruby Ray was not there. Berry said it was Wilson who killed Cheek and Ruby wasn't there, and it was not until the next morning that he saw her.

BUT Ruby Ray sticks to her declaration that it was she and not Jack Wilson who killed the grocer. Here is her sworn statement:

"The next afternoon (after the drug store robbery) Gore called me up. I was then at the Edgewood Hotel. Gore told me to meet him at the Henry Grady Hotel entrance. I did this. It was about 8:30 when I arrived. Gore and Theo Berry had brought a drive-it-yourself car, rented by Gore, and met me at the hotel entrance as agreed. From there we went to a filling station at Roswell and Piedmont roads. Gore bought some candy. It was our intention to hold up this place, but too many people were present. We abandoned this idea and drove a little past this filling station, turned around, came back to Piedmont road, traveled along Piedmont road into Peachtree and then to Mr. Cheek's store. We rode past Cheek's store several blocks and then turned back. We turned our car around and stopped in front of Cheek's store with the car headed north and the engine running. Berry drove the car all the time this night.

"When we arrived at Mr. Cheek's store Gore and myself got out about the same time. Berry pulled his coat up over his head. I wore a tan whip-cord suit of Jack Wilson's, his cap and used his pistol, a little, black pistol, except the top, which was of shiny steel. The cap I wore was also Jack Wilson's, of grayish color. The shoes I wore were also Jack Wilson's. They were black Oxfords, too large for me, but I could get along with them, all right. When I entered Mr. Cheek's store I called for some candy. I don't recall if I stated how much I wanted. Mr. Cheek was standing in the left-hand side of the store as you enter, and near the stove.

"When I called for the candy, he then went behind the counter, around to where the candy was located, and pulled off a sack in which to place the candy. I was in the middle of the aisle of this store, facing Mr. Cheek, when I drew the pistol from the right-hand pocket and pointed it toward Mr. Cheek.

"I then said, 'Hold them up.' Mr. Cheek then reached for his pistol behind some cigar boxes. I saw a glimpse of his pistol. I shot while he was trying to reach for this pistol. I also saw a long gun, either a shotgun or a rifle, which was in the rear of the store. I did not know I had killed Mr. Cheek until the next morning, when I arrived at Marietta and bought a paper.

"In our holdup plans Gore and myself had no signals between us. Before the Cheek holdup Gore, myself and Berry were in Gore's barbershop at Buckhead and agreed that if we got into any trouble that we would lay it to Jack Wilson, because he had escaped from the penitentiary in Michigan. After the killing, all of us got into the automobile, went toward Oglethorpe and then turned off from Peachtree. I do not recall the place where we turned off or the direction. We got stuck in the mud after we turned off from Peachtree. We got out and helped push the car out of the mud. I got very muddy. I lost the cap I wore. I do not know at what place I lost it.

"Upon my arrival at the Edgewood Hotel I cleaned the clothes the best I could and put them in a suitcase. These clothes were recovered in a hotel in Chattanooga. I gave these clothes to Jack Wilson in Marietta, and he carried them with him from Marietta to Chattanooga. Berry got off the car some place on Peachtree road. I got out at the Hurt Building. Gore carried the car and put it up. When I got back to the Edgewood Hotel it was then about 11 o'clock. Jack was sitting on the side of the bed waiting for me. I laid the pistol on the dressing table and have not seen it since. I had lived with Jack Wilson at this hotel about one week prior to the killing. We were registered there under the name of 'Martin.' I first met Jack at the Ivy Inn, a hotel on Ivy street. Something after 11 o'clock that night Jack and myself left for Marietta in a taxicab rented by Jack at the Hurt Building.

"I NEVER got my part of the money from the West End robbery and never asked them about it. Jack and myself arrived at Marietta after 12 o'clock and stopped at the Kenesaw Hotel, where Jack registered for us. We remained there until 8 o'clock the next morning, when I caught a car back for Atlanta and Jack left at 8:12 that same morning. I had intended going with Jack to Chicago, but changed my mind. I did not think there would be anything to it. We would not be identified. I have never heard from Jack since the time he left me at Marietta. I did receive a card with Jack's name on it, postmarked 'Atlanta, Ga.,' but it was not in his writing. Jack's things fit me fairly well when I did the holdup. I am larger now than I was then by 35 pounds. Jack Wilson is about two inches taller than I am. Gore never called me up after the killing. He did not know where I was; neither did Berry. None of us—Berry, Gore or myself—ever talked to or communicated with each other after the murder, up to the trial of the case. Jack's clothes were not altered. I wore them just as they were. The clothes I wore was a whip-cord coat, without vest, sport style, with belt and pleated back, and a gray raincoat to match. The boyish bob that I had at the time of the killing, Gore cut for me at his barbershop at Buckhead. I had talked to Gore about what Jack had done, and then Gore proposed that we go out and do some jobs, and said that Berry would be a good one to go in with us. We then decided on the Cheek holdup. I talked to Gore Sunday at the State Farm, but only about my confession. I sent and received notes from Gore while we were both in the Fulton County Jail.

"No one has induced me to make a confession nor suggested it. I made it freely, and of my own free will, and it is the truth that I was present and fired the shot that killed W. H. Cheek. Jack Wilson's clothes were worn by me as above stated, but the coat was too large for me at the time. My present weight is 146 pounds. While I was helping to get the car out of the mud the rear wheel skidded and hit me on the left leg below the knee and caused it to bleed."

It is possible, of course, that Ruby Ray's confession was not made in the spirit of sacrifice or even intended to benefit Jack Wilson or anybody else. It is a fact well known to criminologists that many persons who confess crimes are not guilty of them, but seek only to satisfy some strange craving for publicity, fabricating complicated and convincing yarns that often puzzle the most skillful of detectives. Such cases are common enough, especially among women. It is possible that Ruby's prison seclusion has played upon her nerves until she can withstand her craving for notoriety no longer.

THE only one who believes Ruby Ray is Mrs. Cheek, widow of the murdered man. She says: "I believe Ruby Ray shot my husband. On the night the bandits entered our store I saw the person who killed him, and I believe it was Ruby Ray, wearing men's clothes. I have believed that ever since Mr. Cheek was killed. The small, bright eyes of the slayer are fixed in my mind. They stare at me incessantly, and I think they are the eyes of Ruby Ray. I saw the murderer's hand, and it was small and white—too little for the hand of a man. When I went to the Tower to identify the persons arrested in connection with my husband's slaying, I saw Ruby Ray in women's clothes. I believe if I had seen her in men's clothes I would have recognized her as Jack Wilson.

"I saw the person who shot my husband, standing at the entrance to the store. He pulled his right hand out of his pocket, and I saw that it trembled as he looked at me straight. Ruby Ray, in her statement at Milledgeville, says that Mr. Cheek, when told to put up his hands, had some difficulty in getting them up, as he caught them in the showcase. Now, that is the truth. He was standing behind the showcase, and as the space was very narrow, and he had been getting something from inside the showcase, he knocked his hands against the glass as he raised them over his head. How could Ruby know anything about that if she wasn't on the spot? I had not thought about that particular circumstance myself until the Ray woman mentioned it in her statement. I have looked at several pictures of Jack Wilson and have never been able to observe the slightest resemblance between the man's picture and the person who came into my husband's store and shot him."

"Not at all the type of man I should have expected Clarissa to fall in love with." "And is she in love with him?" "My dear, you don't think Clarissa would marry a man she did not love." "No, I suppose not; and yet . . ."

And yet, and yet . . . That was the general sentiment. I heard of the engagement first from her aunts—and mine, too, for Clarissa and I are first cousins. They had brought her up.

"I own we don't quite understand it, Tom," said Aunt Maud, so cautiously that her lips hardly did more than motion for the syllables. "He's so different from the sort of men Clarissa has been brought up with."

"A very vulgar fellow," said Aunt Susan, speaking out loud and clear. "She'll be sorry some day. I don't understand it."

I did not like to suggest an explanation—that the vulgar fellow had a large fortune, made by the invention of that priceless benefit to a civilization gone mad about plumbing: the indestructible washer. (The washer, you know, is that small object inside the faucet somewhere, which, when you have drawn a scalding bath in a hurry, disintegrates, and prevents the cold water coming in anything but a trickle, so that you either parboil yourself or go unbathed.) I did not like to suggest the idea of Robinson's wealth, partly because I doubted honestly how much that had influenced Clarissa, but more because I am afraid of Aunt Susan; it is always assumed in the family that all of Clarissa's adorers are rich, noble, well born and intelligent, or else how would they dare aspire to Clarissa?

Robinson from the first had seemed to me attractive, the sort of man a woman might easily love. He was small, no, not small, for he was as tall as Clarissa, and she must be five feet six. He had bright, kind, brown eyes, looking out at you under short, stubbly, mouse-colored hair, like a forest animal out of the bush, so that your first impression was that Robinson was timid. Everybody called him Robinson, although he had a first name—James. Aunt Susan started the fashion in a mood of insolence, and everyone else took it up in a less hostile spirit. Aunt Maud had remonstrated with her sister.

"Really, Susan," she said, "what would mamma have thought if she could hear you calling a man by his last name."

Now this was exactly what Aunt Susan wanted. She replied: "I never remember hearing my mother"—she usually laid claim to her parents as if they had been exclusively hers—"I never remember hearing my mother address the butcher, the baker and the candle-stick maker in any other way. Is a plumber on a different social plane, in your judgment, Maud?"

AS SOON as Clarissa was married she began to practice that quality which the Greeks have sent echoing down the corridors of time as a virtue, namely, magnificence. No one was ever more magnificent than Clarissa in her velvets and brocades and jewels.

They built—at least, of course, Clarissa initiated and Robinson paid for, and the architect planned and agonized over—a Spanish palace in the east nineties. Tapestries from a monastery near Burgos, grills from Toledo, old tiles from Granada, pink gardenias and red camellias from the Cintra Gardens. It was an achievement. I understood for the first time what the family meant when it said that if Clarissa had been a man she would have been at the head of some great organization. She really had that rare and great and somewhat unlovable quality—executive ability.

It was the same quality which had led me—I regret to say—to strike her on the head, when, as children, we played croquet together. She not only played well, but she knew how strokes ought to be made; and told you, just as you missed an easy shot.

"You see, you ought to hold your mallet like this," she would say, as, with a sharp, hollow sound, she would send your ball bounding off into the brushwood like a frightened rabbit. Then it was that I hit her. My mother explained it by saying that poor, little Tom felt so badly—the head of his mallet had flown off. It had. That was why I hit her only with the stick.

Still, I must own, she did teach me how to play croquet, and she soon began to teach Robinson how to live. The world was aware only of the superficial changes. Almost at once his coats ceased to stand away from the nape of his neck, and looked as if they had been made for him. His hair betrayed signs of having been brushed. He was persuaded, reluctantly, to insert an "r" after the "b" in February, although he never, as far as I know, referred to the third day of the week as anything but "TOOsday."

But these minor changes were accompanied by deeper and more important improvements. His lawyers, who had been fighting a long, dishonest claim over his basic patents, told me that Robinson would have compromised the suit and settled it out of court, partly through laziness, partly through a sort of sympathy for all inventors.

But Clarissa would not hear of compromise. Clarissa, I confess, is a person who, when she is 52 per cent right, thinks she's a hundred per cent. Clarissa, in this case, had an almost religious conviction. She not only insisted on Robinson's fighting the suit, but she herself took part. She testified for him, and had the effect that a beautiful and noble-looking woman always does have when injected into a lawsuit. They won, and the difference was in the millions.

BUT the great thing she did for him was to clear out a band of insolent, pleasure-loving men, with Roland Parks at their head, who were living on him, using his houses and automobiles, going to Florida in his private car, fishing from his yacht, drinking and urging him cordially to drink his champagne and giving him nothing in return but a somewhat patronizing friendship.

Most of them drifted away to other green pastures, but Roland Parks did not go without a struggle. He knew Robinson was really fond of him, and he thought he could withstand Clarissa. He met his Waterloo over the purchase of her town car. Parks, I imagine, was to get a commission if he could guide Robinson to a new make of American car just being put on the market, but Clarissa had set her heart on a certain French car, and Parks stupidly let himself be caught in a lie. That was the end of him, and everybody was glad to see him go.

These alterations took several years—five or six.

Then one day Clarissa called me up at my office and asked me to come and see her that afternoon at 5; she was expecting a visit from a lawyer, and wanted my moral support in a matter of a divorce. Though I am a lawyer, I have never done any of my cousin's important business; she had not even consulted me professionally, but I have always been privileged to give her a little cousinly advice on legal matters.

I went, not to the Spanish palace where for six years I had been accustomed to visiting her, but to an excellent hotel, where Clarissa was roughing it in a corner suite on the fifteenth floor.

The place was full of roses and chrysanthemums, and Clarissa was in a purple and gold tea gown, with her famous pearls wound three time around her neck.

I have not described Clarissa. She had a well-domed, little head, covered with fine, smooth hair the color of silver gilt. Her eyes were a light blue, like a pale sky; her nose was perfect, her chin a little too heavy. She was not always beautiful, for she used no cosmetics, and so worry and sickness at times marred her; but she was always interesting and elegant. Today she was in the full vigor of her vitality; and suddenly I felt sorry for Robinson. It must be a terrible thing, I thought, to have had all this beauty and power in your life and to lose it.

She greeted me as if she never contrived to see as much of me as she wanted. "Sit down, Tom, dear," she said, "and we'll have tea before this lawyer comes—if this wall paper does not take away your appetite. In the old times I'd have had the place repapered if only for a week. But I've grown sensible. I have to. Did you know I was going round the world as soon as I get my divorce? Twice around."

"Twice for luck?" I asked.

"NO, ONCE to look it over and once to settle down and live several months or even a year anywhere I think particularly interesting. Oh, Tom, you can't imagine what it has been to me not to be able to travel. Robinson—well, it was impossible. Civilization is just a matter of plumbing to him. Paris or London was all he could tolerate, and he was bored there. Robinson has a noble spirit, and a strong, fundamental will; only his superficial sweetness makes him a prey to poor companions, poor habits, unimportant occupations. I have changed all that, Tom. Today he is leading a dignified life" (Clarissa cared a great deal for dignity, more than anyone I ever knew), "he is surrounded by interesting people, doing things that are worth while. I am like a soldier who enlisted for the war, and now the war is won. Or a business partner who formed a company to do a piece of work, and now the work is finished, I dissolve the partnership. That is not failure."

"Not to you," I answered. "How about Robinson, though?"

"Ah, well." She paused. "He is not really unhappy," she went on. "He thinks he is, just now; but you know, Tom, that no one can be really unhappy who is leading a full, rich, active life. I feel so confident of his going on now, to even finer things."

It seemed as if the moment had come to ask the great question. "Did you love him, Clarissa?" I said.

She nodded. "Yes, Tom," she said, "I did, indeed. You couldn't do what I did without love."

"You certainly did a good job," I admitted cordially.

"It wasn't easy," she went on, and I saw I was to get the full story of her campaigns. "Getting rid of that swarm of—of insectivora—that had collected about him. You can't imagine what he let them do—not through weakness, Tom—Robinson is not weak, but through a sort of cynical good nature. I have actually heard Roland Parks order Robinson's car without asking him, and laughing in his face if he objected. 'Sorry, old man, if you want it, but I've a golf match I really can't be late for.' I cleared them all out," said Clarissa, with a splendid, sweeping gesture. "And I made him see it was humiliating to be kind to the wrong people."

SHE told me the story of her remolding of Robinson, with special attention to the expulsion of Rollie Parks. She was so interesting that I had not asked who the lawyer was who was coming, until he was actually announced. Then I learned to my surprise that it was Sorby.

"Surely," I exclaimed, "that man isn't your lawyer, or your husband's?"

Whenever two or three lawyers are gathered together and wish to unbend their minds with a little happy conversation, they discuss the possibility of having Sorby disbarred.

But Clarissa knew nothing of him. She greeted him civilly, and offered him a cup of tea, and then she said, for she was never one to waste time:

"I believe you wish to speak to me about some business of my husband's?"

"Why, yes and no, Mrs. Robinson," said Sorby. "The business is your husband's, but I have just come into the case for the other side."

He developed his position slowly, but more rapidly than many lawyers. He represented a new suit of the Stones—the people who were trying to get Robinson's patents away from him. It took some time to tell the story, for he was not only telling a story, he was continually making the assumption that his clients were in the right and that she knew they were—only making it so indirectly that it was impossible to contradict. I saw what he was up to, long before Clarissa did.

"But why have you come to me?" she asked.

"Because it is recognized by all who followed the last suit that you are the cleverest lawyer in New York, Mrs. Robinson," he replied. "Ah, it is a pity. You could have made your fortune at the bar."

Now, this was exactly the sort of compliment that Clarissa thirstily desired. She knew she was beautiful and well-bred and intelligent, but to be told that she might have competed in the world of affairs, that satisfied some thwarted dream of hers. She smiled at Sorby.

"Have you come to offer me a partnership?" she said.

Sorby let himself be too much encouraged by that smile. "Gladly—yes, certainly, if you will take it," he answered in what he felt was the same light tone. "We recognize clearly, Mrs. Robinson, just what it was that beat us before. In fact, we feel," and he dropped his voice to a note offensively simple and sincere, "that with your knowledge of the case and your penetrating intelligence, you must understand perfectly that a great wrong was done my clients, and that now that you are free you will be glad of an opportunity to right that wrong."

CLARISSA looked at him in astonishment, but he interpreted the look as one of interested attention. "Of course, we should be only too glad to reimburse you for your time and expert knowledge—all the more glad, as we understand that Mr. Robinson has not been very generous in the matter of settlements."

At this Clarissa rose, or, rather, she seemed to float to an upright position. She said: "Tom, please see Mr. Sorby to the elevator, and order a taxi. I'm going out."

It was magnificent, but she could not leave it there—she was too angry. She now addressed the startled Sorby: "Do you suppose," she said, "that because I do not want to be married to Mr. Robinson I therefore want to see him cheated by a band of rascals? And as for your clients being wronged, my conviction is that they are quite as dishonest as you are. I hope I don't do them an injustice. Hurry that taxi, Tom. I have an errand to do."

Sorby could read a mind, but not a soul, so that he often found himself knowing just what people were going to do without the vaguest clew to the emotions that led them to action. Now, he knew at once where it was that Clarissa was going in such a hurry.

"I would point out to you, Mrs. Robinson," he said, "that it would be a gross breach of honor to repeat what I have just told you."

"Honor!" cried Clarissa. "A Mr. Sorby on honor. Good heavens!" And she went into the next room and slammed the door.

Within 30 minutes, Clarissa and I, for she insisted I should still accompany her, drew up before the Spanish palace which she had built. A car was before the door—a car which had once been hers. She gave it a long glance, and observed to me that the tires were no longer whitewashed. As we went up the low stone steps and into the grilled vestibule, her brows contracted and her eyes kept moving from point to point in growing dissatisfaction. I could not myself have said what it was that was wrong, but I saw the entrance looked different.

CASTLES, the butler, opened the door and she said, instantly: "Really, Castles, I should think, for your own satisfaction, you'd have the doorstep scrubbed. And the yews are dying from lack of water. Is Mr. Robinson in?"

Castles, I had always noticed, had a great talent for ignoring. He ignored all the first part of Clarissa's address, and responded merely to the last. Mr. Robinson was in the library.

Castles opened the library door and I saw again the darkly paneled room, and the old books, and the splendid portrait by an unknown artist, of the Infanta Eugenia Clara in silver brocade looking haughtily down from the mantelpiece—the room in which for years Clarissa had been wont to pour tea at exactly this hour.

But I think that what Clarissa saw first was that something other than tea was being dispensed. On either side of the fireplace Robinson and Roland Parks were sitting, with whisky and cracked ice and several bottles, opened and unopened, of soda water, at hand.

Roland saw us first and sprang up, more in anger than in sorrow. He is one of those sleek, brown men, well turned out, well fed—well turned out by other people's valets and well fed by other people's cooks, so that his smooth, healthy face is unlined by any form of care; and yet, of course, even his untroubled existence is subject to occasional annoyances—like, for example, the entrance of Clarissa. He did not conceal the fact that he was vexed.

"Why, Clarissa," said Robinson, politely, but to my ears a little too noncommittally.

"Are you just going out, Robinson?" said she. "I saw the car at the door."

"No, I'm sure you'll be disappointed to hear that I am going out, Mrs. Robinson," said Parks. He turned to his host. "If I find I can't get the car back for you, Jim . . ."

"It's all right," said Robinson.

CLARISSA had never yet avoided combat, and she now rushed into this one. "One moment," she said. "Just one moment, Roland." She used his first name, not in intimacy, but as a person might find herself recalling the first name of a former servant. "I have come here, Robinson," she went on, "at some personal inconvenience to tell you something you ought to know. Are you going to send me away in a taxi, while that man uses your car?"

"You should give us warning of your visit," said Roland. "Unfortunately, I have been promised the car for the rest of the afternoon and evening. Some people, you know, have a great respect for promises."

At this Robinson got slowly out of his chair. The hair at the back of his head stood out in little wisps and peaks, just the way it used to before Clarissa took charge.

"Have the car back in 10 minutes, Rollie," he said. "Anything of mine Clarissa can have if she wants it."

"And only five minutes ago," said Roland, "you were saying how pleasant it was to be a bachelor again." And before the thunderbolt could strike him he went out and shut the door behind him. From the fact that Robinson did not deny the assertion I suppose it was true.

"Sit down, Clarissa," said her husband, pleasantly.

But Clarissa was in no mood to sit down. "How can you have that man here again," she asked, "that grafter, that dead beat?"

"Look, Clarissa," Robinson said gently, "while you were with me I did all I knew how to make you happy. I changed my friends and my way of living and my servants and my tailor; and the way I spoke, I changed that some, too. But I didn't succeed. I didn't make you happy, and you left me. All right. There it was. But you oughtn't to expect to control my life just the same when you're gone."

"Control! Oh, Robinson," cried Clarissa, deeply hurt, as all dominating people are, at the suggestion that they attempt to influence the free flow of other pople's lives. "You wound me terribly when you say that. I never tried to control you. I only tried to throw you with more interesting people, to give you more important interests. Didn't you feel your life with me was more worth while than before?"

"Well, I always enjoyed having you round, Clarissa," he answered.

"But didn't you feel my friends were superior to—to"—she tried hard for a new word, but was obliged to repeat—"grafters?"

"Do you think your gang didn't graft, too, Clarissa, in their own superior way?" he asked. "Why, I paid enough annual deficits of charitable organizations I wasn't interested in to keep poor Rollie in luxury for the rest of his life. And I don't think they were very pleasant people, either—not as friendly as Rollie."

Clarissa sank into a chair, staring wanly at him. "You disappoint me hideously," she said.

"Too bad," he answered, not unsympathetically, and poured himself out a drink.

THERE was a pause before Clarissa spoke. "I don't believe you know," she said, in a deep, thrilling voice charged with noble emotion, "how it hurts me to see you living like this—surrounded by these ignoble people—the house run down—the servants careless."

"Oh, well, of course, I couldn't run the house without you," answered Robinson. "I'm selling it."

Clarissa bounded out of her chair with a motion very different from the slow dignity with which she had risen to overwhelm Sorby. "You're selling my house?" she cried.

"To some Pittsburg people. They think it's great; they appreciate it. They'll keep it up like a museum, just the way you'd like it."

"You can't sell this house," she said, with real passion. "You shan't."

For the first time, Robinson's calm was a little ruffled by this, but he only said: "Now, look here, Clarissa, I must do what I think best."

"But I know what is best for you to do, Robinson. You admit that?"

Robinson did not admit it, and Clarissa was for the second time deeply wounded.

The inevitable result was that they launched into a bitter argument, one of those marital disputes which is not merely the present conflict, but in which the ghosts of all previous disputes arise like an army with banners and rally to both sides. Silly ordinary phrases fell from the lips of both. "You were always like that," "I remember what you said once," "you never really understood," "that was what I always objected to in you." Clarissa ceased to be a proud aloof empress, and Robinson lost all the quiet mystery which had been to me his charm. They were just the universal, commonplace man and woman quarreling, and yet, strangely enough, or perhaps not strangely, for the first time I saw that they really loved each other—not in the romantic meaning of that word, but in the sense that they had in each other an eternal and lively interest, that their lives, whether they wished or not, were so entangled that they would remain so until death did them part.

It was, therefore, no particular surprise to me to hear Clarissa say at last, in the tone of one who has found a final reply—a last, terrible weapon:

"Very well, then, I shall not get a divorce at all. I shall stay. I shall move in again."

Robinson allowed a long silence to fall; then he said: "Don't do anything in a hurry, Clarissa."

The death of Columbus, from a painting by Baron Wappers. (Original in Brussels.)

AMONG sojourners in Spain, prior to 1492, there was a Genoese, by name Christopher Columbus. He was tall and well built, of dignified mien, with red hair and beard, a long, ruddy face, clear, gray eyes and aquiline nose. To inferiors his manner was exacting and brusque, to equals it was urbane and to superiors it was courtly. His figure showed to advantage, whereof he was not unduly aware, and he evinced a taste for yellow in beads and for crimson and scarlet in caps, cloaks and shoes.

Unlike the Spaniards, whom he was to lead, Columbus was not in disposition primitive; he had no relish for blood and suffering. He was, however, proud, with a measure of austerity; and he was highly romantic and strikingly devout. . . .

According to the findings of the most recent scholarship, Christopher Columbus, the eldest in a family of four sons and one daughter, was born at Genoa on a date between August 26 and October 31, 1451. His grandfather probably, and his father certainly, was a wool dealer and weaver; and the latter at one time also conducted a wine shop. None of his progenitors had place or rank, and his sister married a cheesemonger. . . .

The education of Christopher was of the most elementary sort. It consisted merely of what was provided by a school maintained by the weavers' guild of the town of his birth, in a little street called Pavia Lane. How meager his first advantages were appears in the fact that at no time in life did he assume to write his mother tongue, Italian, not even when addressing the Bank of St. George in Genoa. . . .

In the career of Columbus, Portugal was the first turning point. Hither he turned in 1477 or 1478; and here, in 1479 or 1480, after a trip back to Genoa, he married. . . .

IT IS a well-settled fact that in Portugal Columbus met pilots and captains and was enabled to accompany Portuguese expeditions down the coast of Africa. "I was," he says, "at the Fortress of St. George of the Mine, belonging to the King of Portugal, which lies below the equinoctial line." The object of such voyages was largely the discovery of new islands. The Canaries and the Madeiras, the outermost of the Azores and the Cape Verde group, all were treasure-trove of the fifteenth century, and there might well be others. In these times, indeed, islands rose smiling to greet the discoverer on his approach. Nay, more: where actual islands were not forthcoming imaginary ones developed in their stead. But were these isles as mythical and imaginary as they were represented? The question is pertinent, for upon the answer depends in good measure what we shall think of the nature of the incentive which underlay the voyage of 1492, the voyage resulting in the discovery of America. . . .

He obtained an audience with the King of Portugal and laid before him a definite proposal. He asked for three caravels, equipped and supplied for a year; and, in the event of lands being found, for the vice royalty and perpetual government therein, a tenth of the income therefrom, the rank of nobleman and the title of Grand Admiral. . . .

So affronted was the monarch by what he felt to be the vanity and presumption of the petitioner that he promptly referred his plea to a council of three experts, by which, after some deliberation, it was dismissed. Thereupon, Columbus, late in 1485 or early in 1486, left Portugal for Spain. . . .

In Spain, Columbus' first objective was Palos. . . . But if Palos was Columbus' first objective in Spain, his second was the court of the Spanish sovereigns, Ferdinand and Isabella. . . . Cordova now for some time had been the seat of government, and here Columbus arrived on January 20, 1486. The sovereigns were then absent, but returned at the end of April or first of May, and the coveted audience took place. What occurred is not known. Presumably, Ferdinand and Isabella, after a courteous hearing, willingly put by the question of exploration, for they referred it to the Queen's confessor, Hernando de Talavera, . . . who at length, late in 1490, reported adversely for Columbus, and the sovereigns accepted the report. . . .

Columbus would seem to have gone back to Portugal under a safe conduct from John II, but why he went, if he did go, is unknown, and by May 12, 1489, he was again in Spain and in attendance upon Ferdinand and Isabella at the siege of Baza. . . .

Columbus was poverty stricken and, for once, discouraged. With what cheer he might, he met his friend, the former guardian, Antonio de Marchena, and also (perhaps for the first time) the officiating guardian, Juan Perez, once confessor to Queen Isabella. By these three, under the stimulating zeal of the monks, a plan was contrived. Columbus should thoroughly canvass the maritime section, having Palos for a center, for all possible information regarding pioneer voyages into the Sea of Darkness. . . .

At this time, in Palos, the most important man of maritime affairs was the head of the family of Pinzon—Martin Alonso, "best-known and bravest of captains and pilots"—and to him Columbus would first have addressed himself, had not this mariner been absent with a cargo of sardines at Rome. . . .

NOT long after the return of Martin Alonso Pinzon from Rome, Guardian Juan Perez, and perhaps Pinzon also, wrote to Queen Isabella, asking a further hearing for Columbus and his project. The request was granted, and Perez was summoned to court at Santa Fe, before Granada. He set out in a manner truly Columbian, alone, on a mule, secretly, at low midnight. He was soon empowered to invite Columbus to join him. In December the latter came. Ferdinand and Isabella were in receptive mood. Granada was about to fall and Spain to be delivered from the Moor forever. A council was ordered—one like Talavera's, composed of philosophers, astrologers, cosmographers, seamen and pilots. With Talavera's council, however, the primary consideration had been the theoretical feasibility of Columbus' project. With the new council it was the practical question of ways and means that gave pause. Columbus, repeating with emphasis the terms submitted to King John II of Portugal, demanded of Ferdinand and Isabella a patent of nobility, the admiralty of the ocean, the vice royalty and government of all lands discovered and "a commission of 10 per cent upon everything within the limits of his admiralty which might be bought, exchanged, found or gained." That, in addition, he should demand three caravels, to cost possibly 2,000,000 maravedis ($6000), was by comparison trifling. . . .

As in 1486, so in 1492, in the month of January, to which we are now come, Columbus was dismissed a second time from the Spanish court and departed sorrowing. The royal flags streamed from the towers of the Alhambra, for Granada had fallen, but in this event our Genoese took little interest. His course led him toward Cordova. . . . When but two leagues from Granada, who should overtake him but a royal constable, sent posthaste by the Queen, with orders for his return! His demands, one and all, would be complied with. . . .

Columbus, on the twelfth of May, set out from Granada to make sure of the vessels. The pending expedition was unpopular in itself, and still more unpopular in that its Admiral was a foreigner. But at length Columbus obtained the three caravels—the Pinta, the Nina and the Santa Maria (capitana). . . .

Columbus set sail from Palos on August 3, 1492, at sunrise. . . .

MARTIN ALONSO PINZON, by circumstances and also perhaps by agreement, was an associate; and in his mind, evidently, the destination was Cipangu or Japan. As will be recalled, he had brought from Rome a "chart" and a "book," both of which he had handed to Columbus. Now, in the "book" was this sentence: "In navigating by the Mediterranean Sea to the end of Spain, and thence in the direction where the sun sinks between the north and the south, you will find a land of Sypanso (Cipangu), which is so fertile and so rich that by aid of its resources you will (be able to) subjugate both Africa and Europe." Furthermore, inspired by the "book," and also by Marco Polo, Pinzon in a recruiting appeal to the seamen of Palos had said: "Friends, come with us! Come with us on this voyage! Here you are in poverty. Come with us, for, according to accounts, you will find the houses with roofs of gold, and you will return rich and prosperous!"

WHEN, therefore, on September 25, Martin Alonso called Columbus' attention to the fact that, according to a "chart" which both were using, the flotilla ought to be sighting "certain islands," we are not surprised, for it was islands, or at least the island of Japan, and not a mainland, in which the interest of Pinzon centered. And when, on October 7, Columbus, in deference to the wish of Pinzon, actually changed direction from west to west-southwest; and when, on October 12, land—Guanahani or Watling Island—rewarded the change, it was natural that both Columbus and Pinzon should be convinced that they were in an archipelago of Asiatic India, with Japan not far away.

Clad in armor, over which, true to his taste in color and to his instinct for effect, he had thrown the crimson robe of an Admiral of Castile, Columbus, with the furled royal standard grasped in his left hand, bent low to the earth, which he saluted. His actions were imitated by the captains of the Pinta and Nina, Martin Alonso Pinzon and his brother, Vincent Yanes, who bore standards emblazoned each with a green cross. Then, rising, Columbus summoned to him the royal notary and the royal inspector as witnesses, unfurled the royal standard, drew his sword, and proclaimed the island the possession henceforth of the Crown of Spain, naming it San Salvador. . . .

On October 28 the expedition discovered Cuba, and on December 5, Hayti or Espanola. . . .

Later, Columbus identified Cipangu with Hayti, but Cuba he consistently continued to regard as the mainland, peering expectantly into its bays and up its streams for "populous cities" such as the Kinsay of Marco Polo and of the world maps, maps like Fra Mauro's of 1457-59, which he "saw" before leaving Spain. Having completed his voyage by "finding what he sought," though manifestly not "populous cities," Columbus set sail from the eastern end of the island of Hayti for home, on January 16, 1493.

Two occurrences hastened his return. On November 21, 1492, Martin Alonso Pinzon, impatient for the discovery of Cipangu (Japan) and the realization of those dreams of gold on the strength of which he had secured enlistments at Palos, had gone off in the Pinta for some prospecting of his own. Then, on Christmas night, the Santa Maria had been wrecked, leaving the Admiral with only the Nina wherein to continue his explorations. Thus handicapped, he had been forced to build on Espanola (Hayti) a fortress, La Navidad, where he left 37 of his men, and crowded into the Nina the remainder.

Pinzon had rejoined the expedition on January 6, 1493, but the Admiral was much vexed and not disposed to parley or linger.

IN STRONG contrast to the voyage out, the voyage back was tempestuous. Storms began on February 12 and so grew in violence that on February 14 Columbus placed in a barrel a parchment inscribed with an account of his discoveries and committed it to the sea. But he succeeded in making port in the Portuguese island of Santa Maria, one of the Azores, whence he sailed for Castile. More storms delayed him, but on March 4 the Nina entered the Tagus and anchored off Rastelo. Of the fate of the Pinta, meanwhile, nothing had been known since February 14, when she had disappeared, running before the wind.

By March 15 the Admiral was at Palos, where, on the evening of the same day, Martin Alonso Pinzon likewise arrived, having brought the Pinta safe into port at Bayona, in Galicia. But it was a full month before Columbus was received by Ferdinand and Isabella in Barcelona, and in the meantime Pinzon, already ill when he disembarked, had breathed his last. What light upon the great voyage to the Antilles might have been shed had Pinzon—forceful personality that he was—survived!

In Seville, where, amid much ovation, Columbus awaited the pleasure of the Spanish sovereigns, there came to him a letter, dated March 30, addressed to "The Admiral of the Ocean and Viceroy and Governor of the islands discovered in the Indies," and confirming what had previously been conditionally granted to him in the Capitulation and Letters Patent of April, 1492. . . .

Ferdinand and Isabella, happy at the success of their adventurous protege, which no doubt they had scarcely expected, were augustly gracious. Seated under a golden canopy in the Alcazar of the Moorish Kings, they arose to greet Columbus on his entry, gently deprecated his lowliness in stooping to kiss their hands, and made him sit at their feet. So placed, the discoverer of America, a master of speech, told his tale; illustrating it with the Indians, the sailors, the specimens and the gold. The monarchs and court then said a prayer, the choir of the royal chapel chanted Te Deum, and the ceremony closed. . . .

His half-dozen Indians, his 40 gorgeous parrots, his spines iguana and his gold — of the latter not more than enough to whet a royal appetite—together with the stories about "mermaids" and natives who burnt a queer herb, "tabacos," were about all in the way of wonders, ocular or auricular, that Columbus had brought home with him. The great thing, the super-epoch-making thing, though not yet understood so to be, was the voyage itself; the voyage itself and the will to make it. . . .

BESIDES the voyage of 1492, Columbus made three other voyages. On the second, which lasted from September, 1493, to March, 1496, and was undertaken with 17 ships and 1500 men, including his brother, Diego, he discovered Porto Rico and Jamaica; learned that his colony of 1492, at La Navidad, had been totally destroyed; and founded in its stead, in Espanola (Hayti), the ambitious settlement of Isabella. He also visited Cuba and compelled his entire ships' company to make oath that they believed it to be the mainland, the Alpha, or beginning, of the Indies.

The third voyage of Columbus, from January, 1498, to October, 1500, was undertaken with six ships and 200 men, to test the opinion of King John II of Portugal that to the south there lay a continent; and the opinion was sustained, for the voyage was signalized by the Admiral's greatest achievement next to that of 1492—the discovery of the mainland of America, at Paria, near the mouths of the Orinoco. Mistaking the land at first for an insular body, he soon came to realize its true character. . . .

By 1501 the Admiral had conceived the project of a fourth voyage, to be made with four caravels and 150 men; but before setting out, in 1502, he deposited his papers in safekeeping, drafted his will, and wrote to the Bank of St. George in Genoa, offering a tenth of his yearly income for the reduction of food taxes in that commonwealth. This last maritime enterprise was shared by his brother, Bartholomew, and his son, Ferdinand, now a lad of 14, and had for its main motive the disclosure of some avenue by which Asia—that part of it where lay the riches—might be attained. In short, Columbus had now come to realize that thus far he had failed to reach the country of the Great Khan. He felt that he must have reached Asia, but at a point lying to the south of Cathay and India. . . .

FOR a full year Columbus skirted the coast of Central America, from Cariari in Nicaragua to the site of Puerto Bello in Panama, hearing of "pepper" and of people in "rich clothing," of commerce, and of the "River Gangas."

In November, 1504, he returned to Spain, where Isabella, his patroness, was on her deathbed, so that his many letters to the Spanish court remained unacknowledged.

With some premonition of his own demise, Columbus now busied himself with his last will, charging his son, Diego, to provide for the maintenance of Beatrix, "a person to whom I am under great obligations; and let this," he continues, "be done for the discharge of my conscience, for it weighs heavy on my soul."

On May 20, 1506, at Valladolid, broken, discouraged and wellnigh forgotten even in Spain, the discoverer of America, Viceroy of the Indies and Admiral of the Ocean, breathed his last.

Mrs. Dumbly

Visitors on Way.
Oh, What a Calamity.
Artie Helps Get Ready.
"So Delighted to See You."

OF COURSE, I did cordially urge the Dink family to stop and see us when they motored over in our direction this fall, but I didn't dream they'd accept the invitation! If all the people one invites to stop off on motor trips were actually to come one would have to hire a hotel! When their telegram came Tuesday saying they would be here in a few days I was simply furious!

I wired them immediately: "Delighted. Come soon and stay as long as possible. Ready for you any time."

"Plague take those people!" I said to Artie. "I'll go right to work and clean up the back hall closet and straighten the storeroom and dust off the moldings, and you might begin cleaning the garage and furnace room."

"If I'm to play chambermaid to that furnace room all winter, I don't see why I should begin now," he grumbled. "When you invited them you told them they wouldn't be a bit of trouble and that they could take pot luck. You aren't going to entertain them in the back hall or the basement, are you?"

"You talk just like a man," I replied. "Now, I was just thinking that I'd put them in our bedroom and I could sleep on the davenport in the living room and you could fix up an army cot in the dining room."

AND then, right into the midst of my sleeping arrangements, came a telegram from Cracker Junction saying that they had decided to drive by Chiggersburg and would arrive at our house the next day.

"Oh, what a calamity!" I said to Artie. "I wish their car would blow up! Send them a telegram immediately saying: 'Ready any time. Can hardly wait to see you.' And when you go to the office today bring home a strip of linoleum for the kitchen pantry and some varnish for the garage door. Tell the laundry to send our washing back a day earlier if possible and get two new embroidered pillow cases—you know we've been short in bedding ever since we bought the car. Get some dog soap for me to wash Angel. The poor little creature hasn't had a bath for two days. Buy a new lavender blotter for the desk. Get a dozen glasses and two washrags and a knob for the top drawer of my dressing table and some shelf paper and a new rug for the vestibule and"——

Just then a telegram came from Blowout City, asking if they could bring their daughter and hoping they wouldn't be too much trouble.

And so I wrote another telegram for Artie to send: "Just love to have daughter. No trouble at all."

"And now we have to fix a bunk for little Castoria, aged 16," I said. "Of course, that last sounds like tombstone phraseology, but I feel in an obituary mood. For heaven's sake, help me take down the bathroom curtains. They always catch on those spring rods. And get a new soap dish and before you leave the house help me straighten those collars and ties and old letters in your top drawer. We'll let Castoria sleep on the davenport and I'll sleep on an army cot and you can sleep in the porch swing. My heavens, I hope they won't stay long!"

AND so I worked until far into the night with the vacuum sweeper and the self-starting oil mop and all those things salesmen tell you will make you live longer, but which really make you work longer, and it was after midnight when we crawled into bed. We were afraid to sleep late in the morning, for fear they might come.

At the breakfast table we got a telegram from Detoor, saying they would arrive at noon, and that they would like to bring Mr. Blimp, whom they had picked up in Rumville.

"What a bore!" I exclaimed. "How lacking in all consideration! The idea! Telegraph them: 'Sweet of you to bring Mr. Blimp. Looking forward to seeing you at lunch.' "

When Artie came home at noon I was ready, but I was trembling from exertion.

"When do we eat?" he demanded.

"Not until the Dinks get here, of course," I said. "They're likely to arrive any minute. You'd better hurry upstairs and change your collar. It looks a little soiled. I put your clean ones back of the fireless cooker, because I wanted Mr. Dink to have your drawer to use while he's here."

"I hope we eat soon," he answered, and he made the same remark every half hour until 3:30, when we got a telegram saying they had a blowout in Bumberg and wouldn't arrive until 5 o'clock.

We sent a telegram saying we were happy to see them any time. I took the best lunchcloth off the table, fed Artie on a newspaper and hastened to get dinner, for I knew the Dinks would be hungry when they came at 5.

They arrived at 8, having had their dinner in Gumption.

"And we're so tired," Mrs. Dink said. "Perhaps we'd better go right to bed. We'll have to get up at 5:30 tomorrow morning, because we want to be on the road at 6:15. It's been just a lovely visit to you."

The Happy Ending

She turned on him. "You don't want me back, Robinson?"

"Do you want the truth, Clarissa?"

Who has ever dared to say no to that irritating question? Not Clarissa. And so he went on: "I don't really believe I do."

Oddly enough, this did not seem at first to wound her nearly as much as the suggestion that she did not know what was best for him had wounded her.

"You made enough fuss about my going," she retorted.

"Ah, yes; but now I've adjusted myself. I'm a great hand at adjusting myself, you know, Clarissa."

"Is this what you call adjusting yourself?" she asked. "This slovenly, down-at-heel, disreputable existence?"

"Not disreputable," he said, firmly, admitting the two other adjectives, by his tone.

"And he doesn't want me to come back," said Clarissa to me. All the pathos of injured women through the ages was in her deep, trembling voice.

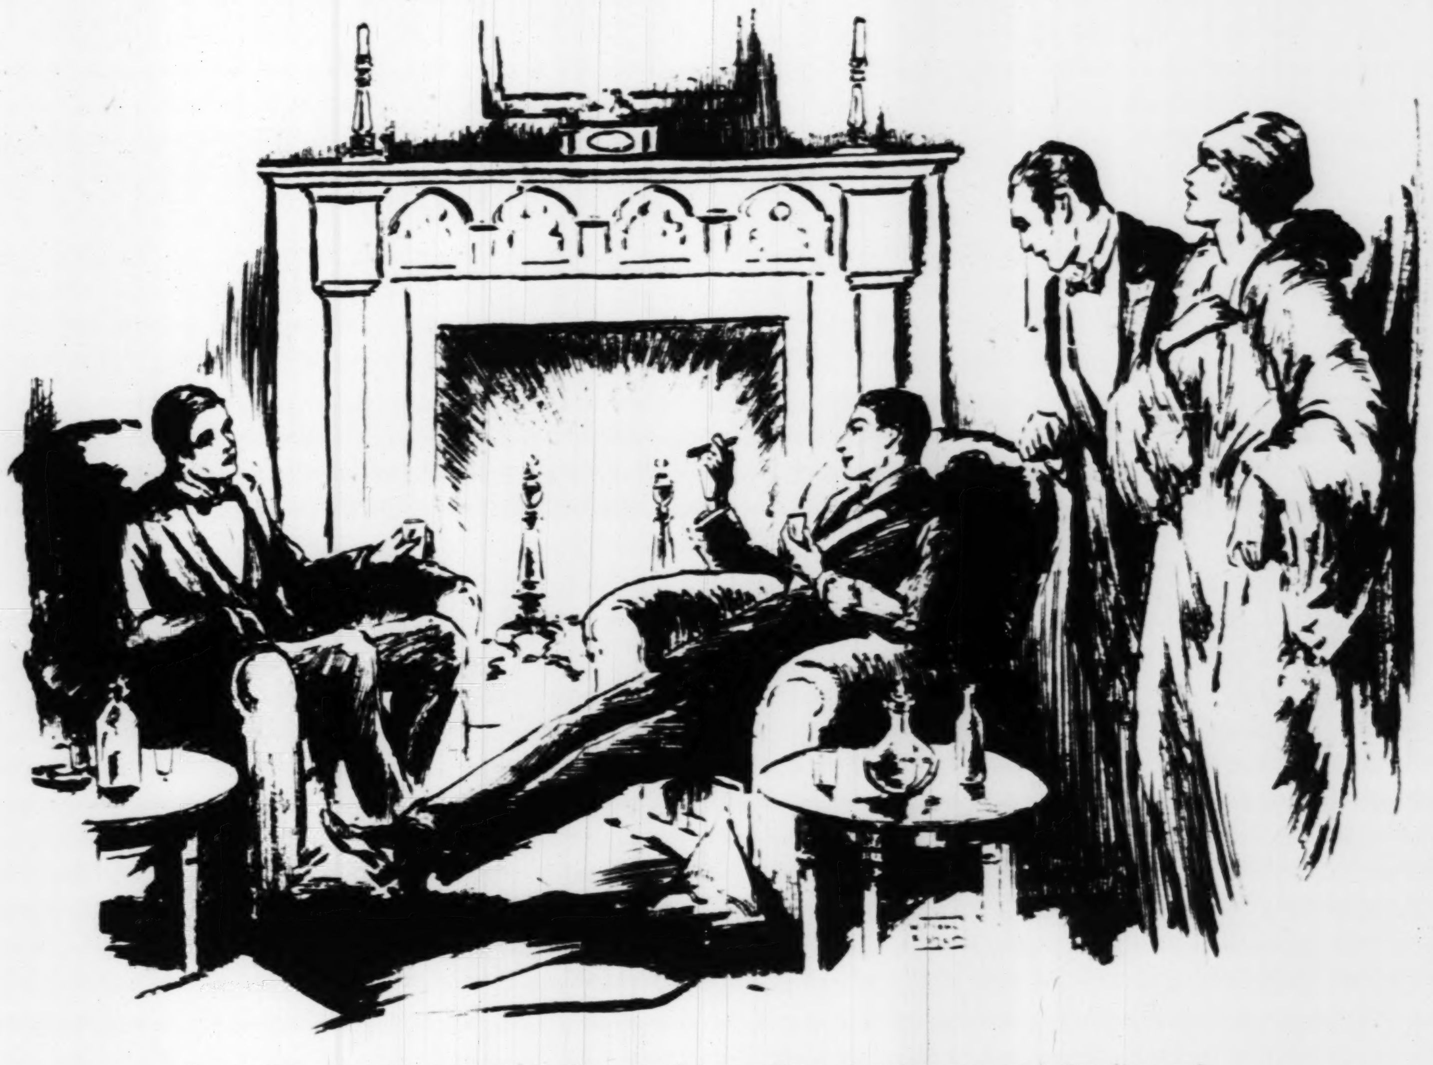
"Why, it's like this," he returned. He rose and took a turn about the room. "It's like this: If you were coming back because you wanted to—yes. But to come back like a sort of domestic traffic cop, why, I'm not crazy about that, Clarissa."

As Clarissa could not say she was returning from no motive but the love of his society, there was a silence. In the pause Castles came quietly in and, approaching Robinson, said in his clear accents: "Mr. Parks has just telephoned, sir, to say that he is sorry, but he will not be able to send the car back at all this evening."

I saw Robinson's eyes lighten with anger, and I knew that Clarissa had won. She must have known it, too, for as Castles left the room, not wholly unconscious of having been the instrument of fate, Clarissa seated herself in her accustomed chair, like an empress once more on the throne.

"Tom," she said, "will you go back to the hotel and tell my maid to pack my things and bring them here?"

There was no comment from Robinson, and though I shut the door very slowly as I went out, I did not hear him speak again.



But I think that what Clarissa saw first was that something other than tea was being dispensed.

But, of course, there was a great deal of comment from the world when Clarissa's change of mind became known. The family were delighted. Some of her friends said that a noble woman sacrificed herself when she saw that Robinson was going to the dogs without her, and that she was tragically unhappy, which I don't believe. Others insisted that Robinson was a subtle creature and had done the only thing possible to bring her back—which I think not impossible.

Roland Parks, obliged against his will to hunt up another suitable millionaire, said that Clarissa had come back to saddle herself again on her unfortunate husband. A little rancor was natural in Rollie, for I heard later that when he did come back to the house that evening a little after midnight, he found his bags all packed and strapped, standing in a row in the hall; and the impassive Castles, who had always hated Rollie, gladly waiting up for the pleasure of putting them on the car.

Americans Will Live on Top of Mountain in Africa to Measure the Sun's Heat

TWO scientists and a 16-months-old baby, accompanied by 55 cases of delicate instruments and supplies, departed from New York two months ago on a journey of 10,000 miles by ship, by rail, by auto, and, finally, by burro, the goal of which is the desert mountain of Brukkaros, in Southwest Africa. The party constitutes the expedition of the National Geographic Society, in co-operation with the Smithsonian Institution to establish the first solar observatory for the measurements of the sun's heat in the Eastern Hemisphere.

William H. Hoover heads the expedition, and his assistant is Frederick A. Greeley. The baby is Hoover's daughter, Betty Jean, who is in the care of her aunt. The expedition constitutes the latest step in the Smithsonian's 30-year-long struggle to get accurate measurements of the daily variation of the sun's heat and to correlate these variations with the earth's weather.

The first lap of the journey will take the expedition to Southampton, England. There Hoover hopes to get a ship which will land him at Walfish Bay, Africa, some 500 miles distant by rail from Keetmanshoop, the nearest station to Mount Brukkaros. The outfit must land there in small floats, as there is no pier.

At Keetmanshoop, the astrophysicists and their boxes will quit the railroad for a 60-mile ride by automobile. This will bring them within three miles of Mount Brukkaros—three miles which will probably prove the hardest lap of the entire journey, for it will have to be made by burro over a rocky trail mounting 2000 feet.

In the interval since Dr. Charles G. Abbot of the Smithsonian chose the site in March, the Government of Southwest Africa has put a natural cave in shape to serve as the observatory, has erected a dwelling house near by and built two reservoirs of 3000 gallons' capacity each. The Americans' first care will be to fit out their house with the necessary furniture, which they expect to obtain in Keetmanshoop. Afterwards they will carry up the instruments and install them.

Their luggage includes some 35 cases of instruments — pyrheliometer, bolometer, pyranometer and other delicate mechanisms originated and perfected at the Smithsonian through long years of experimentation. Fifteen cases contain photographic plates, one of which will be used each day to photograph the solar spectrum. The remaining cases contain a gasoline engine to generate power for the instruments and for a lathe; a gasoline stove for the house, some aluminum cooking utensils, books, a phonograph and a large quantity of records.

Mount Brukkaros is the most desert spot in a desert and the American scientists will have to provide all their necessities themselves. They may find it possible to hire Hottentot servants from the neighboring reservations. Isolation in the wild places of the earth will prove no new experience for either of the observers, however. Hoover spent the last two years in charge of the solar observatory of the Argentine Government at La Quiaca, while Greeley comes from three years at the Smithsonian observatory at Calama, Chile, preceded by two and one-half years at Harqua Hala, Arizona. Consequently the two men face their two years of isolation in Africa fully cognizant of what they may expect.

When they departed they expected to spend four weeks en route and a month in installing the new observatory, and that daily observations of the sun probably would begin in October. Daily cables of solar constant values will be sent to the Smithsonian Institution and there compared with values from the two stations in Chile and California. The Brukkaros observatory has been made possible by a grant of $55,000 from the National Geographic Society, which covers the cost of installation and of upkeep for three years. Thereafter the Smithsonian hopes to raise funds for the continuation of the observations.

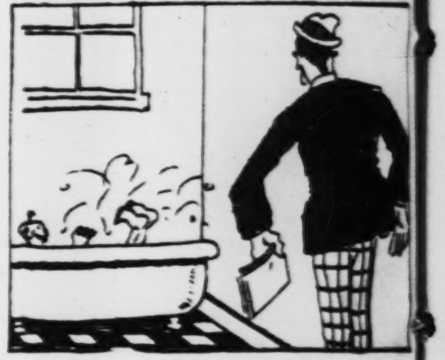
A Bath-tub Interview.
Then Gets a Different Job.

IN 1900 I turned over my medical practice to a bystander and went to work as a sport writer on The Rabies, one of the first of the so-called tabloid newspapers. This was long before the tabloids became so painfully reticent and dignified, and the editors of the various departments were annually selected from the graduating class of the Oklahoma School of Oafs. The sporting editor under whom I worked was an unrecognised cousin of Will Rogers named Henry Thwack. He had been sent to the school to be cured of a penchant for oatmeal and was given his diploma in spite of the very obvious fact that the cure was nowhere near complete. In fact, the first day I reported at his desk I found the same covered with receptacles of all kinds filled with the pompous cereal in different stages of preparation. "Oatmeal Haney" was what the boys called him behind his back, and once or twice he overheard and just smiled. There was no offending "Oatmeal Haney."

(Editor's note: Unless you deprived him of the cereal.)

(Author's note: That is understood.)

"LARDNER," he said to me, "there's a coming golf champion down in Georgia named Bobby Jones. He is now a year old, or will be in a few years. I want you to get a picture of him in the bathtub and a good, human nature, personality interview."



"But, Mr. Thwack," I remonstrated, "how can I get an interview with a man that age? Why, I don't suppose he can even talk plain."

"Age makes no difference with most Georgians," replied my superior, testing the cereal with his knee. "They hardly ever get so they can talk plain."

Bobby was splashing at a great rate when I was admitted to the lavatory.

"What are you doing, Mr. Jones?" was my first question.

"Me take a baff," he lisped. "Me no like baff. 'Min's me of a watah hazard."

It was comical to hear him.

(Editor's note: Was it?)

"How are you getting along with your golf?" I asked.

"Ah is jes' tryin' to mastah the spoon," he said. "Dis mo'nin' at bretfus Ah used it fo' de fustes' time an'——an' "—he laughed at the memory—"Ah spilt evahthing."

The youngster then posed for flashlights with the stopper out, with the stopper in, with the tub full and with the tub empty. "Oatmeal Haney" congratulated me on my handling of the assignment.

ONE of the rules in The Rabies office provided that members of the sporting department get weighed every day before reporting for work, and if they weighed over 135 pounds stripped (as most of them usually were), they would have to go into some other department. This was in the days prior to prohibition and I was drinking a great deal of water, with the result that one afternoon I tipped the beam at 141.

(Editor's note: There was also a rule against tipping the beam.)

"Oatmeal Haney" was loath to let me go and when I was ordered to report to the city editor he made a scene, which he afterwards tried to sell to the Follies.

The city editor, Tom Bilgewater, regarded me at first wonderingly, then tenderly.

"Well," he said, when he had regained the use of his voice, "you are a very likely looking fellow."

(Editor's note: Bilgewater was known among his intimates as "Blind" Bilgewater.)

(Author's note: You have him confused with some other Bilgewater. This Bilgewater was known as "Keen-eye" Bilgewater.)

(Wife's note: Dinner is ready.)

COUDERSPORT, Pennsylvania.

IN A MODEST furnished room near the Chautauqua grounds he sat waiting for the approach of his lecture hour. He was toying with his handful of treasures—symbols, he called them—relics of an ancient civilization dredged from the Sacred Well of Chichen-Itza, in Yucatan. There were the four perfect arrowheads: they symbolized the beginning of his career as an archeologist, a beginning made when, in pursuit of a boyish pastime, he picked up arrowheads on his father's farm in Massachusetts 50 years ago. There was the string of copper bells; once it hung about the neck of a beautiful maiden cast into the well, or cenote, to carry the prayers of her people to the rain god. It symbolized the Maya religion and the Maya civilization. There was the piece of jade he wore as a watch charm. Over it he paused longest. This way and that he turned it so the sunlight caught the beauty of its coloring. It was a symbol, too, the most significant of them all.

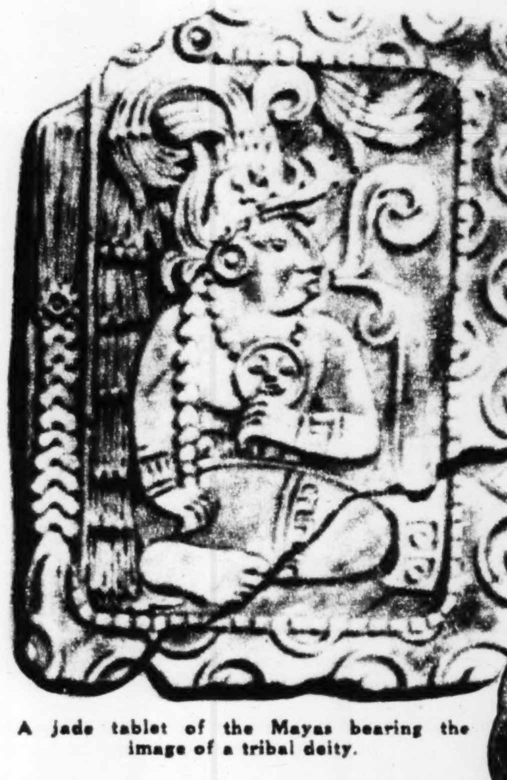
"In this," said Edward H. Thompson, "lies the real riddle of Yucatan."

It is the real riddle of Yucatan—the riddle of whence came the Maya peoples to the American continent—that Edward Herbert Thompson, archeologist and for a quarter of a century American Consul in Yucatan, has been trying for 30 years to solve. It can hardly be said that he has solved it. He hasn't. He has probably come nearer to solving it than has any other scientist. The vast collection of pottery, bones and ornaments which he dug out of the ruins and turned over to American museums—an act for which he was recently indicted by the Mexican Government on charges of theft—have shed their respective bits of light on the mysteries of this country's earliest known inhabitants. Date stones have set at rest some of the controversies as to the early history of the Mayas. Types of architecture have been studied with resultant conclusions as to artistic temperament and achievements. The bone structure of human skeletons brought from the depths of the Sacred Well after months of painstaking labor has been examined and has told something of the kinship of the race with other races.

All of these things have made possible more or less definite inferences as to what the Mayas and their civilization were like, but they have left unanswered the greatest question of all—where did the Mayas come from?

To answer this, Thompson turns to his jade watch charm; to it and to the countless other objects of jade he found in the Sacred Well and in the ruins of the ancient temples. Nowhere on the American continent has jade been discovered in its natural form. Nowhere in the known world has there been discovered jade with the quality and hardness of that offered to the rain god by the Mayas. Where did they get it? It has puzzled Thompson, as it has puzzled other scientists. Determine where it came from, he believes, and you will have determined where the race originated.

IT WAS to learn something of the man himself and to hear his own version of what his 30 years of digging had contributed to science that a Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine correspondent sought him here in this quiet, little, mountain village of Pennsylvania. He had just stopped over for a day to deliver a lecture from the Chautauqua platform. Somehow, the picture was pathetic. Age has forced him to leave the completion of his work to others. Years of fighting for a difficult cause in a strange, ruined land have left their imprint upon his rugged form. Thirty years ago it was a proud and ambitious young man, just budding into prominence as an archeologist, who went forth to his new post as American Consul in Yucatan, taking with him his wife and 3-months-old baby.



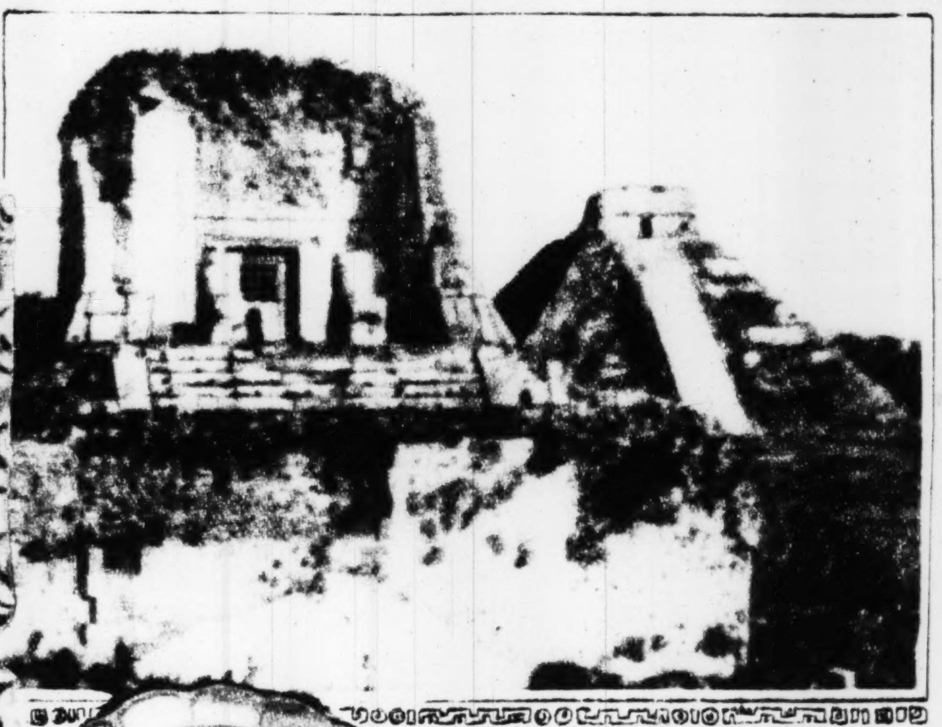
A jade tablet of the Mayas bearing the image of a tribal deity.

Today, it is a tired, old man who comes back, as poor as when he started, to gather such revenue as he can as a lecturer and carry the story of the Mayas before the public. His shoulders are stooped from lifting the weight of great stones from the ruins he explored, and from creeping through underground passages. He walks with a slight limp—the result of suffering for days without medical attention after a huge slab of stone had fallen on his feet. His face is deeply lined. But his courage has not suffered from the wear and tear of his labors.

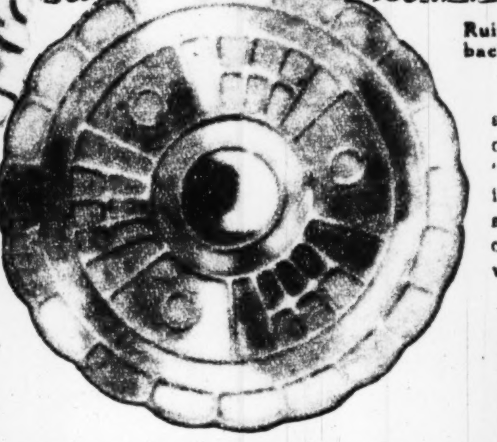
It is still what it was when, after he had passed the age of 60, he came back to the United States and took lessons in deep-sea diving so he might personally search the depths of the gloomy Sacred Well for treasures the dredges had missed. He did that very thing. Day after day he donned his heavy diving suit and went down into the eerie pool to explore every hidden recess of the rain god's palace. He spent hours at a time in the pitch-dark regions where only the dead had been before, and he brought to light innumerable articles of vast, scientific worth.

WITH these safely delivered into the keeping of the Peabody Museum of Boston and the Field Museum of Chicago, it would seem that they should add no more to his troubles. Such, however, is not the case. Hardly had the collection arrived when the Mexican Government brought action to recover it. Thompson was charged with theft and the two museums were charged with receiving stolen property. Not only was the treasure worth at least half a million dollars, Mexico alleged, but its removal from the country was illegal. Thompson replies that the vast value of the collection is only scientific value, in which the Mexican Government is not interested. The real bullion value of the jade, the gold and silver, he asserts, is not more than $2000.

The charge of "illegal removal" he characterizes as absurd, because the relics were removed from his property. He owns a tract of 28 miles square, on which are located the ruins of Chichen-Itza. This tract is now under lease to the Carnegie Institute, which is conducting important research work there, but has been attached by the Mexican Government in connection with the claim against Thompson. What Mexico expects to do with it is not clear, for the land seems worthless except as a field for archeological research, but the fact remains that the attachment order may prevent completion of Thompson's work. That is what worries the man who spent the best 30 years of his life in the Yucatan jungles.



Ruins of the Temple of the Tigers. In the background are the Great Pyramid and the Temple of Kukul Can.

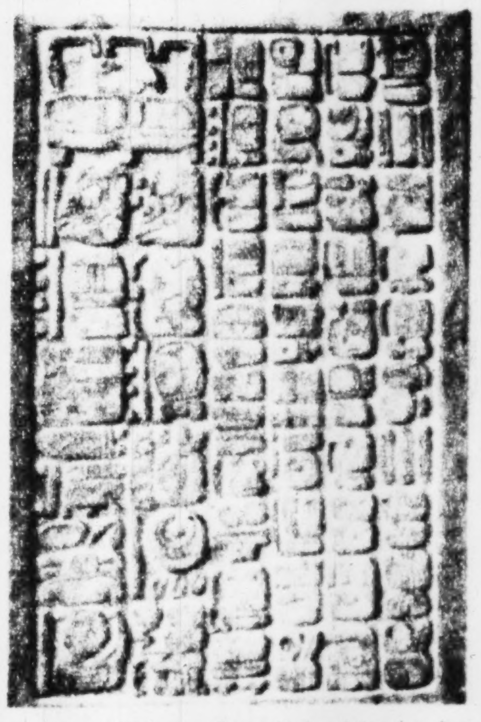


A disc of pure gold brought up from the bottom of the Sacred Well.

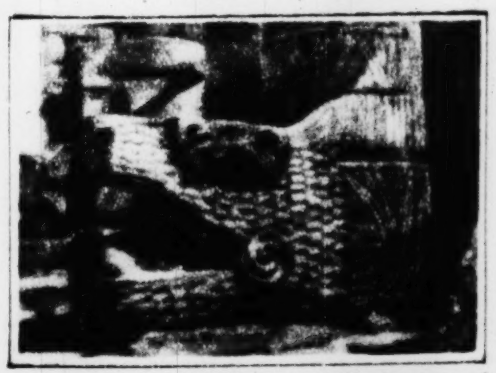
PROBABLY the worry is deeper than appears on the surface as the former Consul toys with his "symbols" and relates the story of how he happened to become an archeologist. While he talks, there is observed a conspicuous loyalty to the Yucatan natives, among whom he lived and worked so long. Whatever may be his views toward the Mexican Government, he will speak no ill of the natives. For this bond of affection he has a symbol, too. It is a handsomely tanned snakeskin. It symbolizes the trust they placed in him as "Don Eduardo" when they made him their tribesman and high priest. It was at a ceremony in which he received his oath of high office that he first wore the snakeskin as a girdle, and he has kept it in memory of his native friends. The girdle and his other symbols—the arrowheads, the copper bells and the little piece of jade—are all he has kept for himself out of the collection he brought from the ruins.

It was early in life that Edward Thompson determined upon a career of archeological research. Almost before he knew what an archeologist was. As a boy he used to take delight in searching for arrowheads and other relics of the Indians on his father's farm. One day he found an unusually fine specimen of an Indian ax. He took it to a local scientific society and somebody there told him that he ought to become an archeologist. He wasn't quite sure what that was, but if it had to do with hunting for relics it was just what he wanted. He was an archeologist from then on.

He was an engineering student at Worcester Technical Institute when he first attracted the attention of the scientific world and won an opportunity to explore the ruins of the Mayas. He wrote an article entitled "Atlantis Not a Myth," which was published in the Popular Science Monthly. This article advanced the theory that the ancient Maya civilization of Mexico and Central America was a lopped-off branch of a parent civilization stem. The parent stem, he suggested, might have been that civilization of which the priests of Egypt had told Plato, the civilization which, according to their traditions, had existed on the great continent of Atlantis, to the west of Gibraltar. This great land body, legends related, had sunk in one day and night beneath the waves of the Atlantic Ocean. How far west it had originally extended, no one knew.



The Maya "Rosetta Stone," furnishing a key to the Maya hieroglyphics.



Two serpent heads which guard the doorway of the Tiger Temple. Each is cut from a block of stone weighing several tons.

The writing of this article "was a concrete example of a fool rushing in where angels feared to tread," Thompson declared in telling of the incident, but it served at least to attract the notice of a group of eminent scientists, and eventually it resulted in the young student being invited by the officials of the Peabody Museum of Harvard University to go to Yucatan and explore the remains of the ancient civilization there. To give him official standing and to aid him in his work, President McKinley was induced to appoint him Consul to Yucatan, with the understanding that most of his time was to be devoted to scientific work. He went, and during the 30 years he spent there—25 of them as Consul and scientist and the last five devoted exclusively to archeology—he distinguished himself with the following notable accomplishments:

He contributed more information tending to establish the origin of these mysterious, early Americans than any other man.

He proved by laborious exploration of the Sacred Well of Chichen-Itza that the tradition of the Mayas regarding the sacrifice of human beings to their gods was fact.

He excavated a large number of tombs centuries old, including the burial place of a high priest, or ruler, and found there, in a grave so deep that five other graves had been placed above it as guards, the bones of the monarch, with a great number of articles of scientific value.

He discovered in the jungles half a dozen or more ruined cities, cities which no one but the natives had ever seen before, and he explored dozens of others which had been known to exist. Among these was Chichen-Itza, the Maya capital, which flourished before the birth of Christ and probably at one time had a population ranging from 200,000 to 1,000,000.

IT IS now largely upon the jade objects found in the ruins that Thompson relies for a clew to the original home of the Maya race. Since no jade has been found in its natural state in America, he holds the Mayas must have brought it from some other continent. That they regarded it as among their most cherished possessions is easy to see from its use as offerings to the rain god and from its lofty place in the temples. Their familiarity with it and their high appreciation of it would tend to show that the continent which was their first home was rich in jade. This would point to Asia as the original home of the Mayas, for only in some parts of China has been found jade to compare in richness with that possessed by the early races of Yucatan.

Thompson, therefore, defends the theory that all of the early races of America originated in Asia. He believes that there were numerous migrations, which probably extended over a period of several hundred years, and that the course by way of Bering Strait furnished the shortest and most practicable route, but that the crossing of the Pacific Ocean at points farther south may have been possible, as indicated by the fact that Chinese craft have been washed ashore on the coast of Mexico.

Not only the Mayas, but all the other early races of America came from Asia, according to Thompson's theory. It is logical, he says, to believe that the roving pioneers remained in America and developed either as barbarians or as highly civilized peoples, accordingly as their leaders and previous state of culture inclined them. The Mayas, through these particular influences, reached an extremely high state of civilization.

If legend is to be accepted as authentic—and Thompson's discoveries at the ancient well gave proof to the authenticity of many of these legends—there can be found reasons for the decline of the once flourishing empire. These stories tell of warring tribes which came upon the Mayas from the north, killing the leaders and subjecting the surviving natives to slavery and hardship. The years passed, with ruins added to ruins and conquerors mingling with conquered, until an entirely new type of native developed.

THERE are numerous, old traditions among the Mayas which indicate that the early leaders of their people came from far distant lands to the north and west of Yucatan. Certain features of the original Maya religion are similar to those in the religions of numerous Asiatic peoples, the sun god and the serpent having places of prominence in both. Types of Maya architecture bear unquestionable traces of Oriental influence, but whether these were brought by the original settlers themselves or carried in by peoples arriving later is a question as yet undetermined.

Probably the most conclusive bit of evidence to bear out Thompson's theory of Asiatic origin is the fact that the bones of the ancient Mayas have been found to be of the same identical structure as those of the early inhabitants of Tibet. This links so closely with the jade theory that Thompson's watch-charm symbol which he fondles so affectionately seems to take on a new significance. Perhaps, after all, it is not so much the symbol of a riddle as the symbol of a solution.

"TERRIBLE INDIGESTION BESIEGED ME after every meal. After trying all the home remedies, as well as many patent medicines and even starving myself, in vain, to cure my trouble, I began to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. Fifteen days afterward, I had only one very slight touch of indigestion and have not had a repetition since. That was five weeks ago. I am now a walking testimonial of what Yeast can do and did do in my particular instance."
C. H. Wortz, Jr., Fort Smith, Ark.

"WHEN MY LITTLE DAUGHTER WAS RUN DOWN Fleischmann's Yeast gave her strength and energy. Now she has perfect health, enormous vitality and her complexion is a joy to behold. She eats the Yeast as though it were chocolate. I also have obtained very satisfying results from Yeast when I was run down in health."
Mrs. C. A. Palmer, Brooklyn, N. Y.

...How's Your HEALTH?

Constipation, stomach and skin disorders can be banished—your whole life made happier—

by One Simple Food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active, daily releasing new stores of energy.

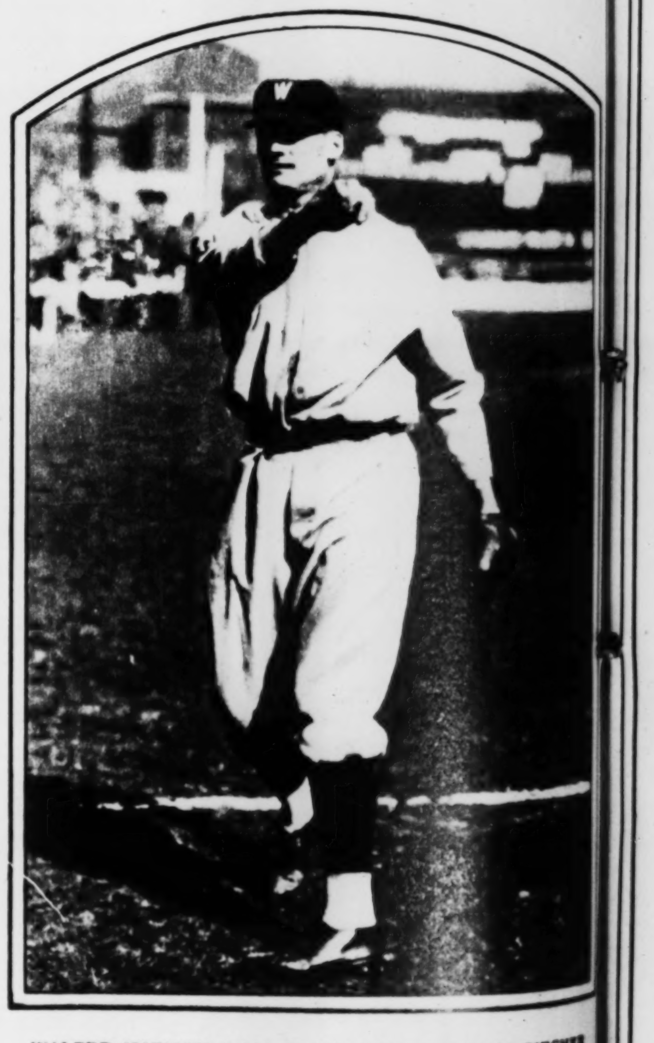
Eat two or three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers, in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, in small pieces. For constipation dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. Dangerous habit-forming cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-919, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"I WAS TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION. My life for three years as an aviator was a pretty hard one, as you can imagine. The food generally was not of the best and was usually gulped down in a hurry. With the constipation, my face broke out. Physics afforded but slight temporary relief. Finally I commenced taking Fleischmann's Yeast regularly. I had no more trouble. My face cleared and constipation became a thing of the past."
Alfonso Gomez Izquierdo, San Francisco, Calif.

EAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST FOR HEALTH

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.



WALTER JOHNSON, WORLD'S GREATEST BASEBALL PITCHER

"THE ONE THING a ball player must do is keep fit. For several years now, whenever I have felt out of condition or run down, I have used Fleischmann's Yeast—two to three cakes daily on bread or crackers. I find it tones up my system and gives me 'pep.' My wife and four of my children also use Fleischmann's Yeast to help them keep fit."
Walter Johnson, Washington, D. C.

VENICE IN ALL ITS GLORY

We all like the easiest way—

IT'S human nature to prefer the easiest way of doing things . . . Practically every important invention that has marked the progress of the times has been aimed at simplifying some job or other. Take the typewriter, the sewing machine, or any one of a hundred others that you think of.

We are constantly studying out new ways to make things easier to do; partly because we want to speed up, get more accomplished; but also—and this must not be overlooked—because we like to pamper ourselves. About a great many things, to be really honest, we're all fundamentally lazy.

And particularly, we're lazy about some of the small important things of life.

Even in that simple matter of brushing the teeth—a daily duty we owe to our own well-being—many of us are negligent.

At night we're tired; in the morning we're in a hurry.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made. It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing. Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.—By the way, Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.

This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.*

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts pyorrhea and tooth decay.

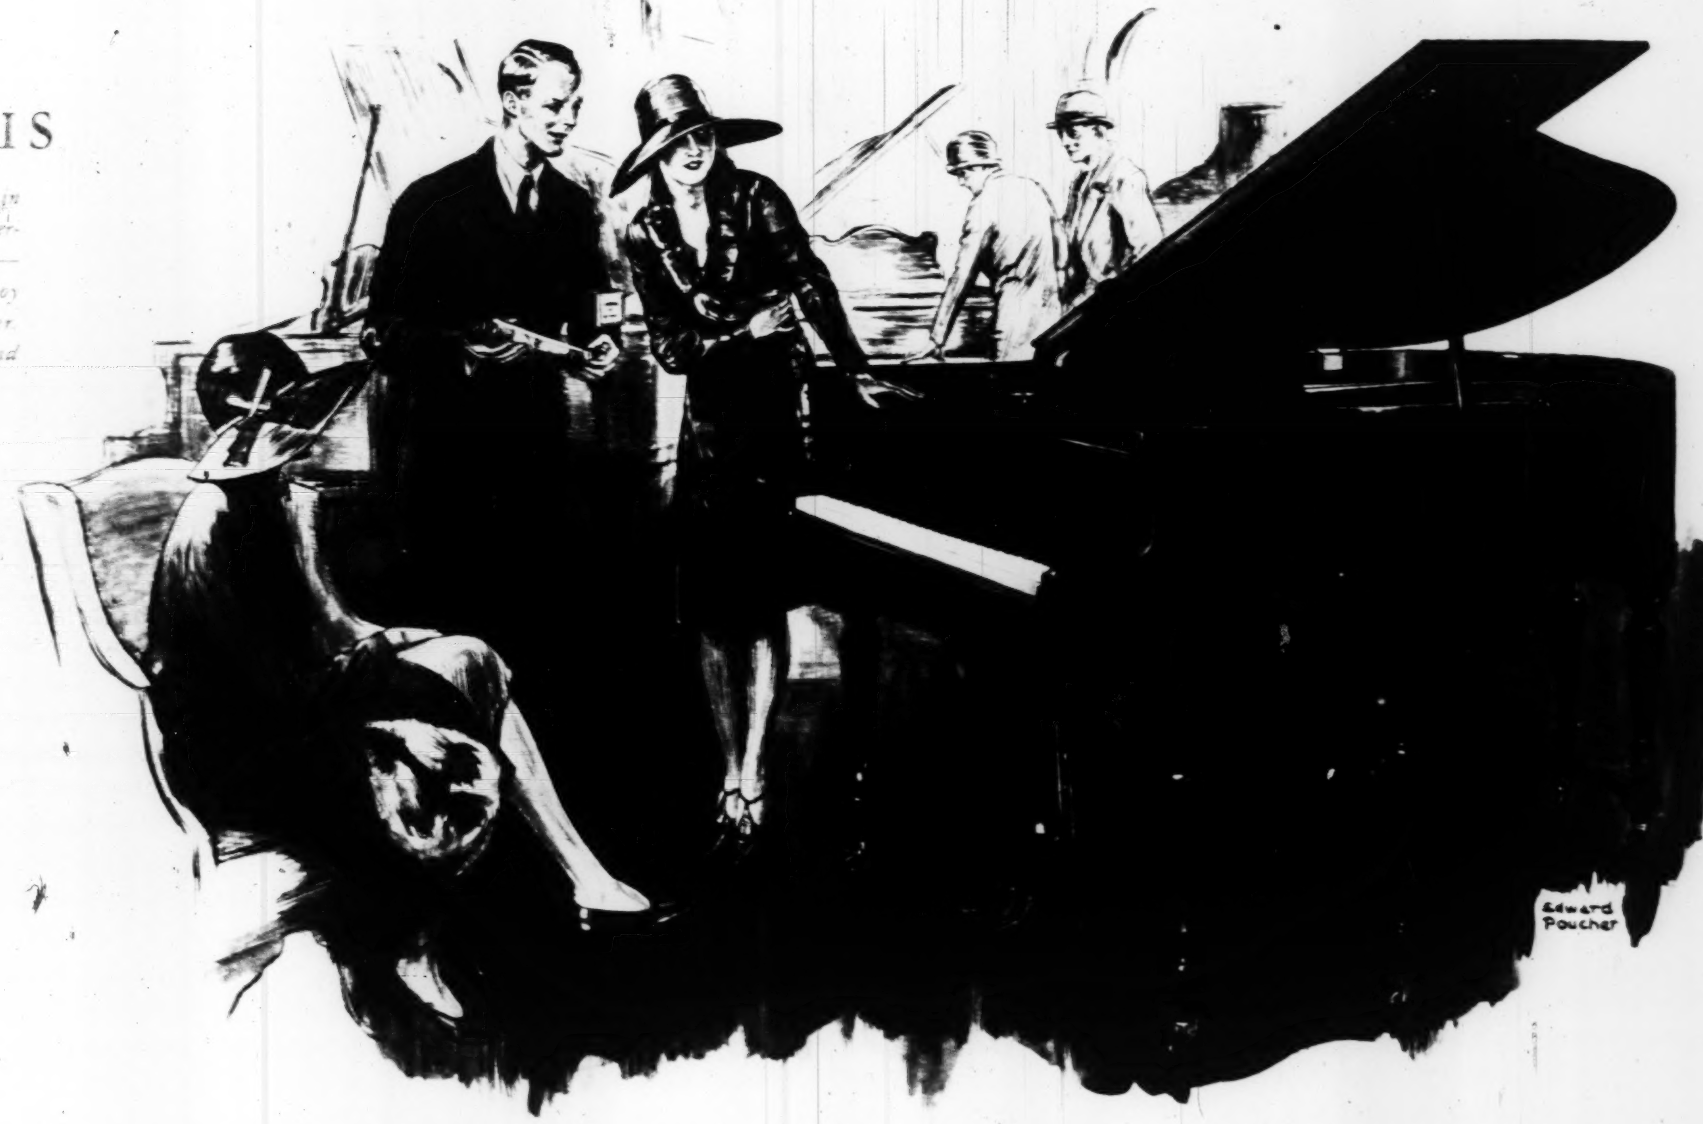
Luella gets her Duo-Art

SYNOPSIS

A little story of today in which a world-famous performer—the Duo-Art—first entices Luella's Boy Friend away from her. Then brings him back, and finally makes everybody happy.



CHARACTERS

Mrs. Perkins
Luella Perkins
Salesman
Mrs. Gilbert
Mr. Gilbert
John Gilbert

"Why, I never saw such a beautiful piano. It's lovely just as a piece of furniture."

ACT I

Scene—Gilbert home. Mrs. Perkins and daughter calling.

Mrs. P.: This room looks better somehow.

Luella: It's the new Duo-Art piano. Oh, Mom, why don't we buy one?

Mrs. P.: Sh—here's Mrs. Gilbert.

Mrs. G. (entering): Well, you folks are strangers. John will be sorry he didn't stay home tonight. Luella, why didn't you amuse yourself with the piano?

Mrs. P.: Oh, Luella can't play without her notes.

Mrs. G.: She could play this piano. If you don't want to use the keyboard, you simply put in a music roll and the piano does the rest—loud, soft, fast, slow, whatever you like.

Luella: I know John's nuts on the Duo-Art. Oh, Mom, why don't we buy one?

Mrs. P.: Sh—we have a beautiful piano, Luella.

Luella: Beautiful, but dumb, Mom. Jane's folks have a Duo-Art. It does everything but cook. It plays jazz, operas, the classics, just everything.

Mrs. G.: Mr. Gilbert likes best the song rolls with the words printed on them.

Mrs. P.: I didn't know your husband sang.

Mrs. G.: Neither did he. He just couldn't resist humming the words when he was playing the rolls and suddenly discovered he had a voice. Now everybody who comes in wants him to sing.

Luella: Oh, Mom, let's buy one! The crowd would come to our house if we had one. Now he—I mean they—go to Jane's.

Mrs. P.: Sh—Luella! I don't want another piano and if I did I can't afford it.

Mrs. G.: Oh, everybody can afford a Duo-Art. The Aeolian people are perfectly sweet about arranging payments to suit your convenience. They'll even make a wonderful allowance on your old instrument.

Luella: Oh, Mom, do buy one!

Mrs. P.: We must go. Tell John we haven't seen him for a long time.

Mrs. G.: When the boy gets home from work, he says nothing rests him like music and he just must have it.

ACT II

Scene—Aeolian ware-room. Mrs. Perkins and daughter interviewing a Salesman. The following day.

Mrs. P.: My daughter dragged me here, but frankly, I'm not going to buy. I'd like to get rid of the piano we have now. It simply doesn't belong in my living-room.

Salesman: Wouldn't a period piano solve the difficulty. I'd like to show you some.

Luella: Oh, Mom, look at this William & Mary model. Wouldn't it be perfect with those other English pieces:

Mrs. P. (thawing): Why, I never saw such a beautiful piano. It's lovely just as a piece of furniture.

Salesman (seating himself and running his fingers over the keys): It sounds just as beautiful as it looks. Have you ever heard the famous "Weber" tone before?

Mrs. P.: Why that is perfectly exquisite. It reminds me of a rich contralto voice—so deep and musical. (A pause) But we have a piano.

Salesman: The Company will make you a very generous allowance for your old instrument.

Mrs. P.: I'll admit I'm interested. Please tell me just what "Duo-Art" means and what it is.

Salesman: Duo-Art means "two arts"—your art and the art of others. Your art, because you can play the instrument yourself either by hand or with a music-roll that allows you to put in your own expression. Other's art because with special rolls, you can listen to the actual playing of great pianists like Paderewski, Hofmann and scores of others.

Mrs. P.: But is it really their playing? That doesn't seem possible.

Salesman: I'll admit it seems too wonderful to be true. But look at this. (Goes to cabinet and takes out a roll.) Here's Paderewski's "Minuet," interpreted by Paderewski himself. (Unwinds roll a little and shows a signed statement printed on it.) (Reads): "This music roll is my interpretation. It was recorded by me for the Duo-Art, and I hereby authorize its use with that instrument. (Signed) I. J. Paderewski."

Mrs. P.: That sounds convincing. May we hear the roll, and see if it does, also? I've heard Paderewski play this as an encore several times. (The roll is played. Both Mrs. Perkins and Luella listen raptly. At its close, Mrs. P. is manifestly deeply moved.)

Luella: Oh, Mom, isn't it gorgeous? Do let's get one.

Mrs. P.: May I use your telephone? Luella! I'm going to ask your father to take us to lunch and come back here with us afterwards.

Luella (rapturously): Oh, Mom, you dear.

ACT III

Scene—Interior Perkins home. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert calling a week later.

Mrs. G.: We hesitated about coming in.

Mr. G.: Yes, we didn't want to intrude on a party.

Mrs. P.: It's a party every night now since we got the Duo-Art. "The gang's all here."

Mrs. G.: Yes, John told us you had a Duo-Art.

Mr. G.: Oh, there's the young rascal now. I see he has on his favorite "Just a Wearvin' for you."

Mrs. P.: John sang it as a solo once this evening and Luella has just put it on again.

John (coming up): Hello, folks. You're just in time for a Charleston lesson. Line up!

Mrs. P.: They've even got me into it and I haven't danced in years. Somehow I find even I can dance when the Duo-Art plays. You see the dance beat comes in the right place and not where some good-natured player who really wants to dance puts it. Oh, there're the Browns coming in. Excuse me a moment.

Luella (approaching): Good evening. You people ought to have come earlier. Paderewski, Bauer, Grainger, Hofmann and all the great players were our guests. At least we had their magic finger work even if we couldn't see them.

John: Yeah, you missed the grand concert. We always have one before we dance. I'm beginning to know the difference now between Debussy and Berlin.

Luella (softly): I'm so glad you and Mr. Gilbert have come. I'm so happy!

Mr. G.: Yes, a Duo-Art does make a difference, doesn't it?

John: We were just getting ready to ask you to give us your Duo-Art for a wedding present.

Mrs. G.: A wedding! Why you blessed children!

Mr. G.: You can have John, young woman, but you can't have my Duo-Art!

Luella: How funny! That's just what Mom said. She said she'd give me up, but nothing on earth could make her give up her Duo-Art.

John (impudently): Well, they haven't stopped making Duo-Arts, have they?
